"Laughter" and "Saps" Get $13,500 In Seattle Runs

Seattle—Like the stockmarket, local theatre grosses hit "new lows" during the week just concluded, or, rather, six days, for most of the first run houses changed programs one day early this week because of the Thanksgiving holiday. "Laughter" at the Paramount probably took the palm for the week with a gross of $13,500. About the same gross was registered at the Fox Fifth Avenue, where "Only Saps Work" and a Fanchon-Marco stage unit were equally featured.

Aleograph Infringement Suit vs. Erpi Dismissed

San Antonio—Suit filed by the Aleograph Co. of America, a local concern, against Electrical Research Products, charging infringement of disc patents, was dismissed by Judge Duval West in Federal Court, who ruled that Aleograph had failed to prove any infringement. In the suit the Texas company had asked for an accounting of profits, the amount of which was undetermined but which estimates placed as high as $50,000,000.

Judge West denied a motion by attorneys for Erpi that the Aleograph patent be declared void. Counsel for Aleograph are undecided as to whether an appeal will be taken.

R-K-O Circuit Goes In for Give-Aways

Chicago—RKO tie-up with the Chicago Evening American to plug business for "Sin Takes a Holiday," current at the State-Lake, is reported to have been successful. Paper solicited 50-word letters on the subject, "Can Marriage for Money Bring Happiness," and awarded $100 in cash prizes and free tickets to the State-Lake for the best letters. RKO, naturally, put up the prizes. Contestants were expected to view the picture to obtain ideas.

Just another instance of the circuits doing what they tried to prevent independents from doing in the rejected protection plan for the city.

"Derelict" with $42,500 Leader Of Boston Pack

Boston—Business slowed up as the week advanced and, coupled with a severe storm the latter part, showed a considerable decline over former weeks in spite of the usual holiday crowds. But for the holiday, the week would have been a real disappointment at all the theatres.

Metropolitan with "Derelict" did only a fair business with a gross of $42,500. Both RKO houses did a fair business, with "Sin Takes a Holiday" at the Keith Memorial holding up sufficiently well to cause it to be held over for next week and grossing $20,500, while "Pay Off" at the Keith-Boston under the new four-show policy dropped to $18,500.

"Min and Bill" at Loew's State was a bright spot in the horizon and did a gross of $21,000. "Remote Control" at Loew's Orpheum was good for $22,000, which was a little less than average.

Paramount's houses did little better than average. The Scollay Square with "Doorway to Hell" grossed $13,500 while "Feet First" playing day and date at the Olympia and Uptown after a week at the Metropolitan were tabulated at a total of $24,000.

"Big Trail" Not Hot at $10,000 In Des Moines

Des Moines—With "The Big Trail" as the biggest current attraction, playing at the Des Moines for a week, "The Cat Creeps" at the Orpheum proved an exceptionally good draw. On the first half of the week this picture did business 20 per cent above average. "Tol'able David" did tol'able well.

At the Strand "Up the River" and "The Widow from Chicago" split the week with the latter getting slightly the better box-office, considering that it ran the three days. Weather was cold.

"Scotland Yard" Grabs $22,000 For Mpls. First

Minneapolis — The Pantages eased back into the Minneapolis scene during the week after a postponed opening, shooting a straight picture program without vaudeville. The use of "Once a Gentleman" for the event caused scarcely a ripple although a $4,000 gross is about the average take of the house.

The opening hit into a tough week from the competition standpoint, going against better than average business at the Minnesota, where "Scotland Yard" did $22,000, at the RKO Orpheum, which took $18,500 with "Tol'able David," and the State, which did an easy $8,000 with "The Big Trail."

"Feet First" at the Century put close to $8,500 into its 1640 seats with ease, but did not hold over as had patently been expected. "Hell's Angels" will go into this house during the coming week with "Tom Sawyer" receiving the newspaper editorial play as an attraction at the big Minnesota. The State will use "The Life of the Party" and the RKO Orpheum, "Sin Takes a Holiday." Pantages will counter with "The Third Alarm."

"Scarlet Pages" Get $28,225 to Win Cincy Lead

Cincinnati—"Scarlet Pages" at the RKO Albee, plus Moran and Mack heading the stage sector of the bill, got top money for the week, showing a gross of $28,225 in the final check-up.

The RKO Lyric didn't make box-office history with "Abraham Lincoln," despite a clever tie-up which was generously publicized by stories and art in the dailies, plus the fact that the feminine lead was portrayed by a local girl. The house broke practically even with the previous week.

"Derelict," at RKO Palace, showed a considerable improvement over the week before. Showing of a locally-made film depicting activities of a popular local kiddies' club was an additional draw.

"Her Man" suffered somewhat of a sinking spell at RKO Capitol, and the picture, for some unaccountable reason, went below normal. Evidently the flaps didn't have this one on their "must see" list as they should.

The RKO Strand told 'em "The Truth About Youth," staging a tap dance contest as an added attraction, in which several local youths participated. The house had a healthy plus sign in its average, but a small minus symbol in comparison with previous week's gate.

"The Eyes of the World" saw a good first half at RKO Family, while "One Night at Susie's" proved a comparatively profitable event for the remaining three days.

Keith's had a good week with "Maybe It's Love."

Business which would normally accrue from the Thanksgiving holiday was undoubtedly affected to a more or less extent by the near-zero weather.

$15,500 Good for 'Tol'able David' in Omaha Slump

Omaha—Pre-holiday shopping rush and football took its toll, leaving the major houses with weakened grosses. A sudden drop in temperature also kept a lot of folks home, though November has been one of the balmiest in years.

"Tol'able David," backed by lots of flash in Count Berni Vici's girl act, brought the Orpheum $15,500. This is a tumble after several weeks in the neighborhood of eighteen and nineteen grand, but still a money-making seven days.

"Renegades," last half at the State, hit par for $2,500. The flop of the week was "Sunny" at the Paramount, which grossed only $6,800. Town is sick of musical pictures, and the bookers are more wary than ever.

"Playboy of Paris" got $10,450 with a strong stage bill. This is okay considering the six day run, due to a shift of opening day from Friday to Thursday. "Sea Legs," first three days at the State, was lucky to bring $2,025. Oakie's been overplayed here.

Norma's $9,000 Sets B. O. Pace in Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City—Paced by Norma Talmadge's "DuBarry, Woman of Passion" at the Publix Criterion, theatres did average business. The Talmadge film accounted for $9,000 at the box-office for a slightly above the average week. "The Silver Horde" took in $8,000 at the Publix Capitol, which was slightly above normal. # "Sunny" Big at Philly, Leading On $49,500 Take Philadelphia — With the aid of the Thanksgiving holiday, grosses in Philadelphia jumped ahead of average, in some cases striking a high mark for the season.

With "Sunny" as the feature, the Mastbaum clicked to $49,500, its highest figure in at least five months. "Hell's Angels" grabbed $19,000 for the week at the Aldine, aided by an extra Thanksgiving matinee, while "Feet First" took $20,000 at Keith's. "Renegades" clicked through with a better-than average week with a strong $29,000.

"Mother's Cry," originally due for two weeks at the Boyd, crashed at the end of the first, but managed to get $18,000, good average, but a poor first week for this house.

The Stanley's second week for "Half-Shot at Sunrise" grossed $19,000, while "Africa Speaks," moved into the Stanton on a grind policy and beat its road show showing at the Aldine with a $12,000 on the week.

'Maybe It's Love' Skids to $9,000 For Denver Low

Denver—The Denver, with stage shows and higher prices, usually tops the list and this week was no exception, but the stage show was the drawing card, and with Ted Mack as master of ceremonies, went over big. Third anniversary week for the house and cake and coffee were served, and a car, fur coat and radio were given to lucky number holders.

"Tom Sawyer" drew the youngsters all week to the Paramount and, of course, brought a large number of grown-ups with them. More than 4,000 children saw this picture on Saturday alone. Katherine Kaderly and Eloise Rowan, as the Jackie and Jean twins on the Paramount organs, are building up a large following here and their presentation, "Thanksgiving Menu," was one of the best they have given.

"Maybe It's Love" at the Tabor sent that house to a new low for the four weeks Huffman has had it, but still the figure was good.

Baltimore Runs In SRO Business; 'Min and Bill' High

Baltimore—It was clear and cold here and, with a couple of exceptions, first-runs were only slightly off during the first three days, but during the latter half of the week, beginning with Thanksgiving Day, the S. R. O. sign had to go up.

Backed by a large slice of the national newspaper advertising appropriation, "Min and Bill" went over the top and brought a gross of $29,000 into the till of Loew's Stanley. Extra exploitation was arranged on this and with Beery and Dressler well liked here, anyhow, business was phenomenal.

Next was Loew's Century, with William Haines, another Baltimore favorite, doing his stuff in "Remote Control," and the stage unit, "Off Shore," the revenue being estimated at $26,000, which was way over the top for this house.

"Sin Takes a Holiday," with Constance Bennett, another prime favorite here, Basil Rathbone, who was in person at Ford's in a play, and Kenneth MacKenna, formerly in stock here, proved a winner at the Rivoli with the gross being estimated at $9,200, which was a good deal over the high mark.

"The White Hell of Pitz Palu," offered at the Little, with its 267 seats, minus the lecture by Graham McNamee, started off badly, but gradually built to a whale of a business, this house registering $1,350 at the B. O.

At Keith's, "Morocco" proved a good attraction, doing a business estimated at $7,200. This picture was somewhat too high-class for the masses, they seemingly not understanding the nuances and subtleties of the performance. Splendidly done, however, and Marlene Dietrich receiving encomiums of praise.

During its second week at the New, "Just Imagine" was a little weak at the start, but rose into the heavy sugar class before the end of the six days. The gross was figured at $10,000. This is a picture with strong audience appeal for high and low class. Should go big in any type of house.

'Angels' Breaks K. C. Record; 'Tom Sawyer' Held Over

Kansas City—First runs as a whole enjoyed the best week in many months, with the Midland, showing "Hell's Angels," hitting the bull's-eye for a house record. The air picture grossed $29,000, which is almost double the average intake.

Second honors went to the Royal, where "Tom Sawyer" played to excellent business all week, rolling up a gross of $6,000, which is several notches above normal business. Picture was held for a second week.

"Oh Sailor Behave" gave the Uptown a good week, getting $6,900, which is better than average. "Tol'able David" boosted the Mainstreet business slightly above average, taking in $15,750. The Newman grossed $12,500 on "Derelict," which is an average figure, while the Pantages had a normal week with "Africa Speaks," which registered $10,000 at the box-office.

The Warner Orpheum, now showing second runs, will be remodeled to handle vaudeville and units, it was announced.

"Hell's Angels" Chi Sensation; Grabs $34,100

Chicago—One of the poorest business weeks of the year was recorded in the Loop with only one house in the money, several in the red and the balance just barely able to make the pay-off. The sensation was the United Artists with "Hell's Angels," which had them waiting to get in all week, and boosted its total with an extra midnight show Thanksgiving Eve and splendid business over the holiday. Gross was a magnificent $34,100. The competition afforded by this picture was felt all over the Loop, but was particularly tough on the Oriental and Woods, neighboring houses. Both theatres were obliged to change programs at the end of six days in an effort to get people inside.

Oriental's six days collected only $23,400, a disastrous figure. "The Bad Man" (F. N.) was the feature. Woods found the going almost as tough, collecting only $8,500 in its six days with "Only Saps Work" (Paramount). The picture started fairly well, but after two days of this "Angels" opened across the street, and the Paramount picture didn't have a chance thereafter. Also caught in the sliding grosses was the State-Lake, with the Spoor-Berggren wide-film version of "Danger Lights" (Radio), which had provided the Loop's competition during the preceding week. Once past the week-end, the big picture fell off abruptly and had to be replaced Thanksgiving Day after a 12-day total. Final five days were worth only $15,600. Orpheum was also forced to replace "Widow from Chicago" (F. N.) after two days of a second week netted a miserable $1,180. The rest of the Loop was little better off with snow and zero temperature finishing what the competition had started.

Estimated takings:

UNITED ARTISTS—(1,700), 35c-85c, first week. Other attractions: News, fable, song short. A new house record at this price scale. Its competition hurt everything. Gross: $34,500.

"ONLY SAPS WORK" (Paramount)

WOODS—(1,166), 35c-75c, 6 days. Other attractions: News, cartoon, musical short. Picture couldn't finish the week. "Angels" competition felt tremendously here. Gross: $8,500. "Today" (Majestic) replaced and opened at a fair $2,000-a-day average for the first four days.

Let's Get Organized

A case of cockeyed love.

"Big Money" and Marx Bros. Get Cleve Big Money

Cleveland—The worst Thanksgiving blizzard in 50 years put a bad crimp in box-office averages for the week. Unusually heavy snowfall and a sudden drop in temperature to the zero mark kept most of the population at home. Street car traffic was severely crippled. In addition, the automobile club warned car owners to leave their autos in garages except in cases of necessity, as streets were blocked with snow and there was danger of freezing. The Four Marx Brothers, appearing in person at the RKO Palace with "Big Money," succeeded in drawing what, under the circumstances, may be called big business, but there was under-average business at the other downtown houses, which is no reflection on the pictures exhibited, but just an expression of self-preservation on the part of the public.

Give Thanks in Providence for Great Business

Providence—Turkey and the fixin's failed to keep Providence theatregoers at home over Thanksgiving, all downtown showmen reporting great business. An unusual array of attractions likewise helped, the four big houses exploiting corking bills.

Loew's State came through handsomely with "War Nurse," grabbing off $21,500. The surprise of the week came with the RKO Albee's holding over "Sin Takes a Holiday," which caught on handsomely with critics and public. The gross was $14,000. Winnie Lightner in "Life of the Party" at the Majestic, did well and "Extravagance," RKO Victory, was above normal.

Jackie Coogan and his little pals in "Tom Sawyer," Paramount, did well with a gross of close to $13,000.

"Virtuous Sin" Is Only Bright Spot in Ottawa

Ottawa—There were no raves among the attractions at Ottawa theatres during the week. "Up the River" at Keith's should have been "Down the River" when the box-office is considered, while "Feet First" with Harold Lloyd took a slide at the Regent after an encouraging start. "Abraham Lincoln" at the Centre was admittedly a mighty fine picture and all who saw it were unanimous on that point, but receipts of $2,600 were less than half netted during the first week of "Whoopee" at the Centre. A great many passed up Walter Huston in "Lincoln" to see Walter Huston in "The Virtuous Sin" during the last half at Keith's, where the returns of $3,900 for the three days were good. Incidentally, the power service failed at most theatres on Friday night and that did not help. The first cold snap of the winter swept the town at mid-week and plenty stuck to the fireside.

Estimated takings:

"FEET FIRST" (Paramount)

REGENT — (1,225), 25c-35c-45c-50c-60c-75c, 6 days. Other attractions: News, orchestra, "Ham Berger and His Horse Radish" (Columbia), "Camera Trails" (Paramount). Gross: $3,800. Only fair.

Kiddies Getting More Attention at Ottawa

Ottawa—More attention is being paid to juvenile patronage by exhibitors in Ottawa. For a Saturday matinee P. J. Nolan of the Avalon offered an added treat in a special feature, "Black Waters," featuring Rin-Tin-Tin, which followed the regular attraction, "King of Jazz." The program included an Our Gang comedy, "When the Wind Blows." For some weeks, Nolan has featured the "Avalon Kiddie Club" for the Saturday matinees, the young patrons using a membership card which entitles them to a free admission after they pay to see ten shows.

Kid Restriction Omitted On "Scarlet Pages"

Ottawa—When "Scarlet Pages" had its first run at the Centre a month ago, admission was restricted to those over 18 years of age. For its second run at the Avalon there was no age limit and the high school flappers, noting the omission of the powers-that-be, grabbed the chance.

British Films Increase

London—Two hundred and eighty-one American and 29 British films were trade shown in England during 1929. So far this year, 352 American and 77 British films were given trade showings. The combined total by the end of the year is expected to approximate 500.

Poor B. O. Week In Toronto, but Stage Unit Helps

Toronto—"Jewels," the first of the Paramount-Publix road units, helped to brighten things considerably at the Imperial and receipts hit $17,000, but not up to the box-office total of the previous week, when Helen Kane was present in person. Heading the film bill was "Laughter." The Uptown regained some of its old-time glory with the new policy of first-runs instead of second-run split weeks. "Feet First" started the new regime, but failed to be a sensation at $11,500 at 65c top. "The Big Trail" lasted only a week at the Tivoli with $12,000, while the Hippodrome ran into the red with "Danger Lights" at the same figure, which was considerably below normal. Loew's maintained its popularity with "Good News," although this was down to $15,000 at that. Wintry blasts and professional hockey hurt patronage generally.

Estimated receipts:

"LAUGHTER" (Paramount)

IMPERIAL—(3,600), 25c-35c-50c-65c-75c, 6 days. Other attractions: News, Paramount Publix unit, "Jewels," band, orchestra. Gross: $17,000. Normal.

Uptown, Toronto, Drops Starvation Second Runs

Toronto—After less than three months of a starvation second-run policy, the Uptown, seating 3,000 and formerly the home theatre of the Famous Players chain, Monday went back to a first-run status, with "Feet First." Thomas S. Daley, recently in Halifax, has taken over management of the Uptown, Robert Knevils returning to Hamilton, Ont., to become manager of the Tivoli.

It is now a first-run policy throughout at the Uptown, but there are no stage presentations or orchestra as anticipated. Programs will run for a week or more, as contrasted with the previous split-week plan.

Adopts Film Policy

Hamilton, Ont.—"The Big House" was the first film attraction at the Palace, following the dropping of vaudeville by Manager Stroud. Programs are changed every Saturday.

"Raffles" Tops Montreal with $14,500; Is Held

Montreal—The Capitol and the Princess had a corner on excitement in Montreal during the week. At the Capitol, Helen Kane on the stage and the first real Paramount Publix stage unit boosted patronage to the box-office total of $18,000, which was excellent. The screen feature, "Little Accident," was a side issue. At the Princess, Ronald Colman in "Raffles" was popular to the extent of $14,500—good enough for a hold-over. The Palace struck a snag with "Check and Double Check," reaping only $13,500. Apparently Montreal people do not know who Amos 'n' Andy are. Loew's continued in the dumps with "Last of the Lone Wolf," but the latter was little worse than half a dozen recent attractions. Winter and Santa Claus arrived simultaneously and the combination of cold blasts, Christmas shopping and professional hockey made a difficult nut for the main stem exhibitors to crack.

Estimated takings:

"LITTLE ACCIDENT" (Universal)

CAPITOL—(2,670), 25c-35c-40c-50c-65c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: News, Helen Kane in person, "Birds of a Feather," Paramount Publix stage unit. Gross: $18,000. On the up.

2 Minutes to Empty Theatre in Fire Drill

Ottawa—A real fire drill was staged at the Francais when, in the presence of government and newspaper representatives, an audience of 1,100 children was instructed to leave the theatre as quickly and orderly as possible. The house was emptied in less than two minutes by official watches, without incident.

Keeps Home Trade

Cobourg, Ont. — When merchants here complained that local people were going to the nearby town of Port Hope to attend the new Capitol there, A. E. Cauley, manager of the local Capitol, decided upon a complete remodelling. A new Western Electric system has been installed, as well as a new heating unit, and now all is well in Cobourg once more.

Terra Cotta for Color In 'Lifting Faces' Of Old Theatres

REMODELED THEATRE WITHOUT MODERN EQUIPMENT IS A JOB ONLY HALF COMPLETED

By J. HARRY TOLER
In Collaboration with Elmer F. Behrns

Facade of DeKalb at DeKalb, Ill., Designed by Elmer Behrns. Outstanding Example of Practical Modernity in a medium Sized Town. Floodlights from Canopy Top Are Used for Night "Punch"

FOLLOWING the original plan of sequence in our expressions of opinion and relation of facts on theatre remodeling for the medium and small sized theatre, we will now discuss the theatre front, or facade—that part of the house that must face the public and make its strongest appeal for patronage. First impressions are always—or at least quite generally—the most important ones under any consideration and particularly is this true in the case of the theatre. Therefore, in contemplating a course of beauty treatment for the theatre whose attractiveness has succumbed to the ravages of time, "face lifting" becomes quite an important part of the prescribed treatment. Aside from this "first impression" appeal there is a more practical side of the question to be taken into consideration, but even so, this does not to any extent diminish the importance of an impressive theatre front. even of small houses.

The practical theatre front is one that allows easy access to the interior, unimpeded passageway to the ticket windows and the efficient, considerate handling of the crowds. Utility should always combine with attractiveness. In cases where a particular design or treatment can be had only by sacrificing utility and public convenience, there should be no hesitancy about altering the design for the sake of practicability. Usually, however, there is no good reason for conflict between beauty and utility, if good common sense is allowed to govern the formulation of plans.

Then comes consideration of economy in the treatment of the theatre to be remodeled. True economy consists of getting the utmost of this combination of beauty, utility and genuine value for the money to be spent for services and materials. This can usually be accomplished by selecting a capable, experienced architect-engineer, a conscientious contractor, a reliable equipment dealer and cooperating with each and every one of them fully in carrying out the plans as outlined by all factors for the most efficient and economical manner of completing the remodeling assignment.

Obviously it would be most difficult to advocate a particular design or motif for a theatre facade that would suit all tastes or harmonize with all local conditions. We shall not attempt that. The facade design of the average theatre in the large, small or medium sized town should adapt itself readily to its surroundings. The adjacent buildings, the location of the site, and the shape of the tract on which the structure is located all have an influence on the selection of design to be carried out. The new front must "stand out" without actually clashing with its neighborhood surroundings. But irrespective of its style or type it must be strictly theatrical in character. Period designs are popular, and of these period patterns, there remain distinctively for theatre use, such styles as Egyptian, Chinese, Italian Renaissance and several others. Grecian, Ionic, Gothic, et. al., are of such common adoption in the more conservative commercial and institutional fields, that their selection for the theatre is to be avoided. Certain sections of the country, particularly neighborhood centers seem to have individual preference for distinct architectural types. Old English for example, predominates in certain localities, while Spain and Italy have their following in others. These trends must not be overlooked in deciding on a style for the new theatre front, in which romance, imagination and always a certain degree of illusiveness must play their parts to secure a theatrical aspect.

Upon determination of architectural style, the next factor is lighting.

Lighting and highlighting with colors now play a most prominent part in theatre out-door advertising. A marquee with changeable illuminated letter program boards tells the man on the street what is going on within or coming later. A large theatre name sign with flashing ornamenta-

Practicability

THIS is another installment in the series of discussions on theatre remodeling written by J. Harry Toler, president of Toler-Dunbar Agency, Chicago. Pertinent facts upon which these articles are based were supplied by Elmer F. Behrns, theatre architect, Chicago.

Behrns insists that mere architectural beauty without support of practical utility is not, never was and never will be good practice.

Concentrating on "beauty culture in theatre re-construction," this article gives the lowdown on the most efficient and economic manner of "lifting the face" of the superannuated theatre.

Keep Eagle-Eye on Equipment, from Boilers To Projectors, for Complete B. O. Success

SIMPLE PLAN TO AID EXHIBITORS IN OBTAINING LONG LIFE FROM CARPETS, UNIFORMS, FRAMES, CHANGE MACHINES, MOTORS AND OTHER EQUIPMENT

By "CHICK" LEWIS

Chairman, "Managers' Round Table Club" of Motion Picture News

SO MUCH has been written on the subject of showmanship as it applies to exploitation and advertising, and generally merchandising the picture, that this phase of exhibition seems to have been covered from practically every angle. On the other hand, the employment of showmanship inside the theatre, a factor equally as important in the final analysis of box office success, has passed almost unnoticed.

By the term, showmanship inside the theatre, we want to convey the thought that it is just as important to practice showmanship within the four walls of the auditorium as it is to ballyhoo pictures on the exterior. Of what possible use would a smash feature be if your equipment to project it were on the bum? Or the facilities for making your patrons comfortable during the show were lacking? Why go out and plug like hell for business if your theatre and it's equipment are not in perfect condition at all times?

System the Secret of Success

Keeping the theatre's equipment in tip-top shape all of the time is merely a matter of organization and system. By this we mean laying out the various parts of the theatre and placing them under the supervision of a responsible employee. Then checking up periodically to make sure that those responsible are looking after their assignments properly.

Some years ago, the writer inaugurated a system of equipment maintenance which worked so effectively that it eliminated, completely, all semblance of haphazard operation from the equipment viewpoint. Of course, you must keep in mind that a thorough understanding of every part of the theatre and its equipment facilities is essential before you can transfer any part of the responsibility onto the shoulders of another.

One of the initial duties of a manager after taking over a house is to acquaint himself with his theatre. Just sitting down at the manager's desk and directing the house from a swivel chair will soon cause plenty of grief. To understand all about the theatre means to spend several mornings a week investigating every detail of it, especially the various portions which are exposed to wear and tear.

The Double-Check Process

Let us assume that your's is an average theatre, a house seating anywhere from one to three thousand. (Smaller theatres can work out this plan by revamping it to fit their requirements.) Under the projectionist's care you should place the following items (unless your house carries a union maintenance man back stage): Flasher motors, all switchboards, ventilating motors and all other electric motors regardless of where they are located; all parts of the booth, sound and projection equipment.

The Janitor-Engineer: Boiler room, toilets, cellars, seats, roofs, hanging ceiling, marquee roof, carpets. The Assistant Manager: Carpets, seats, ushers' dressing rooms, stock rooms, closet, lobby frames, front frames, marquee and upright signs, manager's office. Cashier: Box office, ticket machines, change machines. Head Usher: Usher's rooms, uniforms, gloves, etc., carpets, seats, lamps in all signs and inside fixtures. Doorman: Ticket box, lobby floors, sidewalks in front of house, frames in lobby. All glass in lobby and front.

You will note that a few items are included on the list of more than one person. The reason is obvious. It means a double or triple check on important items which might escape the attention of one alone. For example, the carpets and seats. The janitor-engineer should watch for wear and tear of these items while the house is being cleaned; he can then report what needs attention or, in the case of tightening here and there, take care of it immediately. The head usher should make his check-up before the house opens to the pub-

MODERN AMERICAN DECORATIONS ARE SUGGESTED FOR NEW STRUCTURES AND REMODELING JOBS IN MINIMIZED COST PLAN ADVANCED BY EBERSON

By JOHN EBERSON

Theatre Architect

WE ARE passing through an economic evolution, and since the peoples of the world have been drawn so close to each other with the development of transportation and communication, world wide observations and experiences quickly come to us in most illustrating and educating fashion. This holds true in the theatre, with the showman, the artist, the projectionist and sound expert; and, last but not least, the theatre architect. They all play a greater part and occupy a more conspicuous position in the eye of the public at large than ever before.

Very plainly can we see the trend of private life and business affecting complete readjustment, brought about by natural causes and world wide actions, and reaching every human being, every household, every line of business endeavor. Personally, I welcome this tendency towards the reduced standard of living, which eventually will lead to a more sane and sound order of business.

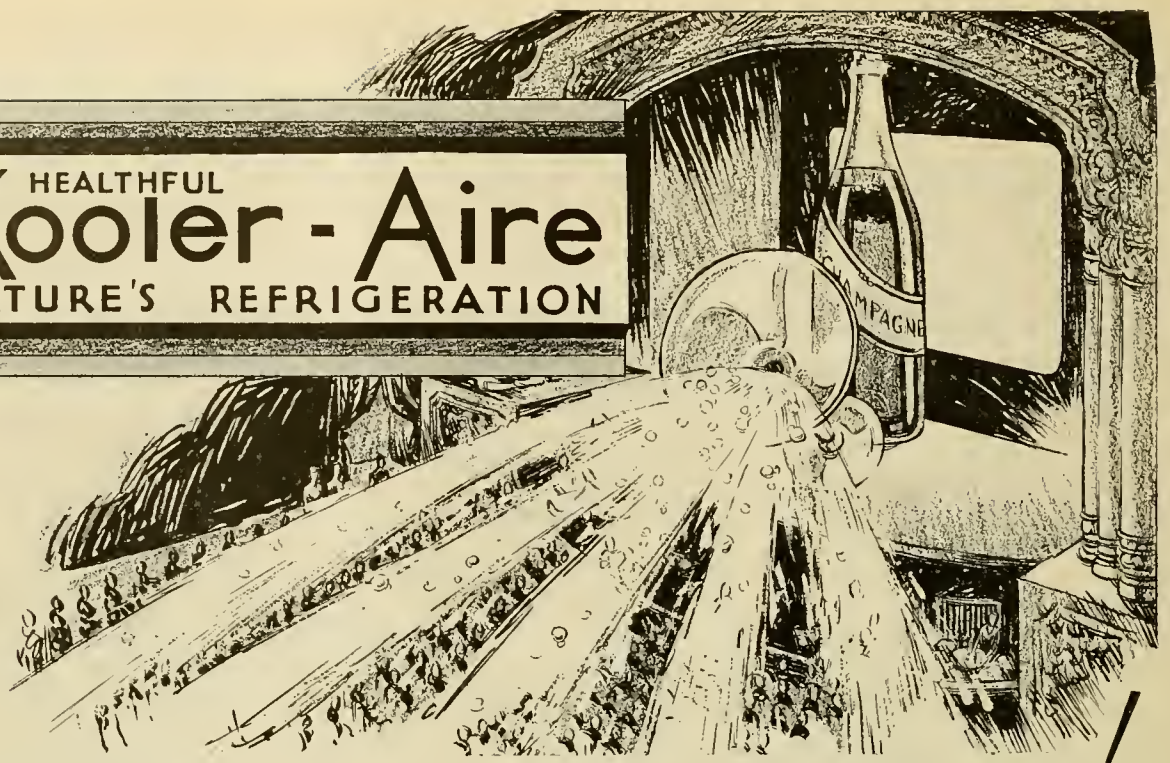
JOHN EBERSON

In the service of the motion picture industry, a theatre architect, like all others, must take this change of affairs into deep consideration, and I for one am willing to throw away the garish toga of gold, glitter and extravagancy, and take the mallet and steel chisel and carve available rock into sturdy form of simple beauty and eternal dependability.

Riding on the crest of intense action, and flushed with the excitement of keen competition, great men push forward, breathless and heedless, carrying the banner of progress and success, without time to reflect and calculate. Here and there and everywhere, in an orgy of extravagancy and fired by personal ambition, costly and elaborate giant theatre structures have arisen, all prompted by the courage of the men who caused them to be built, in turn aided by the thought of the artful architect and by the skill of the artisan and builder.

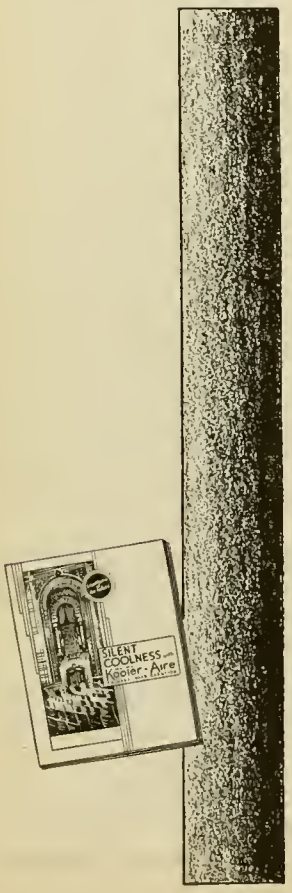
Large and larger theatres spring up everywhere—all monumental structures, palatial interiors, lavishly bedecked in elaborate gold and crystals. Comparatively, 20 years of progress and development has been cramped into three years, and the resultant effect forces one to believe that a saturation point has been reached in practically all of America's key cities. It has been the most rapid development in any industry. But, at last, we have reached a point of hesitancy and a turn towards the level and sanity becomes the order of the day.

With the same burst of speed and intensity, scientists, artists and shooters have developed product of unheard of value and interest. They have cared for, and well, our larger cities. Now we shall stop to gather strength to build up, in this era of progressiveness, the multitude of other cities and smaller communities which must be served with comparatively equal facilities for the presentation of motion pictures.



This small town nation-wide building expansion comes to the producer in a different garb, and must be treated in a skillful manner in order to properly serve this patronage and bring equitable returns to the box-office. It takes a good deal more skill than art to build small theatres which serve small communities successfully. Less skill is needed to build super de luxe theatres in the larger towns where one finds himself backed with practically limitless capital and building facilities. It is with this new small town development, therefore, that the practical theatre architect will find unusual opportunities to render real service.

Setting all dreams, fantasy (genuine or affected), knowledge and feeling of art aside, the theatre architect must be fully conscious of the relativity between the lavish architectural offering and the actual results and influence on business obtained by his architectural efforts.



We have, more or less, spoiled our public in this mad rush of competition; we have over-amused, over-serviced and overfed the patron until he has become blase, critical, spoiled and very hard to please.

Natural action, color and sound have replaced the silent film completely, as we all realize. And with this replacement comes a new era in theatre construction, gradually deviating from the beaten track of "supers." The success- (Continued on page 43)

OUR recently announced Theater Division offers a new world-wide service in equipment, installation and maintenance. It combines the years of pioneering, research, development and service of both the Carrier and the Brunswick organizations. We now offer the theater owner a full line of air conditioning and refrigeration equipment . . . whether for a theater of 500 or 5,000 seats. The equipment most economically suited to each individual house will be specified, on an unbiased basis.

This is of particular interest to the small house, which now may have complete air conditioning as a profitable investment . . . paying profits in increased patronage and good will, and meeting competition by offering atmospheric conditions as healthful and comfortable as those in the de luxe houses.

Within the Theater Division itself there will be new economies in research work, in installation, in offering a 24-hour-a-day maintenance service in principal cities. Abroad, too, our associated companies are offering the same installation and service facilities.

It will pay you to find out what complete air conditioning is doing today in hundreds of successful houses . . . what it can do for your theater or circuit. We suggest that you get in touch with any of our Theater Division offices listed below, or with any of our other branch offices.

ful showman in the silent era knew how badly the silent flicker and shadow drama needed the splendor of the auditorium and the refinement of service in order to properly introduce the silent film to the masses, and how well he knew how necessary it was to erect giant and elaborate structures to create, concentrate and hold the interest of the public for motion pictures. Eye comfort was all that was needed, plus the creation of palatial theatres in awing style for impressiveness.

Today, we have sound and action. We must provide eye and ear comfort. We are presenting problems and plays on the sound screen requiring utmost restfulness in the auditorium, so as to invite relaxation and concentration for the patron. "The play is the thing!"

For this new era, my thoughts run towards the creation of "warm" and "friendly" interiors, properly lighted, comfortably furnished — an auditorium with well balanced acoustics and efficient seating arrangements. Their brilliancy in lobby and foyer must reach a much higher scale of efficiency than at present.

Cost, naturally, is of prime importance. The provinces and small towns must be served with theatres which can be produced at minimum cost and still give to the exhibitor and the public an elegant and practical vehicle with which to conduct business and enjoy sound motion pictures.

More than 90 per cent of all construction work is labor. The farmer who permitted the lumberjack to cut down the magnificent oak on the farm received probably a few cents for the lumber in the tree that now is transformed into the magnificently carved oak hall chair, and, yet, the chair costs $250. No other item of value was added to the raw lumber, the difference in cost and value being practically all represented in labor. And this same factor holds true of other work in construction and furnishing. The cost of the raw material plays but a small part in the ultimate expense of the finished product, unless you build out of gaudy gold and silver.

It, therefore, behooves the sane thinking architect and constructor to devise ways and means to save labor in his building operations. This can be accomplished in the first place by proper economical use of standardized building materials, and the duplication of certain work, that is, permitting duplicates to be cast, formed, shaped or produced from one mold, or all on a multiple jig.

Standardization is the solution! You can produce ten theatres, all scaled for a lot approximately 80 x 150 feet in ten varied distant locations, on a standardized basis for a great deal less money and with more speed than if you were to design individually.

The specifications and requirements of the exhibitor and the standard practice of the projectionist and sound expert have been definitely established and have become known so as to enable the architect and builder to design several types of these standardized theatres for corresponding communities without having to feel that one has neglected the particular characteristics of a community.

The standardization of product and mass production has placed the general American industry in the foremost rank and has resulted in economies which allow the average person to come into the use and enjoyment of devices, apparatus and merchandise at very reasonable cost, thus bringing to a more even balance the possibilities for the rich and poor to enjoy similar comforts, pleasures and amusements.

The standardization of small theatre buildings will accomplish the same thing. It will give to producer and exhibitor a greater field in which to sell their wares, and on a more sound and profit-making basis than at present. It will place small communities in the position to see and hear fine entertainment in a comfortable theatre.

While it holds true that a convenient and advantageous location necessitates acquisition of real estate parcels in various sizes and shapes, it does not necessary follow that the builder

Publix installs more than 1/4 of a million H.W chairs

H-W PUBLIX DE LUXE THEATRE CHAIR

THE PUBLIX THEATRE CORPORATION has awarded its 3rd successive contract for theatre seats to the Heywood-Wakefield Company! In the past 3 years, this world-famous organization of showmen has installed more than one-quarter of a million H-W chairs in their houses throughout the United States. It is a distinct pleasure to receive the third straight contract from Publix not alone because of the large amount of business involved but because of the definite stamp of approval given to Heywood-Wakefield chairs by Publix officials and by the Publix Engineering and Maintenance Staffs.

During the recent years in which we have been working with Publix, many changes have occurred in theatre seating designs. Sound pictures, for instance, created a demand for new acoustical properties in theatre chairs. Guided by and cooperating with Publix engineers and technicians, Heywood-Wakefield has developed theatre chairs which accurately and perfectly meet sound requirements—chairs which are so modern, so luxuriously comfortable that Publix patrons everywhere have gone out of their way to praise the excellence of the seating accommodations provided for them.

OPERATION OF PROJECTION

New Problems in the Booth Prevent Satisfactory Usage of Existing Generating Equipment

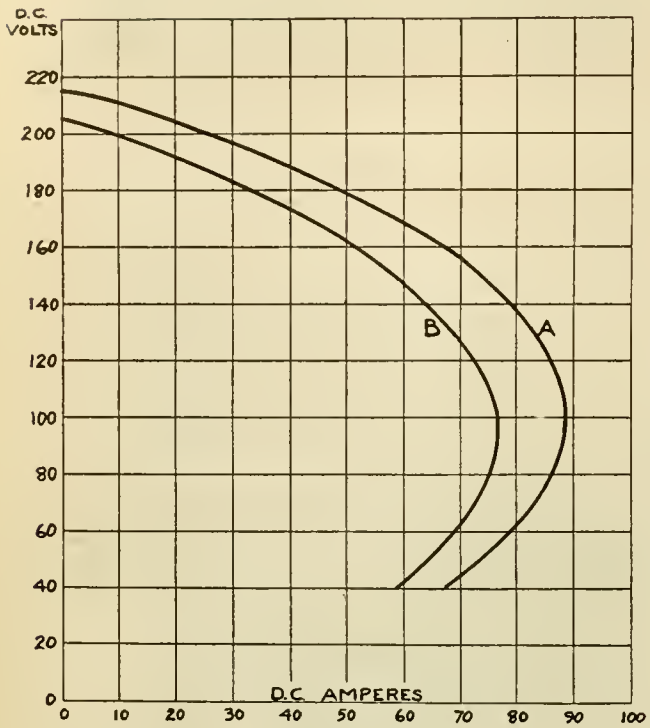

Fig. 1: Typical Performance Curve of 75-Ampere Series Arc Generator

By C. C. DASH*
Hertner Electric Co., Cleveland

WHEN series arc generators were introduced and used successfully in theatres, the projection requirements were relatively simple. The projection room equipment usually consisted of two projectors with vertical carbon lamps with the addition in some instances of a spot lamp requiring the same amount of current as the projectors. Arc controls first introduced and used were mostly of the intermittent type using a voltage relay, the coil of which is connected across the arc, in connection with an operating motor. The operation of these lamps was successful with the series arc generators, and as no ballast resistance was used in the projection arc circuit a maximum converting efficiency from alternating current supply to direct current for the lamps was obtained.

With the changes that have occurred in the projection requirements, theatres have been attempting to use existing generating equipment with results that are not satisfactory.

If a theatre has a 75 or a 70 ampere series type generator set, it might be assumed that the generator will satisfactorily furnish 70 amperes to a reflector high intensity lamp. Experience has shown that this assumption is not correct.

Figure 1 shows a typical volt-ampere performance curve of a 75 ampere series arc generator. Curve A is the performance with full field and curve B with the field regulator set for 70 ampere output at 60 volts. When you follow curve B up to 120 volts you will find that 73 amperes are obtained. The variation of current between these two points is not a straight line, but has considerable curvature.

The positive carbon of the high intensity lamp rotates and a continuous arc feed is customary. This condition combined with the volt-ampere characteristic in the region of the 60 volt point makes the arc unstable, resulting in poor light performance unless the projectionist is constantly regulating the arc control.

Causes of Poor Light and Adjustment

If the projectionist strikes his arc and sets the arc length so that he obtains 60 volts across the arc and the arc control is set so that the carbon feed exactly equals the rate of carbon consumption the operation will be perfectly satisfactory; but if the arc feed is a trifle fast, the arc length is decreased which lowers the current and thus decreases the carbon consumption, making the shortening of the arc cumulative, resulting in a very poor light and light adjustment in a relatively short time. Conversely, if the carbon feed is slower than the rate of carbon consumption, the arc lengthens and consequently the voltage across the arc increases. This results in an increased current which increases the carbon consumption so that this effect is also cumulative, and a long arc will result.

ARCS FROM GENERATOR SETS

How Inefficiency Makes an Operator A Switchboard Operator as Well As a Projectionist

If the positive carbon starts to burn off eccentrically, a serious pulsation of current will result with each revolution of the carbon. This effect is also cumulative as the current is increased at the time when the arc is longest. It can be seen, therefore, that a series arc generator cannot be expected to give satisfactory results on high intensity lamps with a continuous arc feed even though an attempt is made to use ballast resistance in series with the lamp. There have been attempts made to operate the low current reflector lamps with continuous arc feeds, and the same conditions obtain as with the high intensity lamp except that the difficulties caused by the rotating carbon are not encountered.

Voltage Drop for Ballast Resistance

An electric arc is unstable when connected to a source of constant voltage without a ballast resistance in series with it. The generator voltage or supply voltage for stable arc operation will be in excess of the arc voltage by the amount of voltage drop in the ballast resistor. For satisfactory operation this ballast resistance voltage drop should not be less than 50 per cent. of the arc voltage and for economical reasons should not be much over this value.

The combination of the ballast rheostat and an electric arc in series connected to a constant voltage direct current source is a simple electrical engineering problem, but as the conditions vary it becomes rather obscure to one not familiar with the problem.

An electric arc supplied with direct current cannot be figured as a rheostat on account of the fact that the resistance of the arc is a variable quantity. Carbon has a negative temperature coefficient of resistance, and the arc stream has apparently the same characteristic. This characteristic of the arc is shown in the low current reflector arc which, when adjusted for a constant arc length, has an arc voltage which is practically constant although the current may vary within the limits for which the carbon is designed.

Resistance at Definite Arc Lengths

If we assume a certain size carbon which is rated to operate from 25 to 30 amperes with a definite arc length corresponding to an arc voltage of 50 volts, at 25 amperes the apparent resistance is 2 ohms, and at 30 amperes, 1.67 ohms. If we take a piece of ordinary resistance material and change the current from 25 to 30 amperes, the voltage will vary directly as the current changes.

On account of this constant voltage condition we find that the variation of current in an arc with change of arc voltage caused by a change in arc length is much greater with a small difference between arc voltage and supply voltage than with a

Average Noise Must Be Cut If Audience Is To Benefit By Improved Equipment

MORE SENSITIVE TALKING DEVICES OF THE FUTURE WILL NOT STAND FOR PRESENT LEVEL OF "OUTSIDE" INTERFERENCES WITHOUT DISTORTED SOUND

By S. K. WOLF
Acoustical Engineer, Electrical Research Products

THE spontaneous success of talkers was due, in no small part, to the indefatigable curiosity of the public mind. To maintain such popularity it was necessary to perfect this new entertainment medium to a highly acceptable degree. Year in and year out we see new forms of entertainment spring to success overnight only to die a sudden death when public curiosity has been abated. "Talkies" have not only weathered the storm but they continue to win new patrons daily. A permanent public demand has been created. This demand has stimulated scientific progress and enhanced technique.

Of primary importance in maintaining public patronage was the practical perfection of recording and reproducing equipment. This achieved, other defects immediately became apparent. It was soon discovered that one of the most important contributing factors to acceptable recording and reproducing was the acoustic condition of the studio and theatre. No matter how perfect the voice or music recording, the sound was of poor quality where extraneous noises were allowed to enter the microphone. Wonderful as this mechanical ear, the microphone, is, it will not show partiality in selecting sound waves. Just as the "eye" of the camera will catch much that the human eye does not see, so will this "sound ear" catch much that the human ear, because of its apparent adaptability, will not be consciously aware of. The necessity of acoustic reconditioning to eliminate sounds born within the studio, and the further necessity of proper insulation to exclude alien noises arising from outside sources, led to an exhaustive study which today has become an exact science. It is obvious that such care in the studio is only half of the problem. To assure highly acceptable reproduction the same care should naturally be taken within the theatre, otherwise unnatural and unsatisfactory sound will be the direct result.

So great has been the progress in the field of auditorium acoustics that the skilled engineer of the day may not only recommend the most economical solution to a problem but he may also predetermine exact results. However, proper acoustic control of sound arising within the theatre does not completely assure perfect reproduction. There is an all important variable, which at times causes great annoyance. We refer to noises arising either within or without the theatre. We are not always aware of the magnitude of such noises as they unfortunately have a masking effect on each other. We are only cognizant of the fact that our fader must be turned up unnecessarily high to assure intelligible reproduction. That such noises can have a very real and detrimental effect, has been actually proven in a number of houses where the "quiet noise level" was measured. Scientific instruments have been developed which will not only measure the volume of such noise levels but will also measure the magnitude of the individual contributary sources.

Theatres located in quiet sections need only study extraneous noises arising in the building. Public cooperation has done much to eliminate unnecessary shuffling of feet, coughing, whispering, etc., but there are other sources over which the management alone has control. Noisy ventilating and refrigerating systems, humming generators, noises arising from the projection booth and back stage clamor can and should be isolated.

The theatre located in the metropolitan area must contend with a further contributing source, i.e., outside noise. Our conversational tone on the busy street would become a shout were all other sound to immediately cease. In other words, the sound source energy must be increased to overcome a generally noisy condition that our ear is scarcely aware of, however great it may be. It is not uncommon for the noise level in certain sections of a city to be as great as sixty decibels, above the threshold of hearing. This is equivalent to one million times the smallest amount of sound energy that the ear can detect! A recent survey of city noise showed the noise level to be far greater under certain conditions, and further elicited the astounding fact that the average noise level in non-residential districts was fifty-one decibels. Noises due to audience, ventilating equipment, and external sources ranging from ten to forty decibels above threshold may be present, requiring the increase in loud-

Noise Elimination

NOISES within the four walls of every theatre present an intricate problem for study, and until a manner of elimination is unearthed, it will not be possible to assure highly acceptable reproduction, in the opinion of S. K. Wolf, of Western Electric, who, in this article, the second of a series of three written exclusively for this publication, discusses the problems which influence performance of sound.

The necessity of acoustic reconditioning to eliminate sounds born within the studio, and further necessity of proper insulation to exclude alien noises arising from outside sources, led to an exhaustive and successful study. It is only natural, therefore, that the same situation must be cleared up in the theatre, it is stated.

Modern magic

A dull, tawdry, altogether uninviting moving picture theatre of the arcade type is suddenly—almost overnight—transformed into an awe-inspiring, patron-inviting place of modern entertainment. And the public just as suddenly awakes, "ums" and "ahs", applauds out loud and begins to fight its way up to the regenerated box office. To them it appears magical. It inspires them, pleases them and they show approval with open minds—and purses.

But to you theatre owners who "know your public" there's nothing uncanny about this Modern Magic. It's simply a common sense treatment of chronic box office ills with medicine that pleases the public palate.

National Service—hand in hand with modern science—has always taken the lead in this movement for better theatres. It supplies the correct mechanical needs completely on a one-contract plan and in each of the 30 National branches there are men capably fitted to advise, supervise and help carry through any remodeling treatment prescribed. ## UNIT AIR CONDITIONING AT LAST BRINGS "COMFORT" MACHINERY WITHIN THE ECONOMIC RANGE OF THE FIVE-HUNDRED SEAT THEATRE

An Interview With
A. C. BUENSOD
Theatre Division, Carrier Engineering Corp.

PERFECTION of unit air conditioning brings within the cost range of the 500-seat theatre a complete system capable of producing results equal and in some respects surpassing the best that has been achieved for the large de luxe house.

The development, announced to the industry in this exclusive article to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, is regarded as the most significant contribution of air conditioning engineers to the so-called comfort field, and represents the successful culmination of efforts of the entire air conditioning industry to arise to the demand created in the public mind by motion picture theatres themselves for indoor comfort the year round in places of public assembly.

Naturally, in the beginning of theatre conditioning only the big de luxe houses were equipped, for the simple reason that the total invested capital of a de luxe house is so large that the addition of an air conditioning system, regardless of its cost, is necessary in order that attendance could be maintained at the highest level possible in summer as well as winter seasons. With the smaller type theatre, however, resultant costs of refrigeration made it prohibitive for this class of house to install air conditioning, or where installation costs were available, maintenance overhead provided too much of a burden for owners of this type of theatre.

Carrier Unit for Small Houses. Includes Fan, Spray and Cooling Chambers, Automatic Dampers, Heaters and Sound Silencers, Used in Conjunction With the Centrifugal, Fully Enclosed Refrigerator Which Runs Automatically

Carrier Centrifugal, Fully Enclosed Refrigeration Unit, Which Runs Automatically and Does Not Require Services of House Engineer. Three Sizes of Machines Are Now Ready for Next Summer's Operation

The elements necessary for air conditioning in the small house are exactly the same as they are for the de luxe house: to maintain definite relations of temperature, relative humidity and air motion.

Consequently, a system of refrigeration similar to that employed in the de luxe house installation, but of smaller capacity is necessary. However, the refrigerating machine is the most costly item of the investment required for complete theatre air conditioning system. Until new developments permitted, a small house could not sustain the maintenance and operating charges necessary with a refrigerating machine such as is used in a de luxe house. It was necessary that this be a foolproof machine to function without any maintenance or operating attention. The cost of the complete installation must, of necessity, meet the requirements which provide for a suitable return on the investment of each and every theatre owner.

Air conditioning systems for the small house have been ready for a great many years, but unfortunately we have been handicapped through lack of a refrigerating machine that met all of the foregoing requirements.

Thus, the availability of air conditioning to the small theatre awaited the development of a refrigeration unit completely automatic in its operation and considerably lower in cost and maintenance.

The small unit developed for this work is similar in operation to the centrifugal refrigeration machine now used in a large number of the de luxe theatres. But it introduces radical features of design, including complete automatic operation. It is fully enclosed, requires no operating engineer to run it, and the economy of maintenance is indicated by the fact that it can be serviced hy the company installing it for a flat sum of $200 per year, without any charges whatsoever to be paid for services of a theatre engineer.

The largest of these machines developed for small theatres is 12 feet long, 9 feet wide, and requires a head room of 9 feet. Thus, it is adaptable to installation in buildings where space for installation is limited.

The refrigerator is used in conjunction with a complete air conditioning unit which includes the fan, spray and cooling chamber, automatic dampers, heaters and sound silencers, in a compact machine especially developed for small theatre use.

There are three sizes of the machine now ready for next summer's operation. The capacity of houses the machines are designed for range from 500 to 900 seats.

The table of operating costs shown elsewhere on this page gives the cost per seat per day. These costs are based on the complete operation of the air conditioning system including refrigeration, giving the operating costs for summer and winter.

Costs are based on the assumption that the electric current rate will be of 2 cents per kw. hour, and that the cost of condensing water is at the rate of 60 cents per thousand cubic feet.

The cost of heating has not been included because the cost of fuel will be similar with or without air conditioning.

Due to the emphasis which has been placed on cooling, it is essential to bear in mind that refrigeration is only necessary when a reduction in temperature or a reduction in moisture is necessary. And that the refrigeration equipment necessary for these purposes is only incidental to the complete system for conditioning.

Air Distribution Important Factor

The important part played by an air conditioning system is the proper distribution of the air within the theatre so that the reduction in moisture and temperature brings the atmosphere to the ideal condition for human comfort. A refrigerating machine to cool the air is of no use if the air is not distributed properly. Some of the main difficulties encountered by air conditioning engineers have resulted for the too zealous use of refrigeration to cool without regard to the comfort of the people. It is impossible to sit in a theatre that is over-cooled and be comfortable.

The exhibitors who have had experience in operating air conditioning systems over a period of years are agreed that more harm is done by over-cooling than no cooling at all, and air conditioning engineers have used every ingenious method at their command to make foolproof such systems so that over-cooling shall not be done.

Cooling is important to comfort during hot weather but equally important is the reduction of moisture content of the air, especially in summer.

You can maintain a temperature of 80 to 85 degrees when the outside weather is 95 and 100, provided you reduce the moisture content of the air within your theatre so that the people will feel comfortable. And that is all an air conditioning system in a theatre should do—make people comfortable throughout the length of the show.

For this reason, air conditioning engineers are glad to note the discarding of the old icicles and the polar bears as a means of selling the "20 degrees below the outside temperature" idea.

One of the most prominent exhibitors in this country and a pioneer in the introduction of cooling systems in theatres, recently stated that he has refused in the last few years to advertise that his theatres are cool. "Why advertise when the people know that the theatre under our direction are comfortable," he asks.

IT IS a tribute to the courage and progressiveness of the theatre owners who in the early days of this science had the idea that cold storage methods used for the preservation of food could be utilized to create comfortable conditions within their theatres during the hot weather months when theatres suffered in competition with beach resorts and other outdoor attractions. These early efforts on the part of theatre men undoubtedly are responsible for the air comfort consciousness of the general public and the advances made in the science of air conditioning as applied to the comfort field.

With an investment in excess of $10,000,000 in air conditioning equipment, and the exercise of its power to popularize a science as well as personalities and the arts, the theatre industry both here and abroad has educated the general public to the benefits of air conditioning to human comfort and health. And, on the theory that the public will more readily outlay admissions where mechanical contrivances guarantee comfort, manufactured weather can be accepted as an influencing factor in building box office success at the theatre, along with other contingent factors such as quality pictures, sensible showmanship and the like.

Keep Eagle-Eye on Equipment for Success

lic each day. The ushers should always inform the head usher when they find a seat in bad condition or a tear in the carpets.

The assistant manager's job, in addition to the items covered by his own list, must understand that he must keep his eye on the work covered by the others as well. Occasional trips through the booth, boiler room, cellars, usher's dressing rooms, and every other part of the house is his job. This he must do, not merely when he gets the chance, but on designated days. His report to the manager will be the basis for such orders for repairs, etc., as the manager shall deem necessary after personal investigation.

Alibis Are Taboo

Just what the best way would be to make certain that every detail gets the attention it requires can best be decided by the manager in working out this system to suit his own requirements, but as recommended, the better way is to create charts on the inside of regular letter folders, such as is used in files, these should be ruled and arranged as appears elsewhere in this article.

No excuse must be offered by those responsible for the various parts of the house. The inspection must be made as a regular and important part of their job. The complete report is then placed in the manager's office, preferably hooked in a row where the house manager can look them over from time to time. When these check-ups reveal something in need of repair or attention it must be called to the manager's attention immediately. If the repair is minor and can be made by an employee in the house, the manager should first give his O.K. Possibly he may not agree with the one making the report and prefer to have the work done by some outside source.

Another thing to keep in mind is the various items on the several charts. For instance, the assistant or head usher could also be made partly responsible for the toilets. If the house employs a matron, she should not only see that the ladies' rooms are in perfect condition, but can also be personally responsible for the cleanliness of those rooms.

Giving the Job to the Right One

Each chart should be so worked out that the supervision of the different parts of the theatre and the equipment should be placed under the eye of those whose regular duties or experiences fit them to know how to check up on the various items. It would not be feasible to place the responsibility for the motors in the fan room on the shoulders of the janitor. The best man for such things is the projectionist. He should see that the commutators are clean, the brushes making proper contact, and above all, that all the motors are suitably lubricated. This last item being of major importance. We can well recall the trouble and expense of repacing bearings on motors.

Avoid expense and trouble by watching these things closely. That's why we emphasize the importance of someone supervising those items needing careful attention. The assistant manager need not be an expert electrician to be able to see that the oil wells or grease cups are filled at all times, but he might stumble on such a condition in time to prevent breakdowns if he is properly trained for such work. And properly training him for these things means schooling him on one of the most important features of theatre management.

The Monthly Recapitulation

The same applies to your head usher or doorman, they, too, may be anxious to advance in theatre work and need this training if they are to be a credit to you as their superior.

The manager's personal responsibility under this system is worked out so that once a week or twice a month he must make a check-up of all the charts, by going over them with those who made the inspections, and then starting at the top of the house and going right on down throughout the entire theatre in company with all department heads.

A theatre kept in perfect condition means a manager with plenty of time to work out his advertising and exploitation campaigns. He need not be worried or bothered with constant trouble from some remote part of the house. He is always certain that everything is being watched and checked up carefully. If things are beginning to show wear or require attention he is told about it in sufficient time to have it fixed or replaced.

Another good feature of these check-ups is the manner in which you can determine how much service you are getting from different portions of your theatre's equipment and how often repairs are necessary. This could even be used as a basis for a report to your home office maintenance department, if you're house is one of a chain.

Added Dollars from Good Equipment

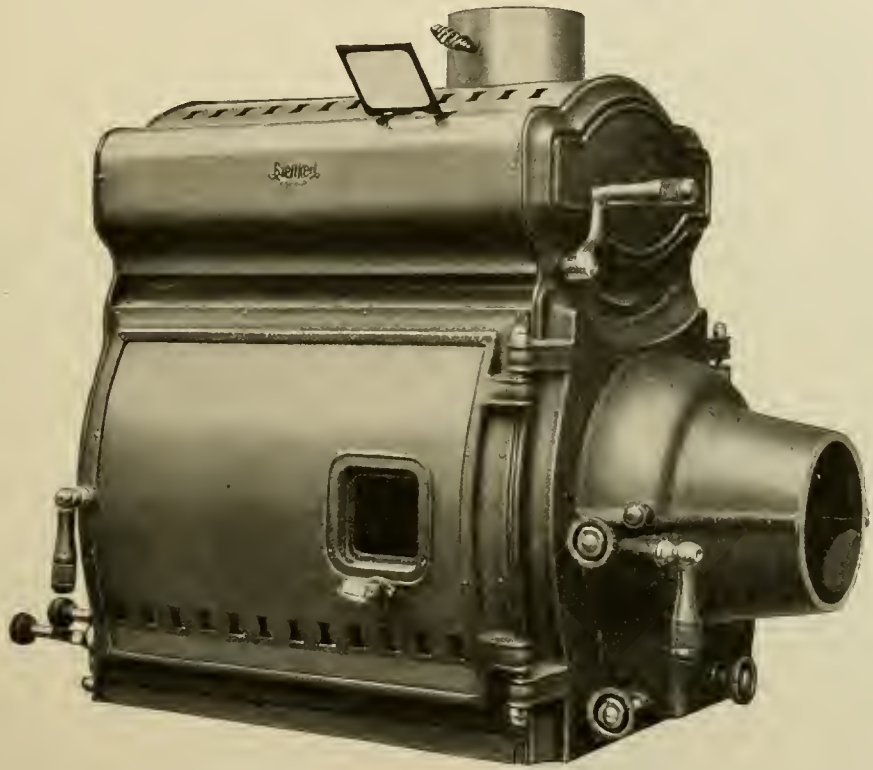
Just as all business enterprises require proper system and supervision, so does a modern theatre. It's as much of a business as anything else these days and only the man possessed of real executive ability and the knack of organizing his staff to function as a smooth machine, can really boast of a well-run business.

The smoother your theatre runs the more satisfied your patrons will be. They will be sure to notice these things because they are accustomed to seeing the bigger deluxe houses in the large cities. If you run your house like a dump, that's exactly what your patrons will think of it. And if you lose business because your theatre suffers by comparison the fault is your's as the manager, as the man who was placed in charge of the house and the many thousands of dollars tied up in such an investment.



Either you are equal to the responsibility or you are the wrong man for the job. One of the best ways to determine that point is not alone in the business the house is doing, but also in the way the house is run and the way its equipment is kept.

tions identifies the house and its attractions. There should also be plenty of illumination underneath the canopy. Where a particularly striking design of ornamentation is employed in the upper portion of the theatre front, an arrangement of flood lights may be placed on top of the canopy, and by the use of these reflectors with changeable color screens, most striking effects can be obtained and changed frequently to break the monotony. The entire appearance of the theatre front may in this manner be changed weekly, if desired. This treatment can be worked out effectively, either with or without the name sign.

Location of Box Office and Arrangement of Entrance

Conservative provision for attraction signs or program poster frames are also advocated although the modern trend is toward elimination of too much "advertising paper" both inside and outside the theatre. Circus exploitation and ballyhoo are becoming passe in modern theatre operation.

A typical old style theatre is one with a curved or oblong recessed entrance with the ticket office in the center of the lobby space, at the side, or in the rear. Frequently no front entrance doors are provided and the entire "waiting room" is left open and exposed. In remodeling a house of this type an attractive box office should be located right up front, easily accessible, with adequate and properly decorated entrance and exit doors on each side. The space at the rear, thus saved, can then be used as an inside foyer or waiting room, properly decorated, lighted and furnished for the comfort of patrons. Portable aisle posts and velour ropes can be arranged at will to efficiently guide the crowds in and out of the main auditorium. Quite often an increase in seating capacity can be had through this method.

Basic Materials, Adequate Equipment

Another example: Assume an old theatre has a 25-foot frontage with a lobby 30 feet deep and rentable area is desired in remodeling. It is recommended that the entrance doors be set back from the street line four or five feet with a separate door into a stairway leading to the second floor and independent of access to the theatre. The box office could then be set between this set of doors and the street line.

The following basic building materials may be used in remodeling the theatre front: Face brick, cut stone, terra cotta, granites and marble. The most economical of these is face brick and quite satisfactory if well formed, hard burned, smooth-faced brick is selected. It is easily cleaned and always attractive. A solid stone front is not expensive, but it is too conservative and sedate for theatre work and should only be used in conjunction with face brick.

Terra cotta construction is quite popular but is a little more expensive than brick or stone. A wider variety of color effects are possible with terra cotta, which also has a washable surface. Terra cotta must be carefully handled in both delivery and erection inasmuch as it has a tendency to craze or check under certain climatic conditions. Granites and marbles are seldom used except in the base course of theatre construction.

Faience Tile for Lobby

For the lobby floor broken faience tile laid at random is most economical and makes a highly attractive and durable floor surface. It may be used in a wide variety of colors and once laid is not subject to unusual deterioration. Many other flooring materials are also used in remodeling. In another article the subject of interior decoration throughout the entire theatre will be discussed.

Modern Equipment a Necessity

In equipping the remodeled theatre entrance, box office and lobby, the owner should provide adequately the right sort of equipment for the efficient handling of business. A remodeled theatre without modern equipment is a job half done. A reliable equipment dealer can recommend and supply the type of apparatus or furnishings best suited to all conditions. It is advisable in all cases to avoid the selection of materials that require frequent polishing and cleaning as this adds greatly to maintenance cost and unless kept in condition at all times the reaction is decidedly against the appearance of the theatre. Particularly, surfaces that require frequent cleaning or polishing should not be used against woodwork as the polishing soon mars and soils the woodwork. Hammered bronze or other similar materials should have preference.

Th Assurance of Success

In remodeling as in new construction, it's the little details that count most. The prominent consideration should always be this: To have a finished theatre in which all the elements that attract and hold patronage are present and easily recognized by the public. That done, success is practically assured.

C-H "Simplicity" Dimmer Plates are supplied by leading dimmerboard manufacturers with the board they install. Fig. 1 shows the front of a typical board. Fig. 2 the rear view showing C-H plates and Fig. 3 the complete plate. Dimmer plates are the heart of any lighting control board. Make sure the C-H trade-mark is on your plates for long life, smooth lighting control and low maintenance.

THE audience sees only what goes on "out front". Few know what is going on behind the scenes. They see nothing of the elaborate organization which puts a show across—though the faultless operation of this organization is vital to the success of every show.

The same thing applies to the dimmerboard which controls the lighting effects of your theater. The board is merely "out front", behind are the dimmer plates, the real heart of your lighting control. The dimmer plates determine whether your lighting effects will be "spotty" or smooth.

Most experienced showmen use only Cutler-Hammer "Simplicity" Dimmers for their dimmerboard. C-H Dimmers insure smooth, continuous dimming —from full brilliance to black out. Each plate has contacting surfaces on both sides, permitting more circuits to be handled in a given space. Direct rack and pinion operation prevents any play or backlash.

These are a few features of Cutler-Hammer Dimmer construction which insure their famous "velvet-smooth" control of lighting effects. Thirty years of experience in theatrical lighting, in solving the problems which confront the showman have earned C-H Dimmers a permanent place on the dimmerboards of hundreds of leading theaters.

Ask your electrician or architect about C-H Dimmers. You can have them on any dimmerboard you install and they can be adapted to meet your requirements as you grow.

New Metal for Arc Problems

By M. H. GOLDBERG
Golde Mfg. Co., Chicago

With the passage of silents and the solid reflecting surface of the opaque screen discarded, the perforated sound screen has come with a period of brighter light source to counteract the loss of light both at the source (photography) and at the screen (reproduction).

High intensity and high intensity reflector arcs of many makes provide this brighter light source with a few attendant practical problems which have been solved in the laboratory in theory. In actual practice, however, we find these problems continuously cropping up and not as smooth-working as preliminary lab tests would have you believe.

Here we are, rotating a carbon, feeding it forward, horizontally during rotation, delivering current to that carbon (all while the carbon is being heated so that it might perform its work) to produce light. Excessively high heat intensity is required—a temperature which will melt every metal known—at the crater of the arc. Luckily we have carbon clamping, rotation and feeding an inch or so back of its hottest point and this small difference in temperature allows the use of several metals. However, the metal to be used must resist the intense heat, the seevral gases formed by oxidation of the carbon, must be a good current conductor and must be mechanically sound for holding alignment. Very few metals will serve the purpose of all of these requirements. While one may withstand the attack of the gases formed, and be a good current conductor under ideal conditions, the intense heat will eventually break it down.

Metals now in use are suitable for the job under ideal conditions but not wholly under usual rigid operating conditions. Although we find that brass, nickel and allied alloys may be good current conductors and withstand the attacks of gases, they do neither unless the surface within the contacting area of the carbon is entirely free of other matter and bright with only the metal of which it is formed. To keep the carbon jaw in this condition requires constant polishing and cleaning of the contact surface. Unles sthe jaw is cleaned once in at least ten hours running time, harmful effects become apparent. Poor contact between carbon and jaw soon beegts "arcing" between these two points. This arcing is of high enough temperature to melt and break down the surface of the metal. The whole jaw soon overheats, the carbon is "frozen" in the jaw, it cannot rotate or feed forward and the jaw is ruined unless miled down to clean contact surface.

Even with constant daily polishing, the impossibility of maintaining a perfect contact at all points of the contact surface is evident. If a point instead of surface contact is obtained, overheating and melting soon occur. Some metals will not break down under intense heat, but an oxide formed on the surface soon increases the resistance to passage of the current. The constant cleaning will in too short a time reduce the jaw below its proper size, so that center distances are changed with an attending change of relation with the negative carbon.

It is clearly evident then that the most of replacement very quickly mounts into quite a sum, aside from the trouble caused—poor light, breakdown of light, fluttering due to non-rotation, mottled field of light, etc.

In order to cut the cost of replacements, inserts of other rare metals able to withstand all these conditions are tried. Here, however, another situation develops: Oxidation between metal surfaces soon cause the same condition as oxidation between carbon and metal. The breakdown which follows ruins both the jaw and insert. This has been proven in actual practice.

However, a solution to these carbon problems appears in a metal composition never before used for carbon jaws. It will not burn out or corrode, does not necessitate constant cleaning and will not hold back the rotation of the carbon and proper feeding, delivering the full current transferred to it from the source of supply. Although the process of manufacturing this metal is held highly secretive by two American and one German company, its use as contact surface in carbon jaws has been awarded Golde in return for the latter's reesarch for its development.

Theatre Noise Must Be Reduced

ness of speech for good articulation. Before the advent of our present type of improved sound recording on film, audience and other noises in the theatre as high as thirty-five decibels were not objectionable as the surface noise of the film was of the same order of magnitude. In the future it will be necessary to reduce the average noise of the theatre if the exhibitor and the audience are to derive the benefit of improved recording.

Although under normal conditions we are seldom aware of a noise level of forty decibels above threshold, as soon as intelligible speech sounds are introduced, its magnitude becomes more apparent. We must increase our sound source energy to a sufficient degree to overcome this conglomeration of noise. This in turn leads to distortion and unnaturalness, for it is a fact that the required intensity of sound reproduction should be commensurate with the energy level at which they were originally recorded. Should this not be the case the result is most annoying and displeasing. A recorded whisper may be uniformly amplified within the limits of the equipment, but the result is not a shout, which would normally be expected under noisy conditions, but is an unnaturally loud whisper. This incongruity tends to destroy necessary illusion.

There is one more detrimental effect that outside noise may have although the sound being reproduced in the theatre be of sufficient volume and articulation to be naturally understood. We refer to the distracting effect of sudden noises, such as the blowing of automobile horns. Should this sound penetrate the theatre it will prove subconsciously annoying. This creates a dissatisfaction which the patron, more often than not, will lay to the program rather than to its real cause. Fortunately this will be overcome when proper precautions are taken to exclude noises.

There is no reason why detrimental noise levels should be tolerated in the theatre as it is a relatively easy matter to measure the magnitude of such noises and to make proper recommendations for their isolation or reduction.

Wall Treatment Alone Not Sufficient to Stop Sound Distortion in Theatres?

SPECIAL INEXPENSIVE WIRING INSTALLATION WITH BUZZER FOR GUIDE IS RECOMMENDED BY A THEATRE OWNER FOR BETTER SOUND RESULTS

By ROBERT P. WITT
Manager, Capitol Theatre, Publix, Oklahoma City

TREATMENT OF WALLS and other stationary parts of the auditorium is generally accepted as being the initial remedy in correcting imperfect acoustical conditions in sound theatres. With this accomplished, a large percentage of theatre owners sit back and rest, without giving further thought to one of the greatest problems in theatre operation: one hundred per cent elimination of sound distortion.

Mechanical variances in sound prints and on discs have taken the place of silent-day distortion or out-of-focus prints as the all-important problem in proper projection. In the silent days we were able to reduce to a minimum, with but little effort, signs of imperfection in the screened image. Today's great sound problem, however, is not so easily overcome.

Double-Checking Sound Quality

Despite the fact that perfect sound prints may emanate from either studio or laboratory, a thousand-and-one acoustical problems in as many theatres turn the spotlight on an entirely different aspect, each in need of a particular style of "doctoring."

A close study of variations in the sound print or disc, following acoustical treatment of walls and other places, revealed an all too imperfect condition. These imperfections, while not nearly as bad as before treatment, loomed over the box-office as a possible influence in lowering receipts. A plan was then adapted to bring into use at our house a weekly-check-up system which has proven successful even beyond expectations.

Before any film is shown at its regular run it is previewed by staff executives and the various qualities of sound are studied. We have rigged-up a buzzer system throughout the auditorium, with buttons placed at stragetically located points of the house. These buzzers find a terminal in the booth. During this check-up, the buzzer system is used to formulate a guide sheet, and through the latter we either muffle or tone up the sound as needed during the regular performances.

An Aid to Operators

The observers, from the points where buttons are located, note needed corrections each of which is transmitted to the booth during the rehearsal. One buzz denotes lower sound control; two are used to indicate a raise. These notations are made on a cue sheet placed directly opposite the control. This sheet is then used in all future runs of the attraction at our house. Here the operator has an opportunity to keep an accurate check on the tone and to keep it at all times to the point where it will procure the best audience reaction.

As a variation, the test is made at the first public showing, using audience reaction as further help in devising the proper guide record. We find that variances on the setting seldom reach higher than two points on the normal setting. But even these two points can have a decided unfavorable reaction on theatregoers.

All Sections Must Be Checked

We know from actual experience in observing reaction of audiences before and after the system was installed that it pays. Our house has, and certainly not through promotion advertising, a reputation of having as perfect and pleasing sound quality as can be procured. On innumerable occasions patrons have told us that their reasons for visiting our house was because of the fact that our rendition of sound was better than at other houses.

It is not sufficient to confine the checkup to only one sector of the auditorium. Checks should be made from the back end of the house as well as at the front. The man in the most out-of-the-way seat must have as complete satisfaction as the man in the choice localities of our theatre.

Not only features, but newsreels and shorts are checked. It can be easily understood that no matter how perfect the acoustics of sound features, a poorly transmitted voice from any other part of the program would be a detriment to the entire program.

Getting the Most Out of Sound

These simple little corrections which adapt sound to each house will immediately iron out any of the irregularities that may exist because of the variance of a particular theatre, acoustically, from the projection or production rooms of the studios. This factor of pleasing the customers' ears as well as their eyes is something that is sometimes overlooked, but, nevertheless, is equally as important. After all, emphasis has been placed on sound in recent months, and that is the merchandising item controlling the major attention of the theatre patron rather than the printed image on the screen itself.

An understanding that the sound they hear is the first thing they consider and the first thing that prompts fan reactions in passing judgment on a picture's quality, entertainment or otherwise, was one of the greatest incentives used by our theatre in developing this new system.

Eberson's Plan For Standards

must cover the entire lot with a theatre building. Take your standardized plan and place it to the very best advantage on this lot and only build on as much ground as required by the standard unit.

From the standpoint of chains, we believe that full benefit of the standardization of theatres can only come when units of this kind are built in multiples of five or more, and the duties of buying and producing these units is unified and centered on one contractor and one architect, and not widely spread among several as at present.

The detailed cost analysis of standardized theatres, which appears elsewhere in this article, provides for theatres, all sound houses of course, seating from 1,100 to 2,050. They include the typical lobby flanking stores. Small-town building conditions were taken into full consideration in preparation of the schedules. It is important to point out that these results are obtained by the use of proven economic construction principles in which reinforced concrete and junior steel beams play an important part.

The decorative scheme, executed in modern American style, tends to reduce the expense of furring plain and ornamental plastering to a minimum. The conception of this new and unusual fashion in decorating should remain entirely in charge of the designing architect.

Retiring rooms, plumbing and mechanical eqnipment are all placed in locations which are most economical. Costly approaches, stairs and passageways are eliminated completely. Acoustical problems are properly handled without the usage of over-designed and over-technical sound treatment.

Rongh cast concrete embellished with glazed tile and rustless metal stripping is used for elevations, and the vertical sign is designed and built as part of the structure.

Lighting units are placed and conceived as part of the architectural treatment, avoiding excessive costs of lighting fixtures. The general "punch" illumination of the auditorium is accomplished by use of well concealed floodlight units.

Ventilation Problems

All of the smaller units include proper ventilation, and where air conditioning and refrigeration is desired, we recommend the use of a self-contained automatic installation on the horizontal diffuser type plan, eliminating the necessity of employing a skilled engineer and avoiding the expense of complicated dnct work. Of course, the latter factors are necessary for the larger theatres in the standardization plan, but smaller houses will do well to avoid these extra, heavy financial burdens.

I am firmly of the opinion that good, wholesome, artistic and interesting pictures will be always successful, and that hundreds of communities can be most advantageously served through a standardized sound house under a plan which offers the public a restful, tasty auditorium, void of all ginger-bread and spectacular ornamentation, featuring a proper seating plan; comfortable and properly constructive opera chairs, good acoustics and proper sight lines.

I visualize hundreds of old, antiquated, musty theatres replaced with modern standardized sound theatres—but, why call them theatres? Rather, an elegant conveniently located place of assemblage. I want to forget the word "theatre" and the tiring general aspect of a theatrical auditorium, and put in its place, as previously mentioned, something "warm" and "friendly," devoted to an amusement loving people and practically arranged to affect the perfect presentation of pictures.

The "movie" in an intimate community, visited once or twice a week by townsfolk, has become a strongly established and firmly entrenched institution. It does not necessarily have to be dolled up in gandy theatrical fashion. The public demands good pictures and wholesome amusement. I do not believe that in the small town much attention is paid to the architectural detail or elaborateness of the sidewalls, the ceiling or the intricacies of design of the flasher sign. What they want, in addition to good pictnres, is an auditorium in good taste, comfortable and generally attractive.

Brenkert's New Lamp

STANDARDIZATION is claimed by Brenkert for its new high intensity projection lamp, rendering all parts of the machine interchangeable. Although adaptable to screen sizes varying from 21 ft. wide to 40 ft. wide, it is unnecessary to increase current beyond 120 amperes in order to obtain proper screen intensity, it is said.

New Brenkert Projection Lamp

Another equipment manufacturer to fall in line with wide-film development is Brenkert Light Projection, which is marketing a new high intensity projection lamp for standard or wide film. Claiming more light per ampere, a whiter light and even illumination from edge to edge, Brenkert has built into the device illumination for wide screens, with 120 amperes current. Higher amperage for proper screen intensity is declared nnnecessary.

The lamp has a continuous feed and rotation of positive carbon, intermittent feed of negative carbon and independent micrometric adjustment of negative feed. A new type condensing lens, differing radically from its previous style was developed for the device, and is separately removable from outside of lamphouse. The adjustment of condensing lenses for focussing has been re-designed.

Adjustments Unnecessary, Claim

Accommodating 20 in. positive carbon with continuous feed its entire length, and 9 in. negative carbon, provision has been made for the release of the former from outside of lamphonse at rear. Contact jaws may be removed without detaching electrical connection wires.

The company states that adjustments are unnecessary for taking off positive head, negative, condenser, or control units and entire lamphouse. A new type automatic arc striker automatically establishes the arc and is operated at full current load without injury to the positive carbon, also permitting carbons to be trimmed in separate position.

Removal and replacement of four small parts permits using the 16 mm. carbon combination for use of this size carbon in projecting wide film.

Novel Installation Completed by Macy

Macy Manufacturing Corporation has completed installation of a three-way interbroadcasting system, originally developed for theatre use, at Rosemont Ballroom in Brooklyn. Sound reproducers suspend from the center of the ballroom and distribute announcements to all parts of the main room and lobbies. A speaker is mounted at the entrance of the ballroom and carries the music of the orchestra to passersby.

The management plans to make microphone contests a feature event. The system is equipped to pick up any radio event.

Arc Operation and Generators

larger difference between arc voltage and supply voltage.

Figure 2 shows this variation with a low current reflector type arc used with a 75 volt generator and an 80 volt generator, the basic adjustment in this case being for a 30 ampere arc with a 50 volt arc length. While the difference between the slopes of these two curves is not very marked, there is a big difference in the ease of operation and the resulting changes in current through the lamp with slight changes of arc length.

Figure 3 shows the variation of arc current with change of arc voltage with a high intensity reflector lamp which is set for a 60 volt arc at 70 amperes. The change in current with the 100 volt source is much less than with the 85 volt source.

Figure 4 shows the variation in current with variation in arc volts for a high intensity lamp adjusted for 125 amperes at 70 volts using an 85 volt generator and a 100 volt generator. Experience has shown that 85 volt generators are not desirable for high intensity lamps with an arc voltage of 70 volts because the change in current is greater with slight changes in arc voltage.

The rheostats used in connection with the projection arcs must be designed to give the proper voltage drop at the current required. With the variation of current which comes with a small change in arc voltage it is very easy to overload these rheostats. Assume a low current reflector arc nominally operated at 55 volts at the arc normal current 30 amperes from an 80 volt generator. The voltage drop across the rheostat will be 25 volts. With a variation of arc voltage the following rheostat leads would be obtained: With an arc voltage of 55, and an arc current of 30 amperes, the rheostat will be operating at 100 per cent. load. If this arc voltage is reduced to 45 volts with the same generator voltage and same amount of resistance in the rheostat, the arc current will increase to 42 amperes and the load on the rheostat will be 196 per cent. of normal.

There is a great deal of variation in the practice of projectionists throughout the country with respect to arc voltage, and the proper operating conditions with motor generator sets or any source of direct current power can be obtained only when all of the equipment, rheostats, arc controls, carbons, and direct current supply are properly matched.

One other item which should be considered is the proper connections when two constant voltage generators are installed in a theatre. The natural way for an electrical engineer to connect these generators would be for parallel operation. When two generators of similar characteristics are connected in parallel they will operate satisfactorily and divide their lead properly only when the induced voltage in the two machines is the same and the resistance of the armature circuit together with the interpole and series fields is inversely proportional to their capacity. Under conditions of operation where two machines would be started about the same time, there would probably not be much difficulty in obtaining a balanced load on the two sets, but with conditions as they exist in the theatre where one lamp is operating for a period of from 25 to 30 minutes, making the load on the generating equipment rather light, it is not economical to be running the two machines. Under conditions as they obtain we find that when the heavy load comes on, the projectionist will start the second machine with cold windings and parallel it with the first which has been running probably long enough to have come to a stable temperature. He will adjust the generated voltage of the two machines so that a proper division of the load is obtained. In a short time the shunt field winding of the two machines will have warmed up enough to reduce the generated voltage in the second machine to the point where the loads are no longer equally divided. As a matter of fact, unless the generator has very close voltage regulation and very little change of voltage with change in temperature it may drop its load almost entirely, imposing the load on the machine which has been running the longer time. The necessity of frequent adjustment during the period of heavy load when the projectionist has the most equipment to look after, results in attempting to make him a switchboard operator as well as projectionist.

It has been found that by far the most suitable way to connect generators when there are two installed in a theatre is to connect each generator to a separate bus and provide each projection lamp with a separate double pole switch so that any lamp can be connected to either generator as required. This connection gives all of the advantages of the parallel connection inasmuch as in the event of an emergency the equipment can be connected to either set, and when both generators are required to take care of the peak load each generator will supply its lamps without the continued attention of the projectionist.

Underwriters Rewrite Code

Regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters for the protection of openings in walls and partitions against fire have been approved in the revised form suggested by the National Fire Protection Association.

The new code is a complete revision of the 1927 edition. No fundamental changes were made in the character of the protection specified, the principal changes being as follows:

(a) New sections to cover new devices developed since the last edition of the regulations.

(b) Elimination of structural specifications on doors and hardware now labeled by Underwriters' Laboratories.

(c) General condensing of detailed installation rules in the interest of brevity.

(d) Substitution of performance requirements for detailed construction rules wherever feasible.

(e) General editing of entire text, with insertion of introductory matter designed to clarify the application of the regulations and make them more useful to the average user.

Theatre architects and builders may secure full text of the new wall-partition regulations from the National Board of Fire Underwriters, New York City.

Moderne Architecture for United Artists' Theatres

PROTECTION
FROM HOLD-UPS AS WELL AS BURGLARS

THE York Round Door Chest is not only thoroughly burglar proof. When desired, it may also be provided with an ingenious additional protection against the activities of bandits and hold-up men—the "Hold-up Partition". As a surplus of money is accumulated over the average amount for making change, it is slipped into the interior through the slot shown in the illustration. The operation of the inner door, however, is in the hands of an executive or trusted employe who collects the money at suitable intervals. The "Hold-up Partition" thus offers a disconcerting obstruction to bandits who attempt raids during business hours.

The York Chest, when installed, is anchored in a solid concrete block, giving complete protection against fire. It cannot be removed from the building or attacked at any point except the heavy, thief-proof door. The saving in burglary insurance alone will pay for the York Chest in a reasonable length of time.

INTERFERING NOISE FROM POORLY CONSTRUCTED • STAGE EQUIPMENT BREEDS DISSATISFACTION •

GET right down to the real facts. Pictures can be presented to their finest possibilities only when the stage mechanical equipment is designed and operated in proper relation to other equipment.

All eyes are focused on the stage. A mishap dare not happen — the curtains must work quickly, smoothly and accurately — the curtain track must be absolutely noiseless—the curtain controls and screen modifier must respond instantly to the operator's demands.

That's the kind of equipment Vallen builds — equipment that presents pictures absolutely perfect, without noise or distraction and creates an atmosphere of glamour and distinction that satisfies to the fullest extent the desires of criticol theatre-goers.

Vallen theatrical equipment has been used for fifteen years, without one complaint, in the world's leading theatres which is abundant proof that Vallen equipment can improve any presentation and is unoffected by the industry's chonges.

Is Your Theatre Lighting Out of Date?

Your present lighting system may be only two or three years old——but still out of date. Theatre lighting systems have developed rapidly in the last few years—and we have been leaders in this rapid development.

Competition is so keen in the motion picture theatre business that you owners and managers cannot be too careful in making certain that your patrons are well pleased with your theatre and its arrangements. Antiquated lighting often drives away your more particular patrons.

It is our business to advise with owners of theatres regarding their lighting systems. We will gladly place the complete facilities of our organization at your disposal in determining what is needed to bring your system right up to the minute. And there is no obligation on your part when you take advantage of this advisory service.

New Sound Head From National

Using Carl Zeiss objective lens for a new lens system, National Sound Systems has developed a new sound head for projectors. The lens system is said to be based on a new principle which eliminates condensers and slits or apertures. A simple converter in conjunction with the objective lens takes light from any source and of any shape filament, states National.

Should recording be improved sufficiently to warrant, the beam may be narrowed to .0005 by exchange of converter, which consists of an optical-glass ground lens mounted in a holder.

The sound head, just developed, has a two-stage resistance coupled unit head amplifier with two 226 tubes and integral assembly, completely mounted sponge rubber. National states the amplifier is licensed by Vreeland Corp.

Kaplan Code to Protect Booth

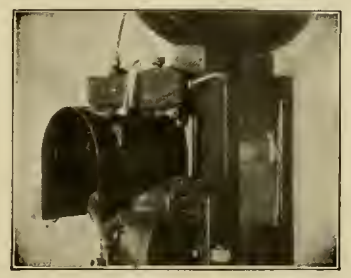
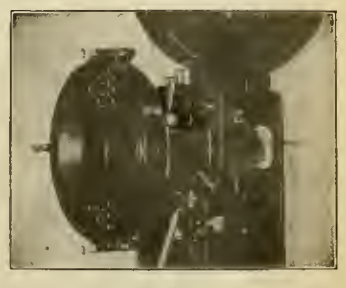
An unusual code of protection for exhibitors has been developed by Sam Kaplan, president of M. P. Operators' Union, Local 306, of Greater New York, who has assigned a corps of sound projectionists and engineers to regularly visit every union house in the territory to check up on various mechanical phases of projection and sound reproduction.

The service, a voluntary offering on the part of the local union is without charge to exhibitors. Members of the check-up crew, in addition to their other duties, are available day and night to serve in an emergency. With the intricacies of sound developed many minor factors which may influence the delivery of a perfect performance, and these men were first tested for their capability of quickly correcting any fault that may develop. Any operator caught smoking in the booth is instantly dismissed, not by the theatre but by the union itself. Likewise, a man leaving the side of his machine while it is operating is summoned before the executive board and severely penalized. Should an emergency arise and the operator be forced to leave his booth, he must first call a relief operator and turn over supervision of the booth to him.



Other regulations, violation of which call for dismissal or severe union penalties, include:



1. All fire department regulations must be rigidly adhered to.
2. The booth must be in a clean and sanitary condition at all times. No oil or waste on the floor. No pieces of film on the floor, no dirt of any kind permitted.
3. All ventilating shafts must be free and clear of all dirt and dust.
4. No doubling of film permitted.
5. Absolutely no visitors permitted in booth.
6. No eating in the booth allowed.
7. All film must be carefully inspected before running. Any imperfections in print must be noted and reported to theatre manager.
8. Any and all fires must be reported immediately.
9. Before starting show, operator must see that machines are in perfect condition, check up on all sound apparatus and have on hand all necessary supplies such as extra carbons, amplifier tubes, exciter lamps and photo electric cells.
10. All films not actually in use must be kept in cabinets.
11. All fire and sand pails must be in place and pyrene extinguishers must be inspected and full.
12. Working schedule must be posted in a prominent place.
13. No changing of shifts or of days off is permitted without permission of the executive board.
14. Any or all questions of doubt in regard to any procedure must be submitted to the inspectors who are the official emissaries of the union. Appeals from their decisions may be made to the executive board.

In creating this inspection service, it is said, Kaplan had in mind the perfection of a broad economic principle as applied to the organized labor movement. Under his leadership Local 306 has taken a position whereby the union makes it a part of its function to see that its members are kept up to date in every branch and detail of the intricate scientific knowledge made necessary by the advent of talking pictures and with a selected corps of inspectors working in intimate cooperation with the individual operators in the booths the often technically complicated discoveries of the sound engineers are interpreted and worked out for the operator in a simple, comprehensive and practical manner with especial reference to its direct application to his individual local problem.

Equipment in the Laboratory Stage

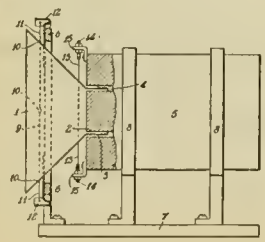
IMPROVEMENTS in sound reproducers predominate in the group of new equipment patented at the U. S. Government Patents Office at Washington, from which reports on new motion picture devices, trade-marks and designs are received regularly for this department. Copies of any of the patents cited below may be obtained by sending fifteen cents (15c) to the Patent Editor of this publication for each copy desired.

The current group of new devices for which patents were recently granted follows:



1,777,283. SOUND-PRODUCING DEVICE. Austin B. Cosgrave, Beachwood, N. J., assignor to The Gamewell Company, Newton Upper Falls, Mass., a Corporation of Massachusetts. Filed Apr. 6, 1929. Serial No. 353,213. 12 Claims. (Cl. 116—147.)

1. A siren having a stator, a rotor, driving means, means actuated by the driving means for shifting the relative position axially of the rotor and stator, the same comprising interengaging, relatively movable members, one presenting an internally threaded dash-pot cylinder having closed ends and the other an externally threaded dash-pot piston, one of said members being movable axially with relation to the other on relative rotation thereof, said cylinder having a restricted passage connecting the opposite ends of said cylinder about said piston for establishing a driving connection between the rotor and driving means through said axial movement and through the engagement of said piston with an end of said cylinder.

1,778,671. SUSPENSION MEANS FOR SOUND REPRODUCING DEVICES. Douglas Heather Johnson, Coombe Pines, Kingston Hill, England. Filed Sept. 24, 1928, Serial No. 308,047, and in Great Britain, Mar. 15, 1928. 12 Claims. (Cl. 181—31).

1. In a sound reproducing device comprising a vibrating diaphragm formed of material capable of being distorted within itself by driving impulses corresponding to sound waves, flexible means supporting said diaphragm at a plurality of points, said flexible supporting means being arranged relative to said surface of the diaphragm to permit free movement thereof in a direction parallel with the driving force and to permit the diaphragm to be freely deviated from its normal shape wyhen vibrating.

1,778,402. ELECTROMAGNETIC SOUND REPRODUCER. Percy Rootes, Windsor, England, assignor to Brandes Laboratories, Inc., Newark, N. J., a Corporation of New Jersey. Filed June 11, 1926. Serial No. 115,210. 4 Claims. (Cl. 179—146.)

1. A loud speaker reproducer comprising in combination an apertured panel structure, a frame member arranged to snugly fit within said apertured panel structure, a conical shaped sound reproducing diaphragm, an electromagnetic driver carried by said frame member, and a plurality of abutments carried by said panel structure for engagement by said frame member for supporting said frame member in said panel structure for acoustically coupling said conical shaped sound reproducing diaphragm with said panel structure.

Reopens Florida House

Tarpo Springs, Fla.—The Royal, which has been dark this summer, has been reopened by H. Pitman, former owner of the two Clearwater houses which he sold to the Sparks circuit. # Unscrupulous and Malicious Misrepresentation
an Old and Discredited Art
Refined and Brought Up to Date

A certain large distributor of theatre supplies has recently circulated a statement to the effect that beaded sound screens are not approved by the manufacturers of the various sound reproducing systems.

The Da-Lite Screen Company brands this statement to be utterly false and intended to be misleading in so far as it affects their product. All types of Da-Lite Sound Screens have been approved at all times since their introduction. Before you spend your money, investigate. If you cannot buy Da-Lite Screens from your local dealer, write direct for samples and particulars.

BETTER PROJECTION PAYS

TODAY audiences know good projection. They may not use technical terms in discussing it, but they do discuss it. They may not walk out on poor projection, but they avoid the theatre where it is permitted.

GOOD PROJECTION IN MANY CASES IS THE DECIDING ELEMENT WHICH DETERMINES PATRONAGE AT A THEATRE

The theatre manager may not be responsible for the theatre site, for the quality of productions booked, for the equipment and decoration of the house, or even for the extent of advertising which is limited by an exacting advertising budget. But projection is something for which he is responsible. He cannot be efficient if he cannot supervise projection. There are instances where managers spend time complaining about the quality of photoplays available, when projection at their theatres is so defective that discriminating patrons would avoid the theatre no matter what was on the program. Good projection is demanded today from everyone—from executives at the studio who know that poor projection can ruin a good photoplay, right down to the patrons at the theatre.

DEFECTIVE PROJECTION CAN MAKE SATISFACTORY ENTERTAINMENT IMPOSSIBLE

Why is projection important? The very nature of motion-picture entertainment makes it so. During such entertainment patrons like to feel that they are part of the story, living the action—moving, fighting, fearing, thrilling, moving on and conquering with the characters on the screen. Thus they live what might be called an "illusion." They are carried away to the scene of the action, or, better still, find themselves right in the action. This illusion makes entertainment satisfactory. It cannot be satisfactory if something happens to spoil the illusion—something that reminds the patron that he or she is sitting in a theatre chair looking at a two-dimensional surface covered with light and shadow. Defective projection prevents the patron from slipping right into the story, and living through it with the characters. Defective projection can jerk the patron right out of the action of the story and spoil the illusion that is being lived through.

The quality of projection depends in some way upon the manager's supervision. He is responsible for every detail of operation, and this includes projection. This does not imply that the manager should be blundering and interfering with the projectionist. The manager who tries to interfere without knowing what it is all about, is just as much at fault as the ignorant, over-cautious manager who lets projection go on without any supervision because he is afraid to speak. The ideal condition exists when the theatre manager is familiar with the problems and can talk the language of the projectionist—and when the projectionist, taking real pride in his work, desirous of putting the best possible projection in the same at the least possible cost, is capable and conscientious and thoroughly interested in the welfare of the theatre. Then the manager and the projectionist can discuss common problems, each confident in the practical common sense and the interest of the other. Poor projection has put theatres out of business and in many cases it was often someone else and not the projectionist who was responsible.

ECONOMIES

CARELESS MAINTENANCE OF EQUIPMENT IS THE CAUSE OF MANY WASTED DOLLARS.

Parts Should Be Ordered Long Enough in Advance to Prevent Emergencies and to Save the Expense Entailed by Telegrams.

If the manager is properly informed, many economies can be practiced and projection can be properly supervised. The manager who can distinguish good projection from bad projection, watching it from different positions in the house, can help the projectionist whose opinion is based on what he sees only from the porthole of the projection room. When defects are noticed, inquiry should be made into the cause of the defect and provision made so that it will not happen again.

As far as the manager is concerned, good projection depends upon three things: technical knowledge, good business sense, and a personality that will develop the proper relationship with the projectionist. All three are essential. Intelligent supervision will be difficult unless there exists a spirit of co-operation and mutual understanding between the manager and the projectionist.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

THEATRE MAINTENANCE

NOT so long ago we attended a meeting of a group of managers from one of the divisions in the middle west.

As we look back upon that event we can recall most of the important things which were discussed and talked about by everybody at the meeting.

But one topic was particularly conspicuous by its absence. Namely: maintenance and care of the theatre's equipment.

It sounds rather strange that despite the tremendous cost of keeping a theatre in proper condition through repairs and replacements, this one subject should never be referred to when the men are assembled for the purpose of going over other items regarding their work.

They did dwell long and wordily on how to put over this, that or the other picture. Which, we agree, is important too, at these meetings.

For some funny reason, especially among the circuits, they believe that home office supervision of equipment is more efficient than if left in the hands of the house manager. If they took that attitude with the purchasing of equipment we could see where the idea was good, but so far as the immediate attention to wear and tear and replacements are concerned, that's the house manager's job, so why not impress it on him.

He should become well acquainted with every part of the theatre, especially those portions which are inclined to cause costly breakdowns and frequent repairs. In this way he soon starts doping out ways and means of minimizing such happenings. If he is going to be schooled to just make a report, that's all you can ever expect of him.

But looking at this phase of theatre operation from the manager's point of view ought to prompt every showman to take a greater interest in his theatre's equipment than ever before. It is an asset which he will need badly if he is ever placed in charge of a group of houses and must be responsible for, not only the business those houses do, but also for the way they are kept insofar as their operating apparatus and furnishings are concerned.

A little knowledge in all departments means a better understanding of every little detail pertaining to the operation of the house. He should know all about the sound and projection equipment. He ought to know about the way the seats are kept, how carpets can be repaired. How to look for trouble before trouble sneaks up on him and finds him unprepared. How the ventilating and heating equipment operates and what parts are apt to need attention or replacements.

All rolled into one, the house manager needs a lot of education on the subject of theatre maintenance and equipment and regardless of how he acquires that education, he should make sure that he gets it.

Watch The Lighting!

What would your answer be if someone said to you, "How often do you make a personal inspection of your theatre front?" Remember, when we say personal inspection, we don't mean glancing up at the marquee when you walk into the house or sending the head usher out to see if the lights are turned on or off.

Inspecting this portion of your theatre should be a careful study of the entire marquee and signs. Noting how the attraction letters have been placed, whether the lamps are burning behind those attraction letters, also whether they are burning back of the banks. (Many's the dollar's been burnt up in this popular form of waste.)

We know many a big shot on the major circuits who get their first impressions of the manager by noting the condition of the front and lighting in general as they approach the theatre.

Here is a very small detail of your complicated job, so why not give it just a little more attention than you have in the past? Keep that eagle eye of your's pealed for bulbs not burning. Try re-dipping and changing the color scheme of the flashing border every six months or so. It will give the front a new appearance and liven things up in general. Clean out the theatre name channels and give them a coat of white paint once in a while. These are only small items, yet they stamp you as wide-awake in the eyes of those who pay attention to such things.

Shulgold Debates On Necessity Of Patching Up Small Items

"Chick" Lewis has asked me whether I find it advisable to make minor repairs around the theatre or call in specialists to do the work. His question came via Western Union and the message was received over the phone. His last crack in the wire asked me to wire whether I would comply or not. I replied that I would. The question, at the time, seemed a simple one. But it was not till the following morning, when the message was delivered in the mail, that the task assumed gigantic proportions. When Chick's wire was read to me over the phone there was one word that either was skipped or I did not hear. It seems that Chick wants an article for publication. It's that word "article" that strikes terror into me. If Chick had just simply asked the question, I could simply have replied "yes" or "no." But "an article" implies that what I say is to be read critically by the "old heads" in the business and, even worse, may be considered as an article of guidance by others. Quite a responsibility for me. But here goes:

Much depends on the talent possessed by the employes on the theatre payroll. I have a janitor who is handy with tools and whom I can trust with general repairs of a minor nature. I have properly gauged his ability and know his limitations. I make a practice of consulting not only my janitor, but my doorman and operators, as well, concerning most minor repairs. These men consist of the entire male element in my personnel. I find that they all have ideas, good and bad, and it remains for me to select the best. The operators, of course, are limited to suggestions, but the janitor and doorman are the men who carry out the ideas. By consulting them, it seems that a spirit of co-operation is engendered and if I should decide that my janitor and doorman are capable of making the necessary repair, they lend themselves willingly and take genuine pride in the successful accomplishment of the task at hand.

To be more specific, if the carpet happens to be torn from the floor, I find my janitor wholly capable of tacking it down; if a hat wire comes loose from a seat, there is no sense in calling in an upholsterer to screw it down—my janitor can do that; minor paint jobs are also done by either janitor or doorman. If a seat should become torn, that is a job for the upholsterer. Carpentry work, of a simple nature, is satisfactorily accomplished without calling in a carpenter at the union scale.

In short, it is all a matter of judgment, and the proper utilization of your employees.

Johnson And Polacek Ask What You Did On 'Animal Crackers'

"What did you do for 'Animal Crackers'?" ask Heinie Johnson and Fred Polacek, artist and assistant manager, respectively, of the Ritz Theatre in Big Spring, Texas. They then go on and declare:

"It gave you an unusual chance to appeal to children—to make an appeal to the child that is still left in adults—to make a radical change in the appearance of your front—to steal away the glory that belongs to the circus, with its clowns and animals—to take advantage of the reputation Marx Bros. created for themselves in "Cocoanuts"—in short, it gave you a rare chance to use your old bean to sell tickets. Did you do it justice?????"

After setting forth the above question, the showmen continue and say:

"Before Johnson and Polacek map out a front for the R. & R. Ritz Theatre, Big Spring, Texas, they think over all angles of the picture which they are about to exploit, thereby getting the result such as you see in the photograph of their front for 'Animal Crackers.' They did this job for their manager, Mr. J. Y. Robb. . . . COULD A MANAGER OR THE THEATRE-GOING PUBLIC BE VERY PLEASED WITH THIS COMIC FRONT? You be the judge."

It can be clearly seen by now that Johnson and Polacek were determined to secure great value from their unique front. So it is not surprising to learn that:

"They didn't stop, they went farther . . . and gave the Zebra cut-out to a local hardware dealer for a centerpiece in a toy window after its use on the theatre front, thereby creating good-will of the kind it takes to get local windows for future tie-ups. They also spread themselves on their newspaper ad copy, placing great stress on the idea that the show was better than any circus."

As if to combat a question that might possibly arise, they say: "Naturally, their exploitation on the next few pictures will contrast very greatly, and therefore will be more effective than would have been the case had they not plugged 'Animal Crackers' in the way they did. . . . Their tip is not only to think of the picture at hand when planning exploitation, but also to keep one eye on past and future jobs. Often you can work exploitation of one picture in sharp contrast, thereby creating greater variety to your work as a whole, which is 'keeping out of the rut,' and is a powerful weapon for ticket selling."

We are sure that the club will be more than interested in looking over this latest front that Johnson and Polacek have turned out at the Ritz. And we also know that they will have some more surprises for us in the near future.

If Lighting System Does A Nose-Dive, Skiffington Is Set

Every showman knows that it is "the public first."

If he has the show the public is with him.

If he has all the elements that go to make the show enjoyable, his public stays with him.

One of the best things I know is the emergency lighting system tucked away in some forgotten corner of the theatre.

Let me tell you of a little incident of recent date here.

Unexpectedly, the entire lighting circuit of this city went out of commission. The city was thrown into darkness anywhere from 20 to 35 minutes, depending on the supply. Our downtown theatrical section was without lights for 20 minutes. We lost 20 minutes of our show. What would have been any neater than an emergency lighting plant? Into service in almost less time than it takes to tell it. "Juice" coming through the circuit as usual and, best of all, your performance going on without any appreciable interruption.

It is just such times as this when a little thought for "what may happen" can easily save you the dissatisfaction that comes from "out front" and which rises to fulsome praise, when you have given attention to little details.

Personally, I'm for the theatre that generates its own electricity. If the city lights fail, you're sitting on top of the world; if your own system breaks down, simply switch over to the city lines. You're always on the safe side. In all probability both sources would never fail at the same time.

By all means the emergency lighting plant wherever possible.

'Jimmy' Macris Had A Special Parade That Plugged Show

Following up his declaration that he was going to try to be an active member, Orestes "Jimmy" Macris, the Assistant Manager of the Temple Theatre in Wellsville, New York, has sent us in a contribution.

When the house played "Anybody's War" a short time ago, Macris hired two boys, dressed in costume and blackfaced, to carry a sign about town plugging the film. The stunt was pulled on the day before Hallowe'en, and every kid in the town was dressed up in fantastic costume in preparation for the night's activities. About fifty of the kids followed the two boys, with the result that it looked like a parade. The stunt created plenty of comment and the theatre reported additional business as a result of it. We are showing a photo of the ballyhoo and also a sample of the art work used by the theatre. Look them over.

This is Jimmy's first contribution since joining the Club. We feel that since he is displaying such activity, he is going to continue it. Incidentally, Jimmy's father manages the theatre, so you see he should be turning out some fine work. Let's hear from you again, Jimmy.

Uniforms!

Here is a subject calling for more than passing attention. If you don't believe it, just keep your eyes open the next time you go theatre-visiting. Note, particularly, how neat or untidy the ushers' and doorman's uniforms are kept.

If they look ancient, sloppy, unpressed or dirty, you can bet your bottom dollar that that's the way the whole theatre is being run. If, on the contrary, you find them new-looking, clean, well pressed and neat, again we say, that's the way the rest of the theatre is being run.

Whoever said that a man can be judged by the company he keeps could well afford to add that the manager can be judged by the way his employees look. And that's no fable, either.

But don't overlook the fact that just because you spend a lot of dough for beautiful looking and well made uniforms, that the obligation ends there. Nix. Like an automobile, it's not the original cost, it's the upkeep. And ditto for those uniforms. If you don't keep them clean, well pressed and new-looking, they'll go to the dogs in less time than it takes to think it over.

Some houses furnish the staff with uniforms and then make them keep those outfits in perfect condition all the time. We can't pass judgment on that scheme because we don't know whether you are giving your boys enough to warrant their paying for pressing and cleaning, but whether they or the theatre foots the bills, those uniforms must be spic and span all the time.

And as a closing word to those smaller houses who maintain boys on the floor without any uniforms, may we inform you that if the house is worth keeping open it's worth buying a few uniforms. The cost can be gauged by what you can afford to spend.

Borland Considers Neighborhood Appeal Paramount Factor

In developing a clientele for a neighborhood theatre, there are three essential factors to be considered, and these three factors combined, in my opinion, constitute the appeal necessary to evercome the trend of people for downtown shows. These three factors are COMFORT and BEAUTY—SERVICE—ADVERTISING.

No manager who overlooks any one of these items can succeed in putting his house over. The one without the other two is useless; two of them alone will not suffice. In this article I will give only a brief outline of these factors and, I may say, features which I have stressed in my managering effort to make my theatres pay, and what measure of success I have had is due to strict adherence to them.

COMFORT AND BEAUTY.—The essential points of comfort are as follows: Restfulness and proper vision. Projection and volume control are very important. Much is accomplished in this connection.

Beauty in interior decorations and in furnishing the foyer is a primary requisite. A deft touch of the season's flowers, and a radio in the foyer and lobby add greatly to the desirability of the house.

SERVICE.—All employees are put through a period of training in the manner and matter of dealing with the public. The ushers and cashiers are taught the little courtesy niceties that mean so much and cost so little. Also, a meeting of these employes is called weekly for the open discussion of matters of service.

ADVERTISING—Attractive program blanks, mailing lists, lobby displays, vie with each other as to which is the most important. But I have always contended that they are each equally and collectively important. Then there are also the shop window tie-up, and special pluggers for special events.

It is well to use the front page of your program blank for personal messages to your public. If your house has first-run pictures or lowest admission prices, or both, you cannot stress these facts too often or too much.

The above is, briefly, the plan I follow when taking over a run-down theatre and endeavor to make it a paying proposition as quickly as possible.

Of course, not much can be gleaned or gained from this broad discussion, since the details are pre-eminently important. However, in my next article, under the heading "How to Get Comfort and Beauty," I will have for you, I am sure some real pointers in the right direction. This will be followed by detailed articles on advertising and service.

A number of the things I have enumerated under these various headings are both obvious and generally known, but they are important enough to bear constant repetition, and unless you make it a rigid rule to follow them religiously they are of no benefit or consequence whatsoever.

Manager, Armitage Theatre; General Manager Quality Amusement Corporation, Chicago, Ill.

Novel Display in Window Was Aid to Slee's Showselling

It has been some time since we last heard from Warren A. Slee, manager of the Colonial Theatre in Allentown, Pa., but since he has been very busy selling his shows through the summer season, we will forgive his not being as active as as usual, and express the hope that, since he is doing some good work on the new releases, we will hear from him often.

When he played "Follow Through" recently, he arranged some fine tie-ups with local sporting goods stores. As the picture has a golf theme throughout, it was an easy matter for Slee to effect the tie-up. But something that wasn't so easy was the dressing of the windows. Plenty of time was put in on this angle. Look at the photo that we are showing. It will bear out our statement. An art piece in the center, miniature cut-outs on the side and with imitation grass as greens were the parts about which the display was arranged. Shoes, golf clubs, and golf balls were plugged.

One of the best things that a showman can do is to arrange window displays that, in addition to selling the picture effectively, also carry an effect of beauty. It is not necessary to place your picture title all over the window so that the dealer's goods can't be seen. Displays can be so arranged that they will react to the mutual advantage of all persons concerned, and if they do this the way is opened for similar tie-ups in the future. What do you think?

Thanks, Warren, for letting us see this one. We hope to hear from you again in the very near future.

Minor Repairs Are Allotted Immediate Attention By Sams

Having an independent theatre in a small town, I have designated my assistant operator, maintenance man, in charge of the up-keep and repairing of all equipment. He has a mechanical turn of mind and is quite capable of this assignment filling it to complete satisfaction.

His duty is to make regular and frequent inspections of seats, rest rooms, ventilating equipment, floor coverings, electrical fixtures, etc., making immediate repairs wherever needed. On these trips it is also his duty to see that cleanliness prevails and that all machinery is properly lubricated.

It is both dangerous and costly to neglect minor repairs; seats will soon fall apart, motors will burn out, and carpet will become torn and ruined. Getting a specialist may then be necessary.

The theatre cannot afford specialists for minor repairs because of the cost and delay in getting them to the job. The maintenance man is on the job every morning and is taking a great pride in keeping the theatre in first-class condition.

My experience has been that whenever a capable man is on the salary list it is 100% more practical to make minor repairs, such as seats, carpets, etc., than to call in people who specialize in such work.

A. F. SAMS, JR.,
Playhouse, Statesville, N. C.

Courtesy to Patrons Is Key With Which Tate Opens Good-Will

The proper floor service in our theatres is one of the best mediums of advertising and creating good will among our patrons.

Most theatres have a Lost and Found Department, but its proper handling is being neglected by many of our men. They are not being sufficiently attentive to the patrons who report lost articles. A regular procedure with form letters and cards should be in operation at all theatres. If it is impossible to secure form letters and cards, a note book should be properly kept with sufficient data listed. It would be advisable to delegate the cashier to list all complaints concerning lost articles; she, in turn, can turn the complaints over to the proper man. Regret letters can be used to notify people if articles do not turn up and phone calls substituted when the articles have been found.

A very important phase of advertising our pictures and bringing patrons back into the theatre is the proper sound projection. The person on the floor delegated to watch the sound should do so very carefully and thoughtfully. He should be very cautious and avoid letting the volume become too loud or too weak.

A basic source of proper floor operation is the proper selection of men. In making selections, we must not compromise when we find it difficult to get employees of the type which we require. Care must be exercised in selecting employees who want to work. They must be the type that can be developed, and who desire to become connected with our business. Their background and living conditions must insure us of these qualifications.

Of course, the cleanliness of the lobby and inside floors cannot be over-emphasized. Paper and ticket stub accumulation on the floors requires careful vigilance. The men should form the habit of detecting and picking up immediately the paper, stubs, or any sort of accumulation.

A very good way of pepping up the staff service on the floor is the Weekly Service Meeting. The time allotted for the meeting should be divided so the staff may derive the most benefit. A period devoted to a general discussion by every one present, a few minutes for constructive criticism, a few minutes given to an outsider on some topic that would be of benefit to the group and the last few minutes devoted to suggestions submitted by the staff would constitute an excellent meeting procedure.

EARLE M. TATE,

The Manager's Office!

We've visited about twenty managers in the past week or two and while we hate to admit it, we can only recall ONE lone office which was kept in some semblence of order. The rest looked as though a cyclone swept through them.

We are wondering what impression visitors get when they leave the office of a theatre manager whose desk looks like an invitation to "try and find me." And the drama of the manager trying to find a paper or letter while said visitor stands by and wonders what in hell kind of a business man he can be who lets his desk and papers become such a confused mass.

And then, dear brethren (?) there is that gorgeous, beautiful (more?) and "sweet" smelling cuspidor, better known among the elite as the spittoon. And the boys' aim is not what it used to be in the good old days when spittoon target practice was an art second only to showmanship.

If you must have a cuspidor in your office, for the lovapete, see that it's clean and polished. Don't make it conspicuous by its dirty appearance. Remember, you also must meet some of those ladies' committee members in your office.

And if you have a window, no one will accuse you of being a pansy just because it happens to be draped with a curtain or hanging. And that goes for a vase with a flower or two on the desk. These little things immediately stamp a manager as being a good business man, and that's the kind of an impression you must leave with each and every one whose business takes them into your office.

Pay as much attention to your private office as you do to the general appearance of your theatre. Insist on it being kept spotless at all times and then do your own bit by disposing of papers, letters, etc., in a neat, business-like way. If some of those letters and papers require further attention before filing, create a box or folder marked "open items." Ditto for reports, check-ups and everything else coming into your office and requiring your attention. But don't cultivate that apparently popular habit of looking at it and then throwing it on the desk, repeating the process until the mess looks like the picture we've described above.

Klein Plans to Run Toy Matinees; Are You Doing the Same?

In an effort to build up good will and to overcome local opposition of a prejudicial nature, Joe Klein, manager of the Strand Theatre, Shenandoah, Penn., has enlisted the co-operation and support of the local Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs on a special children's matinee at which the admission price will be a toy, broken or otherwise. These toys, through the aid of Boy Scouts, will be repaired and distributed Christmas day to the poor children of Shenandoah by the Kiwanis and Rotary Club.

Klein has also built up a Friday night "pep" meeting at which the local high school football team appears with cheer leaders and puts on a short stage program. Attendance on Friday nights has increased because of these school affairs.

These activities have set Klein in strong with his town, and they no doubt help him immeasureably in keeping business up to par. How about giving us some more dope on your work, Joe, and at the same time include a photo and your biography, so that we can give you an introduction?

Keeping Seats In Repair!

The seats of a theatre are, perhaps, one of the items requiring constant attention due to broken parts and ripped leather. Some houses well remember, or may still have to contend with, hoodlums who from sheer delight plus a destructive nature will rip the leather on a theatre seat.

Aside from the annoyance to other patrons there is always the danger of law suits and damages from these causes. So it should behoove all of you to make certain—in-between regular visits of the seat repair men—that these conditions do not reach large proportions.

Extra chair seats should always be kept on hand and it is then only a matter of a few moments for one of your staff to change a ripped seat. Even in smaller houses we have found several dozen extra seats for just that purpose.

Re-covering can then be done by your janitor or porter with leather that should match the chair upholstery. Keep a supply of this stuff on hand all the time and see that your seat covering is always in tip-top shape. It will save you plenty of kicks, and besides, it is real economy when handled right.

Upkeep + Repairs + Replacements Keeps Milton Korach Active

Several months ago I incorporated the phrase in an article I wrote for the Motion Picture News as follows: "There is no one-man organization," meaning a manager, to be successful in every department of theatre operation, must have full co-operation of his employes. Therefore, I carry the same thought right on through in checking up my replacements and repairs. Wasted depreciation in the theatres throughout the country on equipment, replacements, repairs, amounts to millions of dollars.

It is impossible for any single manager alone to keep a check-up on the above without the assistance of his employees. From the cleaning department up, every department must give me a daily check of needs, repairs and replacements of said departments, not once a week or once a month or yearly, but daily I get this check-up.

Never let this very important duty of theatre upkeep get away from you until it amounts to thousands and is noticeable by the patrons and the men who own your theatre.

Let us start at the stage. The man in charge reports immediately replacement of bulbs, draperies that have become shabby, lines of rope old and worn, motors and flashers for signs, and the organ, motor and everything pertaining to the stage. On receiving this report I go to that department for investigation of their wants. If they have anything on hand that can be utilized I make them use it. A good many theatres have a stock of so-called obsolete lamps that on a good many occasions can be redipped and answer the purpose. At the same time not taking away from the beauty of lighting effects.

My cleaning department reports, loose or broken seats, torn or worn carpet that is remedied immediately. The porter reports on the sanitation such as the men's room and ladies' room regarding the plumbing, broken containers, for soap, towels, etc.

All my ushers are instructed to report immediately any and everything that requires repair or replacement. Every one is on the outlook and takes a daily pride in the up-keep of the theatre. Then, instead of two eyes watching, there are dozens or more ever on the alert.

I do not keep any employee who does not take a pride in their theatre. This is one of the first requisites I demand. Now, the most important department is the booth. This department is never slighted or cheapened for actual wants if they are justified. This department receives my personal attention each day. It must function perfectly. Therefore its needs must be met immediately with the best that the market has to offer. It is what I call—"the show must go on"—and must go on perfectly if you are to stay in business. However, you do not have to be extravagant in this department—just cautious and careful. If tubes burn out check up the number of hours on the guarantee. Replacements will be forthcoming if they haven't lived up to the guarantee. By all means carry spare parts that are absolutely essential and as improvements come into the market improve your equipment. Do not get the idea that this will do, or that will do; you must make progress. Don't be cheap and neglect your projection booth for the sake of a few dollars and torture your audience, which is being done today in hundreds of theatres throughout the country, where a few dollars spent would bring you better returns.

I would like every manager who reads this article to go into the battery room and look over same. I can safely say there are many theatres where batteries are hooked up with wire from one terminal to another instead of lead, the latter being durable for years. Another thing, each terminal should be greased at least every six months. This avoids corrosion, loss of charge and dead batteries. Consult your engineer and see if I am not right in this respect. I am sure you will prolong the life of your batteries and they will service you better. This change is real economy.

In conclusion I wish to say that in summing up upkeep, needed repairs, replacements in theatre operation I cannot make it too emphatic that the daily check-up, and immediate replacements, will keep your theatre depreciation down. Some of the things to remember of importance is that oil is cheaper than motors, and in buying replacements do not shop for the cheapest, but secure the very best available. You will find this greater economy in the long run. However, as I said in the opening of this article, you must get the co-operation of every department in utilizing everything they have on hand before buying in order to avoid waste.

Capitol Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Clayton Tunstill Was Alert and Grabbed a Flock of Publicity

Another example of wide-awake showmanship is seen in this stunt, made possible by the alertness of Clayton Tunstill, manager of the Lyric Theatre in Brownwood, Tex., who crashed right through an opposition feature for a touch-down that helped exploit his feature picture.

The Business and Professional Women's Club staged a mock wedding at the Armory on Armistice Night (opening day of picture) with 2,000 people in attendance.

Tunstill, taking advantage of an ideal tie-up, arranged to have a boy and girl dressed in old-fashioned clothes to attend the wedding. They mingled around arm in arm among the crowd. On the back of the girl was pinned a placard reading, "Clara Bow in HER WEDDING NIGHT," and on the boy, "Showing at the Lyric Theatre Now." Prizes were given by the Women's Club for the most unusual dressed couple attending the mock wedding—and the theatre's entrant won honorable mention.

After the mock wedding was over, the remainder of the evening was given over to an old fashioned square dance. And the theatre's entrant stayed through that—doing the old square steps and still carrying the banners on their backs. The theatre's "old fashioned couple" at the affair caused lots of favorable comment and undoubtedly helped in putting the picture over to splendid receipts.

The publicity and word-of-mouth comment gathered by Tunstill as a result of this stunt more than assisted him in the successful selling of the picture. Thanks, Clayton, for passing this along to us. Give us some more, will you? We are sure that they will be both interesting and helpful to your fellow members in the Managers' Round Table Club.

In view of the fact that a great deal of interest had been aroused in the picture through the use of these angles, it went over to excellent box-office for Tunstill. The merchants, too, profited by their participation in the campaign. So with everybody pleased, what more could be asked for?

"Get 'Em In Quick"—Sez Briggs Stressing Importance of Speed

My 20 years in the show business has taught me many things and not least of these is the importance of modern equipment in the box-office and comfort for the little girl who sits in the glass cage and is first to greet our patrons.

On cold, wintry nights the patron is most anxious to get the necessary evil of buying a ticket over with as soon as possible and get into the theatre where it is warm and comfortable. Therefore it is of paramount importance that he be kept waiting no longer than is absolutely necessary. This is when the ticket machine and the automatic change maker pay for themselves many times over and the comfort of the cashier, who as a result is able to work faster and more efficiently and greet our patrons with a smile, means much toward adding extra dollars to the right side of the ledger.

There is very little profit in spending thousands of dollars annually on advertising and exploitation; in planning and scheming to get write-ups and publicity; creating new ideas and working the old ones overtime to get people to your box-office if you can't handle them quickly and efficiently and greet them pleasantly after you get them there.

The same applies to summer as well as winter, proper ventilation in the box-office will help make the cashier comfortable, and therefore less irritable, more pleasant and aids efficiency. An overheated and stuffy box-office in winter will cause even the most alert cashier to feel sleepy and act groggy. Therefore, ventilation and proper heating and cooling for the box-office is the one thing that should be, but very seldom is, given first consideration in the building or remodeling of a theatre.

However, it is not necessary to wait until the old theatre falls down from old age to remodel this very important part of the theatre. A little thought, a little work and a small amount of money will do wonders and no one can fail to see the difference or appreciate the advantages of a modernly equipped box-office properly heated and ventilated—especially after they have tried to get along with the usual coop.

This was brought forcibly to my attention a few years ago when I took over the management of a house that had been allowed to become run down through the lack of its owners and managers to keep up with the times in the matter of improvements and type of entertainment.

My first thought, naturally, was to stir up interest in the old place and improvement of the program was the first step and a big ballyhoo the second, with the result that we had a big turnout for the first night of the "new policy." However, the old roll tickets and hand methods of making change jeopardized our possibilities and caused loss of business and inconvenience to our patrons.

I corrected this condition just as soon as it was possible to get modern equipment installed and the difference this made in the receipts, the general appearance and prestige of the theatre was even admitted by the owners—and boys, you all know when that happens there must be something in it.

"BUZZ" BRIGGS,

Are Your Lavatories Clean?

We know one woman who positively refuses to patronize a certain theatre on upper Broadway in New York because the women's lavatory is so foul smelling all the time.

And when we stopped off at that theatre about ten days ago we found the men's room in the same condition.

Yet that house is equipped with the latest and most modern plumbing. Therefore, the answer can only be NEGLECT. And if that's true then the theatre needs a new manager even more than it does a new porter.

We can think of no more important part of a house manager's job than that of looking after the toilet conditions. Not just before the house opens, but several times during the day. Any time the house is crowded with youngsters it means that several trips, at no less than hourly intervals, becomes essential. Ditto for any house doing a fair amount of business.

Even in the best communities you will find one or two, so-called, smart guys who take great delight in throwing rolls of toilet paper into the bowls, stuffing up the sinks, and performing various other silly ideas in amusements. If for no other purpose, you should stroll into the toilets and lounge rooms at frequent intervals, and have the assistant and porter doing the same thing. Then those smart guys will become cautious and quit their expensive fooling. They will know they are being watched. If you are even fortunate enough to catch them, go the limit, just as you would with one who annoys the women-folks in your house. One or two examples of stiff fines and a lecture from the judge will soon eliminate this nuisance.

If you have no matron to look after the women's rest and lounge rooms, send your cashier in every hour or so. Get someone else if the cashier can't be spared. But by all means, make sure that those lavatories are clean in appearance and not offensive to the folks who must use them.

W. H. WHYTE Says:

"Let me congratulate you for your publication of the Six Months' Club Index. I think it is a marvelous thing for any manager to pick out any form of stunt or gag at an instant, such as you have listed in your index. There can be no reason for any one of us sitting around wondering what to do next with all this information before us."

Hucknall Gave The Town A Laugh Gag On "Little Accident"

A laugh gag that had them giggling out around Stockton, Calif., was pulled by John W. Hucknall, manager of the National Theatre, when "Little Accident" played the theatre.

Heralds, in the form of small cards, were made up. The cards contained a small safety pin. The copy on the cards stated: "Your Insurance Against Any Little Accident." Underneath this was placed: "Keep This Safety Pin as a Reminder to See the Laff Hit (title, playdates, stars, theatre)." The distribution of the heralds was also amusing. A man was hired to push a baby carriage about the streets. Copy on the carriage stated that the "Little Accident" was now at the National. The heralds were handed out by the man pushing the carriage.

Perhaps you would like to use a stunt of this sort. Well-known to those showmen who have been in the game for any length of time, this stunt has always been good for some laughs and effective publicity on the picture. It has been used in many ways. It is not necessary that you play "Little Accident" in order to use the stunt. It fits on any picture. The cost of making up the heralds is small. If you think it will fit in with your campaign, give it a break. Thanks, Hucknall, for letting us see this. We'd like you to know we're always interested in seeing how you can sell them.

Roof Leaks!

This suggesion is a little tardy in most parts of the country, but nevertheless it is still timely for those who may have overlooked it.

The ordinary bad spots on your theatre's roof will actually become bad leaks during the winter months when snow starts falling. Therefore, if you have not already done so, make certain that your roof and every roof on the building is in good shape to withstand the winter months.

You don't have to be told here that a slight roof leak can cause thousands of dollars worth of damage to decorations, etc. And just picture an ugly discolored mark on your beautiful ceiling from a leak on the roof.

Avoid trouble by anticipating it. Don't wait for leaks to look after repairs. Get up there NOW with your janitor and a pot of good quality plastic cement. Wherever you think a leak might exist, fix it up. If the general condition of the roofing is bad have a roof repair man go over it. Especially watching the coping. It is there that many a bad leak starts.

While on the subject of roofs, don't forget those leaders and drains. They, too, must get a little attention if you don't want them to become temperamental and troublesome.

And need you be told that a leak on the marquee roof can short circuit or burn out a lot of your marquee wiring? Certainly not. You know that already. Therefore, why wait for something to happen?

Minute Knowledge Of Equipment Aids Chidley Immeasurably

Our Theatre Corporation operates three local theatres, seating about 2,500, and in order to successfully operate these theatres, we must have an organization that is almost infallible.

Our theatres are looked upon with pride by our community; film exchange men, sound engineers, insurance inspectors and others attest to the fact that our theatres are cleaner, more up to date, and operated more efficiently than any other theatres in the Denver territory. This is not an egotistical statement to boost my own stock, but to prove that it is the entire organization that counts.

I am not going to tell you the old story that I make a periodical inspection of our projection rooms once a week to see if supplies are needed, because such is not the case. On the other hand, I am in each of the projection rooms many times each week and know what is needed. I do not ask a janitor if he needs something by being thorough familiar with the manner in which his work is performed. I know what he needs, and when he needs it. We do not have equipment break down; we prevent them from happening by giving our equipment proper care, and replacing worn or defective parts, before any cause trouble. Every motor in all the theatres is inspected and oiled every Monday morning, by one of our projectionists, who is paid overtime to do a thorough job. He, alone, is held responsible for the operation of this equipment.

The Rialto Theatre has had sound equipment since August, 1928, and the America Theatre since October, 1929, and we have never, in either theatre, forced an audience to wait five minutes for any reason.

We operate our theatre successfully because we are thorough, and teach and inspire every employe, from our substitute ushers to our projection staffs, to do their work properly. People who will not do good work cannot work for us. People who are conscientious and take pride in a job being well done enjoy being a part of our organization.

Our offices are located in one of the theatre buildings. We have one large room fitted up for a supply room in which we keep in cabinets all carbons, light globes, office supplies, kotex, tickets, and other supplies. We also have long, individual shelves for the advertising accessories for eac htheatre. About one month's supply of advertising can be laid out in order of bookings for each theatre.

Each theatre has a janitor's room in which are kept all supplies pertaining to such duties. Our projection rooms are kept neat and clean, not carbon stubs, or oily rags, and are open to the public at all times. Our projectionists are provided with first-class equipment, and in return we demand first-class work. In regard to our sound equipment: Our service engineer cooperates with the projectionists and the management in every phase of his work. He is not denied replacements or spare parts, but must bring everything through the office, where we get first-hand knowledge of the sound equipment and know its condition at all times. Any irregularity in the sound equipment is repaired before the engineer leaves town.

Our sign writer has a large, well-fitted and lighted shop, in one of the theatres, and in addition to first-class equipment to work with, is furnished with a complete stock of supplies. Needless to say, we regard his work to be equal to any seen in the larger cities.

C. H. CHIDLEY,
Rialto Theatres, Casper, Wyo.

Atmospheric Front for "Big House" Had Canton, O., Talking

Theatre fronts are one of the mediums used by showmen which find a welcome spot on the Round Table pages. The many fronts that we have shown in the past have been productive of letters from showmen all over the world, expressing their appreciation of a brother member's thoughtfulness in passing along a specially constructed art front that will, in that member's opinion, aid his colleague in the selling of the film, should he contemplate showing it. In the past, we have shown art work from almost every show spot on the globe and we are sure that the variety presented has been met with favor.

When Russell Bovim, manager of Loew's in Canton, Ohio, played "The Big House," he turned out a front that attracted so much comment from the residents of the town that we are passing it along to the Club so that you may see the object of interest and pick out the highlights. Since he has been handling the local show house, Russell has been turning out ace work and this front certainly comes up to any that has been turned out. The art work on the display was done by John Kerr, the house artist. Does he deserve a compliment? We say yes. What do you say?

The front was mainly constructed of papier mache and painted in a prison gray. Sand, blown on the wet paint, gave the "stone" a very realistic appearance. Every detail was carefully worked out. The lights were perfectly focused and sufficiently dimmed, wire guards being placed on them. Wooden bars lent an attractive and still more realistic pppeal. During the day a man in prison guard uniform patrolled up and down in front of the theatre. A man, dressed in convict costume, also performed the same office. The result of the whole gag was seen in the knockout business that the theatre enjoyed during the run of the picture. Listen, Russell! We'd like to hear from you even more often, because it seems to us that your showmansbip always contains angles that will be helpful to the rest of the Club. Oke?

Joseph F. Siccardi Is The Latest Showman From Jersey To Join

Another showman from Plainfield, New Jersey, hooks up with the Club in the person of Jos. F. Siccardi of the Liberty Theatre, an Andora Amusement Company house.

Siccardi has to do a lot of fast stepping to keep the house running along on all six cylinders. The reason for this, no doubt, is because of the other live wire showmen who are constantly displaying activity and trying to keep their houses up among the leaders. From what we know of the situation, we have a number of our members operating over on the Jersey side. Well, Joe, after all, competition is the spice of showmanship. What good would it be to have business coming in day after day? Showmen would soon be looking for new places.

In his time in the show game, Siccardi has turned out some nice work, and by reason of that fact, we hope to hear about it very soon, so that we can present it on the Club pages and pass it along to his fellow members. Give us the lowdown on your show-selling ability, Joe, and the ways and means that help you bring them up to the box-office.

"Theatre Storeroom Is Treasury of Show Necessities"—Gettier

In the modern theatre of today, the store room is one of the most important departments in your maintenance, as here must be kept at all times a sufficient supply of materials and spare parts for the smooth running of your theatre so that there is no danger of being caught short if a serious breakdown or the giving away of some of the mechanical units should happen during the showing. Especially is this true of the big theatre that is a considerable distance from a base of supplies.

In the Capitol we divide our store room into four units. The first unit contains all of the necessary spare parts that might be needed for the heating and ventilating system during the winter, or for the operation of the refrigerator system during the summer months. Here will be found a complete carpenter's and plumber's layout of tools, also extra belting for the fans, gaskets, etc., for the refrigerator machine, its water pumps, pipe lines and condensers.

In the next department will be found a full supply for the artist. This is in the way of all water and oil colors, various sizes of sheet cardboard, compoboard, small lumber for frame work, colored papers, and metallic colors. Also in this department will be found spare parts for cutawls, and a small jig-saw as used on heavier work.

In the third department are the supplies for the theatre proper, a full stock of all sizes and all colors of electric light bulbs as used on the stage, in the auditorium, and for the large electric sign, attraction boards, and marquee lighting. All supplies for cleaning purposes such as liquid soaps, deodorants, cleaning compounds, and the necessary cleaning utensils are kept here. A full set of brushes for all motors and generators throughout the house with a complete set of extra arms for all flashers connected with the outdoor signs and marquee is to be found here. An extra motor is also carried for our flasher, with further items of electric fans for the dressing rooms for summer time use of acts. An extra ticket unit is also found in this store room, which in a case of a breakdown of the main unit in the box office, this auxiliary unit can be called into action. We also have an extra door here that can be placed in a very few minutes in the place of the rear door of the box office so that in case of bad, stormy weather, this can be slipped into place and patrons may obtain their tickets from the lobby of the theatre and not have to fight the elements on the sidewalk. Here also may be found an assortment of plumbers' tools such as pipe wrenches and other necessary things needed for any stoppage that might occur in any of the units in the men's or women's rest rooms.

In this department one may find a half dozen complete seats, also extra irons for the various sized seats used throughout the auditorium, complete bottoms and backs, bottom shields, and a large assortment of floor lugs for the holding of the seats to the floor. Other small accessories found here are extra curtain rings, in the case of any of the draperies becoming loose in their various positions throughout the theatre, several aisle lights, a carpet stretcher and carpet tacks, and a supply of sewing materials for the mending of drapes and carpets.

The fourth unit is possibly the most important. This is the stock room adjacent to the operator's booth, wherein is found all small parts for the projectors and also replacement parts for the sound equipment. A complete intermittent movement will also be found in this stock room. In the case of freezing, one of these units in the projector, a worn-in unit can be slipped into place within a few seconds' time with no delay in your show. Here is also found extra shafts for the sound driving motors and extra fiber gears that, while in case of a breakdown these could not be immediately replaced, they could within a very few hours' time not having to depend on obtaining such parts from a distant point. A complete stock of all tubes necessary in the operation of sound equipment will also be found in this stock. Carbon supplies are kept for 90-day periods at all times. A full supply of extra connections, asbestos covered wire, and other small parts for the proper operation of high-intensity lamps are carried. A set of new mirrors for the reflecting type lamp, a full set of new brushes for the motor generator, a complete set of tools, a motor grinder to which can be attached various other devices for the working in of any parts in intermittent movements, etc., are always kept in this well supplied stock room.

These four units of the store room constitute the source of supplies for the mechanical operation of the theatre and, of course, in the manager's office is found a full stock of all the various forms and reports necessary in the operation of the accounting systems of the modern theatre.

Emergency Lighting!

Firmly convinced that the emergency lighting question was important enough to warrant our doing so, we asked several showmen in various parts of the country what their slant was on the matter. You will find their answers elsewhere in this week's issue.

A little investigating also brought to theatre light the different types of equipment available for use and also proved that this is not as expensive an item as you may believe it to be. As a matter of fact the refund of admissions on one good night's business because of a breakdown in the power house will more than pay for the cost of and installation of such emergency equipment.

Why, then, should YOUR house be left high, dry and in a hole every time the current becomes temperamental? Would it not be better to be able to continue your show whenever the regular supply goes off?

Apparently we selected a mighty important topic when we started in on this discussion if the letters and inquiries coming in to Club headquarters mean anything. But those who have taken the time to drop us those few lines represent but a drop in the bucket. We want many more slants and angles on the value, yes, and necessity of, emergency lighting equipment in the modern theatre of today. The only way we are going to get it and get it straight is to get those of the boys, whose theatres have such equipment, to talk about it.

Don't lay down on your brother showmen. If you have something to say on this matter, come on out in the open and say it. It's a case of give and take, but don't do all the taking.

Theatre Inspections!

Elsewhere in the Showman section you will find a story dealing with the value and advantages of regular theatre inspection and how this work can be divided among the various members of your staff so that your task simply becomes one of supervising their responsibilities.

The many showmen approached on this angle all agreed that maintenance costs and expensive replacements could be minimized by inaugurating such a system. Those of you who have given very little or no thought to the matter can well afford to stop and think over the situation with a view of determining whether you have been doing your house an injustice by letting it run itself and only paying attention to its equipment after something wears out or breaks down.

We cannot too strongly recommend for your consideration this question. Give it every possible thought and at least try it out. Then if you find it does not adapt itself to your theatre, you can forget it.

Boat in Motion Was Kligler Stunt That Helped Boost Biz

His novel advance display created quite a sensation at the Daly Theatre in the Bronx, New York, for Joseph Kligler, manager of the house, when he played "The Sea Wolf," not so long ago.

The uniqueness of the display was one of the best selling mediums used in Kligler's entire campaign for the film. We are showing a couple of pictures of the stunt so that you may the more easily see how effectively the stunt shaped up. The boat, which measured 14 feet long and five feet wide, had them talking and gasping. By the use of baby spots and blinkers the illusion was obtained whereby it appeared as though the ship was in motion. Kids and grown-ups flocked to the lobby to look at the stunt, and so much did they think of it that word-of-mouth comment spread very rapidly.

At the time of the building of the float, Kligler planned the construction so that it could also do service during playdates as a street ballyhoo, the intention being to place it on a flat truck. But when he set out to find a chassis that would correspond to his requirements, Kligler found himself stumped. Nowhere in the vicinity could he procure one. As time was getting short, and as a more or less last resolve, he decided to appeal to a local automobile dealer. The dealer agreed to furnish him with a new model of the truck if Kligler would give him a trailer on the screen and a credit line on the truck. Kligler acquiesed. The truck was then dispatched about the streets. The platform upon which the boat was placed was made out of lumber which Kligler had on hand. It was 16 feet long and six feet wide. By using light green damask, sprinkled with white paint, he succeeded in achieving a water effect. The placing of paper boxes at different spots underneath the damask caused the boat to sway while the car was in motion, the result being that a similar effect to that in the lobby when the display was used as an advance plug was obtained. As we have stated before, the gag clicked to good receipts. And since that was the main thing that Kligler was aiming at he was satisfied.

Flashlights Helped Celoud When Lighting System Went Blotto

Emergency lighting is an investment in good will as well as public safety, and while I do not feel equal to an article on this subject, I do know the importance of it, and will therefore give you an experience which I had a little over a year ago at one of the houses in my town.

Sedalia is the home of the Missouri State Fair, one of the largest fairs in the country, and during the fair each week the equipment of the City Light and Traction Co. is taxed to capacity in order to furnish the fair grounds with the necessary electricity, and for several years the equipment of the power company has failed to function some time during the seven days of the fair.

Being my first year in Sedalia during the fair, I was not acquainted with this bad news until practically the last minute, which was too late to go into any extensive plans for emergency lighting, but we did gather up a good supply of flashlights, battery lanterns, etc., for the emergency.

Everything went smoothly during the week, until Thursday night, the third day of "Cocoanuts," and at about eight o'clock in the evening, when the house was jammed to capacity and we were beginning to turn them away, the lights in the entire city went out and stayed out for a period of 30 minutes, due to a boiler breaking down at the power plant. We immediately brought out our flashlights and battery lanterns and through announcements and progress of the repairs we managed to get through with refunding only two admissions. However, the house was terribly upset, with grumblings from patrons, etc., but had it not been for our flashlights, etc., it is hard to tell just what might have happened in the way of ill feeling, refunds, and even people getting hurt groping around in the dark and on the stairways.

Sedalia will not afford the investment of an emergency lighting system, which would enable us to keep our show going in case of trouble, and inasmuch as last year before the fair the power company increased their equipment to take care of practically any load required, we have had no trouble whatever since that time. However, we do keep a supply of good flashlights and battery lanterns for any emergency that might turn up.

Theatres all over the country, regardless of size, should make it a point to keep on hand extra flashlights for such cases as above. Flashlights are poor lighting equipment for a theatre, but for theatres who cannot afford the regular emergency lighting equipment, they will pull the theatre and the manager out of jams such as the one I experienced.

Don't know just what you wanted in the way of an article, but if managers will take heed to the above, it may save them a great deal of grief in the future. Even though the theatre is not responsible for the breaking down of power equipment, it is hard to make the public understand that the trouble is city-wide. They take it for granted that the trouble is in the theatre, and that it is just a stall in order to repair the theatre equipment.

Have not contributed to the Club lately, due to a lot of improvement work here, etc., but I promise that I'll be sending in material in the future.

FRANK J. CELOUD,
City Manager, Fox Theatres, Sedalia, Mo.

Robb Lawson of London, England, Passes Along Showmanship

In Merrie Old England, or perhaps we should say, in Jolly Old Lunnon, Robb Lawson, publicity chief of the United Artists' Film House in the foggy city, continues to display showmanship in the selling of his cinema attractions to the movie palace frequenters.

Those of you who follow our pages regularly will recall being introduced to Robb when he made an appearance on our pages a short time back. And you will also recall that the article he gave us, in which he summed the amusement selling situation in England was one that contained a number of very informative slants. We have no doubt but that this story was received with favor by our many members and readers. And then there was the story of his activities, where we showed by word and by picture the stunts he pulled to bring them into the house, copious illustrations showing the crowds lining the sidewalks and endeavoring to effect an entrance into the amusement hall.

In this brief account, we are again going to show you that his publicity has pulling power. Just look at the crowds jamming the streets, all waiting to see Eddie Cantor dance all over the screen in "Whoopee.' at the Tivoli. This photo we are showing was taken on a foggy night, so it did not develop as clearly as it might. The picture was also a 1/1,500 exposure and had to be taken in less time than it takes a master-of-ceremonies to give the hook to an amateur on an amateur night in one of London's houses. We'd like to point out the special selling title "Whoopee" on the large sign. The title was spelled out in a lasso effect, in keeping with the cowboy motif of the film. Not bad, is it?

Thanks, Robb, for letting us see this one.

Employees Should Reflect House Ideals States Fred Johnson

The Latonia Theatre staff is made loyal by friendly talks to employes at various times and by the example set by the management.

We caution all our employes to never say a word of detriment about a picture or anything else outside of the play house and when questioned about the merits of pictures to always have a good word for them. If the feature is only ordinary or fair, not to boost it highly, but tell the folks it is a very fair picture, etc. Boost highly when we deliver the goods, which, I am happy to say, we do on most occasions.

Politeness personified is my rule to my ushers and never fail to say "Sir," "Please," "Thank you," and to always make every effort to please a patron, no matter how badly they might want to pick a quarrel or argue with the employe.

The rule of my office is "Good morning," "Good afternoon," "Good evening," "Latonia speaking" (on the telephone). The cashier, in answering phone, must do the same as manager and so on down the line of the staff.

The manager always has a "good morning" or "good evening" for his employes, patrons, friends on the street, etc., and we find that it sure does pay. Kiddies know us all, speak to the boys and myself on the street and we are into every civic proposition that is put over. Member of Kiwanis Club and on Entertainment Committee. An Elk and take luncheons there once or twice a week. Member of Chamber of Commerce and now on "Million Dollar Holiday Week" Committee, which we celebrate Nov. 27 to Dec. 6.

Member of South Side Business Men's Association and on Entertainment Committee. Just now putting over a week of "turkey business" in which all members give away a turkey next Tuesday night and Theatre Monday coupons with each dollar purchase.

Belong to Automobile Club, Oil City Boat Club, Masonic Order, being a 32nd. Member First Presbyterian Church and vice-president of Men's Bible Class; also second V. P. Men's Brotherhood.

In a small town, all these things make a theatre manager popular and well thought of and it's the greatest asset to the show game that you can get mixed up in. We have the respect of every man, woman and child in the city and also that of every clergyman in the city.

Mrs. J. is a church worker, is well liked and never fails to attend meetings where she thinks she can be of service to the women folks. She is a great giver and many charity deeds are done by her. At present she is chairman of Committee of Church Women, who are taking care of an aged couple, and she collects the money from each member to pay the bills of this old couple who have nothing at all to live on. We take them jellies, bedding, clothes, etc., and they are nice and comfortable.

I never fail to furnish entertainment for various clubs when I have a stage attraction at the theatre, Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, etc., Elks and Masons.

Every employe of the Latonia must be a perfect lady or gent at all times. Will not stand for my employees running up bills and not paying them, therefore our credit is good everywhere in the town.

FRED E. JOHNSON,
Latonia Theatre, Oil City, Pa.

The Kiddie Business!

There was never a better time than right now to concentrate on bringing the kids back to your theater or stimulating their present interest in your house.

The holiday season offers many angles, all valuable to the showman who knows his business and can capitalize on the possibilities offered to him. This refers to running some special holiday kid shows, novelty matinees, toy shows, staging games and tournaments on the stage. And a hundred other slants.

Use them to start off some worth-while serial. Give 'em the first episode at a free Saturday morning show. That ought to start it off with a bang and a turn-away. After that it's up to you to keep the interest keyed up by advertising other special events and novelties for the kids when they come back for the second and other episodes.

Be sure to surround your program with the kind of shorts that appeal to the youngsters. Plenty of laugh-provoking stuff, cartoon and song reels. They will eat them alive. And in arranging your bookings be certain that you have an action feature for those serial days. It need not necessarily be a western if that type of picture is bad for your adult trade. But by all means avoid a sexy or heavy drama that will shoot sky high over the kids' heads. Maybe an added Western for the matinee only will help.

As often said in the past, these are just suggestions. If they appeal to you, use them, if not forget them.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Avoid Boiler Trouble!

Despite the frequent breakdowns, caused by negligence, you can find plenty of managers who still keep away from their boiler rooms as though a wild lion is waiting there to devour them.

If there is any part of your theatre requiring more careful checking up than that boiler room, especially during the winter months, then tell us about it.

What should you do in the boiler room? That's a fair question. First, make sure that the boiler has sufficient water, too much means poor boiler efficiency, too little, means flirting with a cracked boiler and numerous other headaches.

If you use an oil burner, that requires checking up once in a while to make sure that the engineers, janitors, or whatever else you want to call 'em, are keeping things in good shape. Burners sometimes shoot oil and then there are fireworks. Costly one, too.

Then the accumulation of rubbish is a menace that must always be watched. Especially in a boiler room where the heat drys everything so quickly and provides good spots for little smudge fires and other dangerous troubles.

If coal burning, the ashes must be kept in cans, removed at frequent intervals, and provisions made for additional ashes. All small items perhaps, but nevertheless they are all important.

Try getting acquainted with your boiler room. It's really an interesting education.

Service Is First Phase Of Three That Creamer Talks About

Some of the above items accomplished by our staff here at the Fox Palace are as follows: As the patron starts to enter the lobby through doors leading from the sidewalk, he finds that the door is already pushed open from the inside, thus making his entry all the easier. A neatly dressed high school boy accomplishes this and without a doubt it puts the patron in a very good frame of mind as he walks up to the cashier's window, for if you will watch the incoming patrons many are busy opening their pocketbooks so as to have the change ready; also a woman with a child in her arms usually has a task trying to open the heavy theatre doors. My creed is that no patron shall have to open a door, for I say that is part of the work of employes.

A successful business must have pleased purchasers of the commodity you sell; therefore, why not start at the beginning, for the reason that first impressions are lasting. Of course, this applies to the present weather, as in the summer months the doors are hooked open.

Next the purchaser in my house finds a very pleasing and good looking girl smiling in the cashier's office. Fresh-cut flowers are always in view of the patron, and they give an air of refinement to the purchase of a ticket. A cordial "Thank you" accompanies the prompt sale.

Next, as the purchaser approaches the door leading into the foyer, he notices that the tall, good-natured doorman opens the door and at the same time says "Good evening," takes the ticket, tears it in half and returns the patron's stub with a "Thank you, sir."

If there are plenty of seats, when the patron enters he is not directed to any certain aisle, but if the "hot" aisle is well filled I stand in the foyer and direct the patron to the opposite side of the house with a "next aisle, please." At either aisle, as the patron approaches, stands an attractive usherette who politely inquires of the patron, "How far down, please?"; but if at the time the patron approaches there is no choice of seats, then the usherette's inquiry is "How many, please?"; also she states very quickly the exact location of the seats she has left, so that the patron can find no fault with the seating. Except on the biggest nights, we do not try to seat patrons too close to the front, telling them "Best seats are now in the balcony." Also in connection with our balcony we have no extra charge for these seats, although our opposition charges extra.

I have my usherettes trained, so that when it is necessary to seat in the extreme front seats, that they will reseat these patrons in seats farther back in the house at the first vacancy. This service is much appreciated by our patrons.

We also have a man and wife who are good customers and have rather young twin babies, and we allow them to leave the children in the carriage in one end of the foyer, and at the first sign of unrest the usherette will take care of the children such as giving the carriage a little rocking. The mother and father certainly appreciate the little courtesy extended, as they can go in and enjoy the show and not be bothered with the babies. We also have another old couple who are regular patrons and the gentleman always leaves his hat and overcoat in my office, and many a baked cake from this family testifies that they appreciate this service. Again we have some one in this town who, when they call up to ask us about show information, will frequently ask if we can tell them what is on at our opposition house—this on account of the fact that some one is always in our theatre all day long.

In seating patrons in an empty row we always ask the patrons to sit in as far as possible toward the center of the row to avoid being disturbed by incoming patrons later.

We always try to seat every patron coming in, but, of course, there are exceptions to this, for some people you simply can not seat. In the case of several single seats being available, but no doubles, we often, by asking some child to move, can make a double that is very much appreciated by a pair of standees.

At the end of different short subjects on the program when several people are always leaving we promptly open back the doors leading from the foyer to the lobby, thus again making easy egress for departing patrons. At these breaks and at the end of the show the young doorboy is in the foyer to help patrons on with their heavy wraps and coats.

And Cleanliness Is The Second Subject Discussed By John

After 18 years in the theatre, I have come to the conclusion that constant vigilance is the price of cleanliness, and I well remember the advice of a stage star that "cleanliness was not next to godliness, but that it was next to impossible."

Speaking of the lobby, my doormen have instructions to keep the floor perfectly clear at all times of such as cigarettes, cigar stubs, matches, paper, etc. These are picked up quickly as possible and tossed out upon the street. Once every evening just before the first show is out, the lobby is swept, whether or not it needs it. Years ago a showman taught me this trick, adding that it created the idea in the watching patron that we must be doing a very good business in as much as we were trying to keep the floor clean. Also the front sidewalk is swept very often. By doing so you will find that a lot less dirt is carried into the lobby and on to the carpets. In the summer we always wash the sidewalks once a day with hose and water. I am very particular in keeping the gutter in front of the house free from paper, etc. When I came here a year ago, the janitor told me that he could see no need in cleaning the gutter, saying that "no one else up or down the street did." I promptly asked the man: "Because Bill doesn't wash his face is that any reason why you shouldn't wash yours?" A different janitor was pronto on the job, and our house now stands out from the rest of the street.

In the foyer and auditorium all employes are strictly required to keep the carpet free of droppings, such as ticket stubs, gum wrappers, etc. In walking up or down the aisle the usherette promptly kicks to one side any such article as a paper sack. Other articles are picked up. A small toy broom and dust pan takes care of any dirt that should happen to collect in the foyer or mezzanine.

About the worst thing that can happen to the carpet in a house is for gum to get on it. We use the following method to get rid of the gum: We lay a clean cloth over the gum spot and then place an electric iron over the spot, at the same time rubbing lightly. The heat melts the gum and it is transferred to the clean cloth.

An inspection every 15 minutes of the rest rooms by members of the staff often prevents an unpleasant situation. They promptly pick up paper, etc., from the floor, and one of the handiest articles to keep in a rest room (out of patrons' sight) is a short-handled mop to use in getting occasional water off the floor. One of the best disinfectants that I have ever found, and one of the cheapest, too, is fresh air. By all means a rest room should have plenty of fresh air entering it at all times. Once we were bothered with waste paper towels being thrown in the toilet. To eliminate this we simply placed the towel cabinet higher up on the wall (out of the reach of kids).

A clean theatre means a lot to the patrons, especially the women, as most of them are good housekeepers and they are very critical in their inspection of a theatre.

No matter what instructions you give your employes, I consider it part of the manager's duty to see that the employee does as he or she is told to do. Constant attention to my theatre is my hobby.

While An Inspection Chart Forms Final Topic Of Interest

In connection with this, I think that the Weekly Inspection Report cannot be improved upon. This report covers a complete inspection of every part of the theatre from front to back and from basement to ceiling.

By physical inspection a part that is not in good condition is quickly noted and repairs or replacements can be taken care of.

Without a doubt, carpets and seats are the two furnishings in a theatre that receive the hardest usage, and the most likely to get out of good repair. However, the best seats of today are remarkably well made and there is very little to get out of order. We take care of gum on seats, oiling squeaky hinges, etc., once a week and find it not a hard task to do. Luckily we have no torn or worn seats to contend with. In regard to carpets, they should be taken care of by correct vacuuming and this means a slow movement of the sweeper, not a quick push forward and a quick jerk backward. Matting, etc., in the lobby during inclement weather will relieve the foyer carpet of a lot of hard use.

All velvet drapes are cleaned thoroughly once every two weeks and rehung. Curtains on glass doors are frequently sent to the laundry.

Waugh of Winnipeg Is Turning Out Great Showmanship

Tossing them over his shoulder at a most alarming pace, Howard Waugh, of the Winnipeg Capitol Theatre, in Winnipeg, Canada, shakes off one stunt and puts on another in his showman campaigns for the selling of the house and its pictures. Here's a couple that Howard engineered not so long ago.

When he played "Rain or Shine" not so long ago, Howard, in his dry way, went out to give the residents of the town a treat in the form of a knockout front done in atmospheric style and continued throughout the theatre. As the picture boasts a circus locale, the big tent motif was the order of the day, and Howard's order to the sign painter. The house staff was outfitted in clown costume. Confetti, balloons, etc., was hung about the theatre, and the art work carried the dazzling colors so delightful to every visitor and enthusiast of the Barnum baloney. Small wonder that the picture went over to big receipts. And so with "Rain or Shine," high and dry on the right side of the ledger, let's proceed with the activities.

The other photo in the cut shows a float that was used during Canadian Prosperity Week, both as a plug for the "get more geldt" week and "Good News." Credit for this float goes to Mike Vogel, manager of the Arkayo Winnipeg, who has annexed for himself the reputation of being a hustler. And the floats show that he deserves it. What do you say on the subject? We think that we are going to have a lot of fine showmanship to pass along from this district in the very near future, so we'll regard this contribution as a sort of introductory paragraph. Let's have the opening chapter, Howard.

All Set For Christmas?

We refer particularly to those special shows to help raise funds, food and clothes for the poor folks in your community under the auspices of your theatre and the local organizations.

Don't pass this angle up, boys. There seems to be enough grief in the world these days, so if we can do our bit to make it a little pleasanter for the unfortunates, all the better.

Then, don't lose sight of the valuable good-will and publicity that will follow the successful handling of this kind of stuff. That alone should make it a mighty profitable venture for any theatre whether chain or independent.

We've furnished information to hundreds of showmen all over the country as to where they can secure candy, novelties and toys. Can we do the same for you?

Girl Wore Duplicate Of Swanson Outfit As Street Ballyhoo

For advance advertising on "What a Widow" at the Madison Theatre, Peoria, Illinois, Manager Elmer Fitzgibbons got replicas of one of the outfits worn by Gloria Swanson and located a Peoria girl who resembled Gloria Swanson to wear it and parade about the crowded streets.

A tie-up with the newspaper was made and the girl's photo published, together with day-to-day announcements telling about the girl and that anyone recognizing her on Peoria streets and remarking to her, "What a Widow"—"I'll see you at the Madison"—got a guest admission ticket. The stunt created an unusual amount of talk and everyone watched the papers to learn what part of the city the girl would visit on certain days. Of course the descriptive publicity, used to sanction the stunt, gave all details about the picture and a good many unique "experiences" were worked in.

You, too, can work this angle if you like. You can do it on any picture, as it has been pulled before. If it will go in your town, it will pay to be given a trial. Think it over. If your town likes this sort of ballyhoo, don't hesitate about using it.

This is Mr. Fitzgibbons' first contribution to the Club. We hope that when he sends in his next story he will include his photo and a little dope on himself so that we can give him a real introduction.

Rubber Mats For Rainy Days!

Rain, snow, slush, mud—you know all of those evils. Tracked through your nice clean lobby, onto your spotless foyers and all over the carpets.

And so——?

The answer seems to be rubber mats and runners. But the question is, have you got them, and if you have, are you using them?

If you are without them then we can readily understand why your carpets are going to the dogs and the back of the house looks like a bar-room before the days of sawdust.

Here's something to check up on boys and better hustle because the snowy, muddy and slushy days are right with us. If those rubber mats are all shot, get yourself a new set, it's cheaper than replacing carpets and will keep the entrance to your house in nice condition all the time.

"Impress House Staff With Importance Of Courtesy"—Addison

"Too much importance cannot be directed in the matter of drilling into your employes the value of being courteous," said Mr. Addison, "for it is an investment that pays big dividends of satisfaction in this business."

It is an unbreakable rule in my organization that our courtesy conference each week must be held. Other meetings might be postponed for this or that reason, but never our courtesy confabs.

"The boys, realizing how important I regard these meetings, soon get into the spirit of the thing, with the result that we have genuinely happy gatherings and exchange many valuable ideas and suggestions, as to how we can improve this phase of our service.

"Some managers have adopted a plan whereby they give ratings, or credits, for any exceptional acts of courtesy, but I have never been converted to that belief. I don't think courtesy and civility should come as a result of an expected reward. Give your employes, even the most unimportant one among them, to understand that their particular job is a mighty responsible one. Make him, or her, feel the importance of their duties, and your courtesy and other acts of attentiveness will come naturally.

"Of course, I never overlook an opportunity to whisper my gratitude into the ear of one of my boys, when a patron tells me of some unusual bit of courtesy that has been extended, but I have gotten better results by having each and every member of my organization thoroughly "sold" on the idea in his, or her, own mind.

"It is a problem, as every manager well knows, to keep your personnel functioning at 100 per cent in the courtesy league, for boys come and go. However, if you have the proper nucleus your newcomers soon learn the value of courtesy. I have a boy in mind who, after a few days on the floor, did not seem to grasp the importance of it. He was quite efficient in other respects, but he lacked that bright, cheery disposition; the willingness to go out of his way to be of assistance to patrons, that I insist upon in my employes. It was not because he was of the surly type, or stupid, for he was attending college and above the average in intelligence. But it wasn't long before the environment and general atmosphere about the theatre "got" him. Overnight he became converted, so to speak, just as I thought he would, and he developed into one of the best boys I ever had. Association with my other good-will builders changed his style of approach and manner. It was an interesting experiment.

"Hand in hand with politeness and courtesy in the theatre comes the comfort of your patrons, and the constant attention one must give to the cleanliness of your theatre, not only in the auditorium, but in rest rooms, lobbies, foyers—in fact, every nook and corner must be looked after with a vigil eye.

"In these days of luxurious theatres, your house is very apt to be regarded by your citizens as one of the show places of the city. At least Loew's Penn Theatre in Pittsburgh is held in such esteem by the good folks of the steel metropolis. Never a day passes that we haven't a number of people making a sightseeing tour of our house. We are indeed very proud of the honor, and you can rest assured that we are ever alert to keeping our house in the best of order.

"I have found it very profitable to have the chief of our cleaning staff observe how closely some of our patrons, especially the ladies, inspect the tapestries, art paintings, lounges, marble, etc., for in that way he is made to realize just how vital it is, that everything be in spic and span condition. I usually make it a point, when I note several groups looking about the theatre, to have my chief cleaner see them. I never call him especially for that purpose, but I suddenly discover that I want to see him, and once in the office, I do not overlook the opportunity of just 'accidentally' meeting up with the sightseeing party. A nod of the head or a tilt of the eyebrows, on the part of my chief, indicates that the scheme has registered. Seldom does he fail to comment on the fact that, 'Well, I see another inspection party is in the house.' It makes him take a deeper pride and interest in his work, for, in addition to the fact that he has me to answer to when things are not right, is always the thought that his work is likely to be minutely inspected by many of our patrons each day. On top of this, I keep a close contact with the workers under him, impressing on them how really important their duties are. No job in our organization is unimportant, and I endeavor to put that thought across, frequently. It not only has a tendency to keep the entire personnel geared up to the highest efficiency, but it creates a happier and more contented condition among the employees. Of course, it is necessary to 'stick around' until the wee small hours, in order to mingle with the house cleaning staff, but it is well worth it.

"Rest rooms are always a true barometer of the cleanliness of your theatre. Show me a rest room that is untidy and uninviting, and you can wager the family heirlooms that the balance of the house is no better. Too much stress cannot be laid on the importance of keeping that part of your theatre neat and attractive. Patrons, some of them, are apt to be a bit careless; consequently, it behooves one to be on the alert and see to it that the rest rooms are always above reproach. I maintain a system of constant checking on the maids and porters assigned to this work. They know it, and, as a result, they are never caught napping in the all-important matter of having their parts of the theatre a model of cleanliness.

"Chewing gum has always been, and always will be, a bugbear of every manager. Patrons unconsciously stick a hunk of gum on the back of the seat in front of them, or, under the one they are sitting on. I have a 'gum detective.' He takes a lot of pride in the fact that he can show me, most every morning, a paper sack full of gum that he has scraped off the seats, and floors.

"The wear and tear on your seats is still another highly important factor in the matter of maintenance that must be looked after constantly. We go over our house every day, tightening this bolt and that; fixing this seat cover, etc. The house being darkened most of the time, it is a comparatively easy matter for your seat problem to develop into a most serious one, if you don't 'light up' and give them the once over every day. In this way you are always abreast of a condition that can develop a genuine hazard. A loose bolt today, that requires only a slight tightening, might be the means of a breakdown tomorrow.

"And so it goes. Constant vigilance must be maintained in order to keep your theatre attractive and inviting, and in the condition that every patron has a right to expect. They are your guests, and they must be courteously treated, comfortably seated and looked after from the minute they step into your house, until they depart. Everything about the house reflects the manner and methods of the manager, and it behooves him to see to it that such impressions are builders of good will, and not criticism."

Manager - Operator Harmony Necessary Declares Caldwell

Some of us are now termed "managing directors," which looks good on a letterhead, and the projectionist used to be called an operator.

But no matter how we are classed, we like to feel that we have mutual relationships in catering to "our public," for, after all, it is John W. Public who helps pay our salaries.

We like to feel, too, we, in the executive end of the theatre, that the men up in the projection booth are dependable. We like to have that assured feeling that we do not have to continually watch our screen; that the sound will be awry or that the picture out of focus.

Here in Loew's Valentine, we have four operators. Each is an artist in his way and, like all artists, a bit temperamental—aren't we all?

I am a "bug" on sound and Loew's has gained the reputation throughout Toledo—and we even hear it from our opposition—of having 100 per cent perfect sound. It isn't an accident. I hold frequent meetings—or probably I should term them "conferences"—with the quartette of men upon whom the success of our entertainment depends so much.

There isn't a single chance of running too long or too short a show. We have established a firm two-hour policy and we don't vary from it a minute either way. There is a dependable time-piece in our booth that keeps the operators on the dot.

Just as a good mechanic takes excellent care of his tools, so do our operators keep their lamps and all other paraphernalia in tip-top condition. They are particular to an unbelievable degree in this and once in a while, when a marked print comes in, they immediately report it.

They do not tamper with a film in any way and are as anxious as I am to have clean prints for it naturally helps their end of the performance.

We have arranged a series of signals to control the amplification and this important detail runs along as smoothly as the proverbial mill pond.

Operators, we have discovered in the past few years, are human beings just like the rest of us. They lead a normal, uneventful life, as a rule, they are strictly temperate, for they must be so to occupy the important post and task imposed upon them. They take an unusual interest in the films entrusted to them and "baby" them to get the best results.

Their machines, while always kept in excellent shape and frequently inspected, at times, like all inanimate objects, sometimes "get out of kilter," as we used to say, and each of the four men I have is an expert in adjusting or repairing it instantly.

We do not receive one complaint from a patron in a year over the sound, projection or anything that is in the operators' department.

Since the advent of the so-called "Talkies" after the silent pictures did a fade-out the operator of yesterday has, in most cases, become the expert projectionist of today. In my case, I am very happy to say, most of Loew's Valentine Theatre operators are from the old school and have been connected permanently with this theatre for over 12 years—a handsome record won through merit, aggressiveness and application to their difficult and particular trade. Their ultimate goal at all times is to have our pictures, our projection and our sound perfect. They strive to please and they attain this constant pleasure to their art through their keen desire at all times in keeping abreast, learning and applying new methods, improvements and ideas.

Read 'Em And Leap— For A Membership Blank!

"Knock! Nok! Nok! Rap! Bang!! a stranger seeks entrance at the portals of the Round Table, humbly asks that he be given a seat at the aforesaid circular wooden plateau that he may feast of the bounteous viands, and drink of the words and ideas of the other fortunates."

"In addition, I might say that I look forward each week for the coming of the NEWS, especially that section conducted by the Round Table Club. I think it is great. I have found many valuable ideas that I have used to good advantage. So don't ever let it stop."

Ed. C. Schmadeka,
Liberty Theatre,
Lewiston, Idaho.

I feel secure when I know a performance is going on inside the Valentine. I know our men are functioning properly, and if there is the slightest doubt about anything, they give me a quick buzz from the booth, or vice versa, and everything is adjusted so quickly the audience is never aware of anything going wrong, which is most infrequently.

In the final summing up, the operator, or projectionist, if you will, is quite the most important factor above the main floor of any theatre, and any manager who does not feel that way is missing that sense of ease and security that comes from a contented mind. I know that after this article sees the light of printer's ink—if it does—and my operators read it, I will be immediately besieged by a nimble quartette looking for an increase over the scale.

Larry Jacobs Now Burning Them Up In The "Smoky City"

Now located at the Fulton Theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa., Larry B. Jacobs continues to turn out some fine work. Ever since he started on the job, Larry has been making them sit up and take notice in the Smoky City. As many members know, this is his original stamping ground, and every nook and corne rof the town has, at some time, been covered by him.

He secured some publicity for the house recently by plastering Pitt Stadium with heralds when Notre Dame played Pitt. He secured special stories in all of the newspapers by inviting the teams of Pitt, Tech and Duquesne Universities to witness his show, on the bill of which was included a short of the Knute Rockne football series. Elmer Layden, former member of Notre Dame's famous "Four Horsemen" of other days, now coaching Duquesne, attended with Rockne. The stunt was a big business booster for Jacobs.

The Fulton is the only theatre in town sporting acts in the lobby. The many novel turns presented with every new change of show has had them talking for some time. Song teams, tapsters, comedians, and others are viewed nightly at the theatre. The angle is one that has aroused plenty of interest, and complaints are hardly—if ever—received when patrons are forced to wait in the lobby for seats, due to a crowded house.

We are certainly glad to see that Larry is back in the active fold again and turning out his well known tricks. We expect to hear a lot more from him, as his work is always a subject of interest to his many friends and Club members. Keep it up, Larry.

A SHOWMAN DOES SOME GABBING

The rather frank expressions to be found in this article thot we are publishing will not, we hope, be taken as slams against any particular porty, nor are they to be inferred as emphotic examples of showmanship made by a master craftsman. Far from it. They come to us from a showman handling a 600-seat house in the South. He had something to say, and determined to say it. Being a member of the Managers' Round Table Club, he decided that he wanted to say it on HIS Club's poges. At the conclusion of his article he included a postscript. Here it is: "If you members think these expressions all wet, send me a couple of blotters." Could anything be fairer?

Indian Summer—as they call it—is on us, but personally, the Indians can have it, as it has been very disagreeable in this section and the past summer has been so dry the bullfrogs were six months old before they learned to swim. But nevertheless, business continues, and from what we are told exhibitors will have new S.R.O. signs swinging throughout 1931. But who knows? For my part, I'd rather wear out the old one. Judging from the new product work sheets, a few of the boys must expect to retire. But if a "live and let live" policy exists we may some day be able to tell each other to go to h—l, though we do that anyway, there being no law against it, and we are permitted to use our own judgment about going to the hot spot.

Despite Indian summer and the so-called depression, I'm not worried. My main job is to get behind whatever I have and try to put it across to Mr. Public in the best way possible. And that's all you have to do, too. If you know of some regular patron who hasn't darkened your door for quite a while, drop him a friendly note and enclose a pass. On the other hand—though I hope it won't happen in your town—if he has become disabled, secure a wheel chair and go after him. What good-will that stunt got me when I had an opportunity to use it. Then, if a person who you know has been a regular attendant of the theatre, happens to be confined to his home, pay him a visit or drop him a cheerful note. The value of the good-will received is inestimable.

Another good stunt to increase business—it did for me—is to persuade the referee of a football or basketball game to let you attach a piece of muslin on the back of his sweater, as an announcement plug for your film. The peanut vendors can be furnished with bags imprinted with copy on your picture, or the week's program. Incidentally, this is a great gag for a circus tie-up. While I am on the subject, I must not forget the kiddies. On Oct. 29 I sponsored a "spud" matinee, admitting all school children for a pound or more of potatoes. The result was 10 bushels and 3 pecks, which were turned over to the Chairman of the local Welfare Committee, and they are still talking about it.

As this is November, it is about time for you to change your lighting colors by replacing your blue and green lamps with orange ones, as they have a tendency to cast a glow of radiance during the winter. And during the winter season it is always beneficial to a showman to help elderly persons don their wraps. They will appreciate it. The summer fans that you have been using the past season are good for next year, too, you know. (I'm directing this to those showmen who manage houses where these fans are still in use, and not to those other fortunate showmen who are located in houses possessing cooling plants—lucky guys.) They should be thoroughly cleaned and oiled and covered with a cloth or paper sack. A hint for the uniforms: they should be stored away in some up-to-date dry cleaning house, there being no charge in the event that they have your business. Don't permit the cashier to wear a fur coat while on duty. It gives the impression that the house is cold inside. A "thank you" from the cashier will go a long way, as will the other courtesies such as, "good morning" or "good evening" when answering the phone. She should always be well versed on every phase of your program, and know the title, stars, running time, and something about the type of film.

As to using twenty-four sheets during the winter (this in response to a recent box in the Club section wherein a member asked whether window displays were more profitable than twenty-four sheets, or vice versa, during the winter), my opinion is that it is not profitable to use the boards, as folks don't notice them much. A person hurrying along the street on a cold, winter's day, having his head tucked in the collar of his overcoat, does not stop to gaze around at billboards. I think it more profitable to use this part of your budget in extra newspaper publicity, or some novelty properly distributed in each home.

As Christmas is nearing, establish a Santa Claus in your lobby and have the children bring their letters to him. Many ideas can be worked out along this line. I'd like to give you some more of them, but right now I've got to step out and open the house. Wishing every member a full bread basket this Christmas and S.R.O. business, I am,

Here's Sam Wheeler Of Wamego, Kansas; House Adv. Manager

Just a short time ago we showed you an example of a marquee sign that was used out in Wamego, Kansas, at the Columbia Theatre. We also explained in detail how the sign was constructed. And now we'd like to introduce the man responsible for the sign, Sam J. Wheeler, projectionist and advertising manager of the house.

Wheeler is very active in his district, and the hours that are not spent in the booth are devoted to plugging the shows at the theatre. We are sure that his recent sign contribution was met with favor by his fellow Club members, who, if the occasion arises, will make use of it.

We have not as yet seen what else he does along the line of exploiting shows in his town, but since he displays such activity about the house, it seems only reasonable to believe that it is extended to the rest of the town. We hope that when he sends us in his next contribution he will give us the low-down on the local show situation, and also tell us how he brings the residents into the theatre. What do you say, Sam? Let's have the dope, will you?

Stocked Storeroom Assures Nowitsky Show Will Continue

When you mention the stock room of the theatre you are hitting upon one of its most vital organs because of the old adage (the show must go on) is still the anthem of the show shop; and no show can go on unless you have the necessary stock in reserve to replace any part which may be needed immediately.

Replacements in stock should cover all interchangeable parts which are needed at a minute's notice and the lesser important parts which cannot be acquired locally. For instance, every theatre carries a supply of lamps which could be acquired locally if needed, but they should positively have in stock concentrated filament bulbs of suitable wattage for the baby spotlights as it is difficult to find these in some towns.

Out "Front" there should be extra knives for the ticket machine and spare sets of brushes and magnets for the sign, motors, etc. If the theatre is carpeted there should be on hand a quantity of carpet for patching and the necessary carpet tools for such work. A few extra seats should be carried as well as a large quantity of seat bolts, nuts, screws and expansion bolts; also the necessary seat tools.

On the stage a few extra shives and head-blocks are necessary as well as a quantity of hemp line. In the ventilating system, where only fans are used, there should be a spare belt, bearings and motor brushes. When the refrigerating plant is used, spare bearings, motor brushes, condenser coils and an extra automatic oiler are necessary along with lesser parts designated by the manufacturer of the system. If an oil burner is used in heating, it is advisable to carry an extra nozzle and spark coil.

A spare head carried in the booth will cover a multitude of sins. It can be used on one of the machines, while another head is repaired, and in the case of emergency parts can be taken from it. For use in the lamps, are carried two sets of positive carbon jaws, two sets of negative carbon jaws, two drive couplings, two positive straps, and two negative spring jaw clamps. That covers spare equipment for machine and lamps along with necessary positive and negative carbons.

It is impossible to cover every spare part used in conjunction with the sound equipment, as each system has different parts. For instance, the tubes in the Western Electric system differ greatly from those used by RCA, but in any event adequate spare parts should be carried for the sound system, including spare tubes, exciting lamps, photo-electric cells and a spare horn unit when the sound system so designates one.

With the coming of sound pictures the heyday of the organ passed beyond, but nevertheless those theatres equipped with organs and not using them should carry necessary spare parts such as springs and contacts. It would also be wise to turn the organ motor on every once in a while and run up and down the scale, as the organ is a very expensive instrument and for that reason should be kept up whether it is used or not.

This just about covers the stock room of the theatre, excluding, of course, locally bought items such as lamps, cleaners' supplies, fuses, etc., which are always carried in stock. As the stock room is one of the most important parts of the theatre, it would be a fine idea when everything is going smooth to sit down and check up on just what you have in the way of spare parts; for when you expect it the least is just when something happens and a replacement must be made immediately, if the show is to go on.

AL NOWITSKY,

"Giving Due Credit To Employees Keeps Harmony" — Harvey

There was a time when audiences were not critical of projection. As long as the picture reached the screen they seemed satisfied. Today audiences know good projection—they may not know enough about it to discuss it by using proper technical terms, but they do criticise poor projection.

In discussing the merits of their local theatre, you will often hear remarks similar to the following: "I was over to the —— theatre last night; John and I go there every week. Their picture seems to run so smoothly and they are so clear. At the —— theatre there is always something going wrong. We were there last week and the whole show was terrible."

We have a beautiful theatre, a good show—we go out and rack our brains to put over a picture, spend hundreds of dollars in advertising, and say to ourselves: "We'll knock them dead this week!" But the show doesn't seem to click. The little theatre across the street packs them in and we cannot understand why. Perhaps if we checked up on projection and sound we would find that we could improve our programs a great deal. After all, that's what we have to sell. While courtesy, service and comfort mean a whole lot to our patrons, they pay their money to see our shows, and if they cannot understand what John Gilbert is saying to Greta Garbo without straining a ligament, IT'S JUST TOO BAD FOR US!

Incapable projectionists are rapidly dropping out of the business and their places are being taken by men with the professional attitude. We should appreciate the problems that confront these men—familiarize ourselves with equipment, needs, co-operate with them and supervise our end of this department intelligently. This does not imply that the manager should be blundering and interfering with an operator. The manager who tries to interfere without knowing what it is all about is just as much at fault as the over-cautious manager who lets his show run any old way because he does not know enough about it to understand just what is wrong.

The amount of co-operation a manager gets from his projectionists is governed by the amount of good will he himself spreads around. A word of praise when it is deserving, given in the right manner, will go along way toward establishing better relations between the booth and the office. How often do we, after one of our operators has pulled a show out of a hole, slap him on the back and say "Good work, boy!" But—if he should slip up—we hop to the telephone and because he does not answer immediately, we tear up to the booth and find them rushing around trying to discover what is wrong. We ask that fool question, "Why in hell dontcha answer the telephone."

Special articles on maintenance and equipment were received too late for publication from Ed. Hiehle of Matt Press of Hattiesburg, Miss. — Jack Shields of Ansonia, Conn. — George Laby of Boston, Mass. — and Harry Herman of Waterloo, Iowa. They will be used later.

Rant around a while, use all the cuss words we know, and what have we in the end—just another headache.

A capable projectionist is not a mechanical worker whose duties are limited to loading a magazine and later placing the film back in the can. He is constantly improving his knowledge of the business. The ideal condition exists when the manager familiarizes himself with the problems of the operators and can talk intelligently about them. Get him to anticipate things that are liable to happen; be prepared for emergencies and you will find that he will show a great deal more interest and take more real pride in his work.

Talk over the cost of the equipment, the running expenses. Ask him how you can cut them to a minimum without endangering your show. His interest in his work and his desire to improve often depends upon the attitude taken. It is no exaggeration to say that projection in the theatre often depends upon the manager's tactful common sense handling of the projectionists.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

THESE SHOWMEN SAY SO!

HERMAN SHULGOLD is the manager of the Roxian Theatre in McKees Rocks, Pa., and though this is not the first time he has appeared on our pages, his other appearance being in conjunction with a corking story—he will have to be represented here in order that the other portals of the Club pages be opened for him. And now that you are in, Herman, give us a photo of yourself, so that we can let you meet the rest of the Club and they meet you. O. K.?

P. D. GRIFFITH is the manager of the Ritz Theatre in Macon, Ga. For any dope on Mr. Griffith's showmanship, you need but to look up a back number of the Round Table section and see what he did to sell "Manslaughter." Being pretty solid with his local authorities, 'P. D." is enabled to get in lots of valuable showselling slants. Let's have more of them, 'P. D." And include your photo, also.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GUY MARTIN is connected with the Publix Theatres Corp. in Indiana, Ind. He has been in the show game for a number of years, during which he has picked up many and various slants on show selling. We hope that when he has time he will pass some of them along to us in a nice little story. And we'd also like a photo of yourself, Guy.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ED. R. MOORE manages the Rahway Theatre in Rahway, New Jersey. Ed is not altogether unknown to the Club, as the work he turned out while in York, Pa., has appeared on our pages from time to time. Now that he is all set with the Arkayo outfit, we think that some more of his showmanship will be on display shortly. Keep us posted, Ed.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DONALD N. FULLER is the manager of the Jeffris Theatre in Janesville, Wisconsin. We have been recording a great deal of activity from Wisconsin lately, and we'd like to see Mr. Fuller figuring in on it. The best way to do this, Donald, is to shoot us in some of your work. We have an idea that you turn out some stunts on every picture. Let's see if we're right.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GENE BANDELLER is the advertising manager of the Ki-HeKah Theatre in Pawhnska, Oklahoma. The house is managed by Arthur Abbott. If all of the campaigns that are turned out come up to the recent one on "Dixiana," we think that we'll have a couple of good slants to pass along. Keep us in touch with what's going on in the show-selling line, Gene, so that we can let the rest of the Club see it.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

C. V. MARSHALL manages the Empress Theatre in North Battleford, Sas., Canada. He is the latest of the Canadian showmen to hop onto the Club bandwagon. We want to welcome him into the Club and let him know that we are sure his association with us will be both pleasant and profitable. Send us a photo and a little information on yourself, "C. V.," so the rest of the Club can see you. Oke?

HENRY RACZYNSKI is the assistant manager of the Fredo Theatre in Detroit, Mich. He is located in a house of 600 seats, and in a neighborhood that offers him an opportunity of learning real showmanship, first hand. We would like you to keep us in touch with your work, Henry, so that we can report your progress.

RAYMOND KLEIN handles publicity over in Jersey. Raymond has a rather unique position, his job being to promote harmonica contests in various houses throughout the city. He has been pretty good at it thus far, recording a bunch of winners. We passed a little story along a short time ago and set forth in detail just how he works. We are sure that we will have some more accounts from him in the near future. Keep your eye on the pages and get the low-down.

CHARLES H. GLENAR is the Assistant Manager of the Ogden Theatre in New York City. His membership blank is accompanied by a note from the manager, Mr. Green, which states that Glenar is rapidly advancing along the show line. With a send-off like that, Charles, you must be doing good work to keep things humming at the house. Keep us posted, will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

H. J. THATCHER manages the Tivoli Theatre in Michigan City, Ind. His work is pretty well known about the town, and it is often that he aids the local merchants by his tie-ups. We hope that in the future we will receive a lot of his work so that we can pass it along to his fellow members and showmen in the Managers' Round Table Club. And let's make it soon, "H. J."

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

LOUIS ST. PIERRE is the manager of Coronado Theatre in Rockford, Illinois, for the Publix outfit. In the somewhat dim and distant past we can recall driving through Rockford and stopping to chat for a moment with a showman friend of ours. We don't know but that the show situation in the town has changed considerably, particularly since the talkies came into vogue, so we hope that when he sends us in his next contribution Mr. St. Pierre will also include a note on the show status and also a photo of himself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ELMER FITZGIBBONS is the manager of the Madison Theatre in Peoria, Ill. Peoria, as we understand it, is very well known as a town where it takes showmanship to sell amusement attractions. DICK WAGNER manages the Capitol Theatre in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, out where showmanship is often displayed. # Harry Says 'Yes' Lina Cries 'No'; Romance Reels

Chicago—Either Lina Basquette "no-ed" Harry Richman while here, or else the "romance" between the two was purely another instance of Harry's love for publicity.

Richman, who met Miss Basquette at a railway station here last week, gave out romantic statements concerning his intense admiration of Miss Basquette and his intention to ask her to marry him while here. Checking on Richman's statements to learn whether or not Miss Basquette had accepted her admirer, MOTION PICTURE NEWS was advised by phone that Richman was no more than a "friend," and that matrimony was emphatically "absurd."

Richman lent a semblance of credence to his newspaper romance by stating that Miss Basquette had consented to be his guest in Chicago for several days. He spoke feelingly of his great admiration for her, and even stated that the attachment was responsible for his break-off with Clara Bow.

"We never saw each other," he said, referring to Miss Bow. "I was on one coast working, while she was on the other. In the meantime, I fell in love with another girl."

He then stated that that girl was Miss Basquette, and that he intended to propose to her "if the signs were favorable."

Hope's Face and Words from Grace Grab the Space

Chicago—Local papers gave Hope Hampton all the breaks when she arrived here this week on the same train with Grace Moore. Hope, it seems, makes a pretty nice photograph; hence, while she had the edge on picture space, it was Miss Moore who was interviewed, and who made the visit count by getting her advertising lines into print. Miss Hampton's smiling countenance looked out at readers of all papers, but it was the names of Miss Moore's newest pictures they read about. They are, of course, M-G-M's "New Moon" and "The Lady's Morals."

Both vocalists were eastward bound for concert tours.

Neighborhoods in Chicago Fighting December Slump

Chicago—Neighborhood houses here are in a fever of activity over ways and means of offsetting box-office slumps that occur annually during December, declared to be the worst month for theatre business in the year. Most of the activity is sensible and constructive, having to do mostly with building up programs by buying the best available short-subject support; improving equipment and adding to the comforts of the houses. There is noticeably little giving away of merchandise, though price reductions and coupon book selling are not uncommon.

Houses in all neighborhoods are extending their matinee scale an hour or two into the early evening, and a few are making slight reductions of both afternoon and evening prices for children and adults. Coupon books being offered contain $5 worth of tickets, which sell from $3.50 down to $2.50, and are good for the month of December only.

The double featuring houses are the worst hit in efforts to forestall the seasonal slump. The additional expense of their swollen programs not only prohibits further program overhead, but it makes price reductions out of the question. Double featuring exhibitors, now, are just beginning to realize that in shooting the extra measure bills, they shot the works. There's nothing left for them to offer their indifferent publics at one of the most crucial business seasons of the year.

Children's Matinees Go Big in Chicago House

Chicago — Fox Terminal Theatre inaugurated its children's Saturday matinees here this week. House organized a neighborhood Mickey Mouse Club for the kids, and drilled them on a club cheer and song in the theatre. Neighborhood merchants joined in the move and passed out tickets to the initial performance to kid patrons, through an arrangement with the Terminal management. Merchants got the tickets at a "rate."

Initial performance was well attended and succeeded in interesting the kids. Mickey Mouse cartoons, screen songs and a feature approved by women's clubs will comprise the weekly kid specials, which will be staged every Saturday morning. Fox is organizing the Mickey Mouse clubs and staging the kids' specials nationally.

The Right to Love

(Paramount)

Chatterton's Best

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

RUTH CHATTERTON'S newest picture is bound to cause discussion. "The Right to Love" may never become a box-office knockout, but the sophisticates will find it eminently to their satisfaction. Its drawing abilities will depend entirely upon the strength of the title and the star. Once in, however, any but the most provincial audience will probably like the picture.

The work of the star will bring her no end of praise, but the theme of the story will in a large measure go over the heads of the major portion of the ordinary audience. These assumptions are based on the reactions of preview audiences in two different Southern California theatres.

In both cases Miss Chatterton sustained an emotional interest for unbelievably long stretches of time. But the audiences "let go" during dramatic sequences. Quite evidently the strain was too much for theatregoers trained to sugary romances, melodramatic thrillers and tawdry love scenes. It is Miss Chatterton's picture from start to finish. She dominates from her first entrance to the final fadeout.

A large portion of the story sees her in dual roles—parts in which the characters are diametrically different. The finesse of the star as an actress is never more amply demonstrated than in these scenes. She enacts both parts so expertly that the audience, forgetting that the star is playing both roles, find its sympathies divided.

The technical work on these dual scenes is excellent. Not only does the actress play both roles superbly, but the photographers and cutters did their work so well that the two characters move about together with complete smoothness.

There are numerous cross-overs of one of the characters in front of the others, several embraces but the highlight of technical work and cutting comes when Ruth, as the mother, helps the daughter to don a party gown.

The story was taken from the novel "Brook Evans" by Susan Glaspell and has been admirably adapted to the screen by Zoe Akins. It concerns the love of a young farm girl of the mutton-sleeve era for the son of a haughty neighboring farm woman. The parents of both disapprove of their love affair. Their stolen moments result disastrously when the boy is killed and the girl is robbed of her lover.

An upright and honest but dour farmer, whose advances have been spurned, offers to marry the girl when it is evident that the family will be disgraced by the birth of an illegitimate child.

The next sequences show the mother, eighteen years later, trying to gain those things for her daughter that she missed during her joyless married life. When the daughter discovers her mother's true story, with youth's narrow idealism she turns to the foster father who has been kind.

She breaks her mother's heart by becoming a missionary to China. There a romantic figure enters her life and she finally discovers a similar love to that her mother had experienced and learns to understand the parent who gave so much for her happiness.

Miss Chatterton is seen first as the farm girl, then in the dual role of the mother and daughter on the wind swept Colorado farm and finally as the girl missionary.

Paul Lukas, in the part of the man who wins the girl in China, is as poised and charming as ever in a role which was all too short. David Manners is the young farmer boy lover, an entirely delightful impersonation. Irving Pichel does a strong portrayal as the husband and foster-father.

Richard Wallace deserves credit for fine directing. The story is a real romance of a woman's life and loves. Yet the box-office appeal is questionable. Certainly it is for adult audiences; the more sophisticated the better.

That portion of any audience which understands the delicate psychological situation involved and the finished acting will appreciate and applaud.

It will need light relief—preferably slapstick comedy, lively music and cartoons to balance.

Hook, Line and Sinker

(Radio)

Diverting Foolery

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

NONSENSE with a capital "N" and sense with a lower case "s." Neither sense nor comedy can possibly reach a lower depth than in a Wheeler-Woolsey release, and "Hook, Line and Sinker" is no exception. It's title is indicative of the way the preview audience went for it. They laughed long and heartily and were still grinning as they came out. What more can you ask?

The Wheeler and Woolsey pictures for Radio continue to conform to the plots generally associated with musical comedy. The music, however, has been eliminated, and without song interludes the story structure looks a bit barren in retrospection.

The comics are introduced as a couple of high-powered insurance agents. They meet Dorothy Lee, who is running away from the proverbial man her mother wants her to marry. It seems she has fallen heir (or heiress) to a hotel and, suspicions of its management, is going to take charge herself.

Wheeler and Woolsey proffer their aid and are signed on as the new hotel managers. In attempting to put the place on a paying basis they get mixed up in a gang war and through their very stupidity emerge triumphant.

This in its bare outline is all that serves for plot. Padded with typical Wheeler-Woolsey gags, some of which are new, it is nothing to tax the brain, but will prove rib-tickling fare for the whole family. Where comedies are popular "Hook, Line and Sinker" should do a nice week's business.

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey divide honors and footage. Wheeler plays a bit straighter than usual so that Woolsey, with more answers, seems to have a slight edge. Their antics are a blend of slapstick and wise cracks and undeniably funny.

Jobyna Howland garners her share of laughs with the ease of an experienced farceur. Dorothy Lee gives her usual cute performance and Natalie Moorhead draws a routine vamp assignment. The others are all capable with especial mention due Hugh Herbert as the house detective. Herbert is rapidly making a place for himself on the screen as a "wandering" comic. This is his third straight role in which he has strolled in and out of the script having nothing to do with plot development. His work bears watching.

Local audience registered an inside laugh at a Radio Picture plug in the dialogue. Jobyna Howland asks Woolsey where he is from. Bob replies, "I'm from Oklahomy—down 'Cimarron' way."

The Midnight Special

(Chesterfield)

Packs a Punch

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

CRAMMED with action from start to finish, this is the type of outdoor drama that is decidedly in vogue at the present time and one that will elicit whoops and cheers from juvenile audiences, thrilling adult devotees as well.

It is a railroad drama, as indicated by the title, and travels almost as fast as the flyer. It is highlighted with punch scenes, chief of which is the collision of the midnight special with a freight train. Of course, it's done in miniature, but so cleverly that the average audience will be unable to spot that fact.

Glenn Tryon has the leading role, but this time he plays a straight part and is not called upon for any comedy. He and Merna Kennedy carry the romance with repression and satisfaction, and the balance of the cast, including Mary Carr, Phillips Smalley, Jimmy Aubrey, Tom O'Brien and Norman Phillips, Jr., also give adequate performances. Direction by Duke Worne was loose at times, and the story frequently ignored plausibility, but the production stacks up well with others of its type.

Glenn is a telegrapher in a small town railroad depot and a rival with his superior, the chief dispatcher, for the affections of Miss Kennedy. The dispatcher is in league with a band of crooks who stage the wreck after binding and gagging Glenn. The girl believing him to be a coward, spurns him, but with the aid of his kid brother, Glenn gets a line on the situation, rounds up the yeggs and gets the girl.

The thrill scenes include a break-neck auto race up a winding mountain road, with Glenn leaping from one car into another to fight it out with the dispatcher, and a number of fights.

The picture is not of Class A calibre, but will get over in houses where audiences want their screen fare raw and speedy.

Any type of comedy short will serve to balance.

The Devil to Pay

(United Artists)

Splendid Entertainment

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

WHAT a picture! It is entertainment plus, with Ronald Colman giving perhaps his finest portrayal in years—and that's saying considerable. This Colman vehicle is exactly the type of story which fits the star, who takes full advantage of the situation and delivers the goods. It has sparkling dialogue, most amusing situations and a swell supporting cast.

At the box-office this picture should register heavily as it has plenty of name draw and is a talker that will stand up under strong exploitation. The customers will walk out talking about it—and how! Great for the class houses and the top grade first runs houses. Will stand up well in subsequent bookings also.

As Willie, the wayward son of Lord Leeland, Ronald Colman essays the kind of a chap every man would perhaps like to be. Adventurous, clever, a devil with the women and able to cope quickly with any situation—large or small. Colman is perfectly suited to this type of role and plays it with a comedy flair that will meet with widespread approval. Loretta Young, as the feminine interest, is attractive and handles her part with ease. Myrna Loy, as the other woman, is effective in a small role. Florence Britton, Paul Cavanaugh, Frederick Carr and David Torrence play other lesser roles well.

The story, which is an original by Frederick Lonsdale, is novel and holds one's interest throughout. The dialogue is brilliant and perhaps the most effective part of the talker. The lines are more than clever and the subtlety of them gives the piece a distinctive flavor.

Colman, as the errant son of a rich English lord, goes bankrupt in South Africa and disposes of his personal effects by auction for money to get him home. When he arrives in England he has to face his father, long since peeved over his son's indifferent mode of living. When he is alone with Colman, the father finds that love is stronger than money and the wayward lad emerges from the "conference" with a hundred pounds instead of a scolding.

Ronald takes Florence Britton, his sister, to the Derby and she, in turn invites Loretta Young, who is engaged to the Grand Duke Paul. This starts the love affair between Colman and Miss Young and ends up with Colman attending the ball in honor of Loretta—and at which her engagement is to be announced. However, she gives the Grand Duke the gate and, when Colman proposes, she accepts on condition he does not see his former sweetie, Myrna Loy, again. Miss Loy, however has been so regular that he wants to tell her their affair is over. So Colman plans a chance meeting.

He is caught through a ruse in Miss Loy's dressing room and Loretta breaks the engagement. Later when he calls to ask for forgiveness and tell her the truth, she gives him a check for 500 pounds, saying she pays for her experience. Ronald takes the check, cashes it and sends the money to the impoverished Grand Duke Paul. When Loretta and her father, who has opposed the marriage, find out the truth they straighten out the tangle and all ends well.

Director George Fitzmaurice had a clever story and a fine cast and made the most of them. The result is that the talker is fast and smooth throughout.

Use musicals and semi-serious shorts here for best results.

Charley's Aunt

(Christie—Columbia)

A Laugh Panic

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

THERE have been some funny comedies made since the advent of talkers, but it is safe to say that there hasn't been one that will evoke more belly laughs than "Charley's Aunt." From the time Charlie Ruggles makes his appearance the mirth starts and it doesn't end when the picture is over.

The talker version of this celebrated stage play, which was also effectively produced in silent screen form, is certain to be a swell box-office picture. Any offering that provides so much hearty laughter is bound to draw the word-of-mouth advertising it will get assures it as a first class attraction for the week-run spots and subsequent bookings.

The whole picture is picked up and carried away by Ruggles, who plays the title role. The other members of the cast are adequate, but they don't have a chance with this experienced farceur. When he is cavorting the fact that many funny lines are spoken fails to matter greatly as the audience's laughter drowns out the dialogue and it isn't missed.

The story concerns the college lad who masquerades as the aunt of one of his classmates in order to help the lad get a chance to propose to his best girl. The difficulties that arise before the masquerader can establish his real identity supply the laugh-getting material. Al Christie, who directed the piece, used all the tricks he learned in making comedy shorts and the result is there.

Ruggles is swell in the part of the spurious aunt and he plays the role in lively fashion. His acting is nothing short of slapstick for the major portion of the piece—but what slapstick! To see what gags he uses for laughs—one is almost assured he did come from Brazil—"the place where the nuts come from."

June Collyer, Hugh Williams, Halliwell Hobbes, Rodney McLennan and Flora Sheffield have unimportant parts which they handle most acceptably. Phillips Smalley, Wilson Benge, Doris Lloyd and Flora LeBreton are also well cast.

Theatre patrons, young and old, will get a kick out of this talker and go out talking about it. It's not a big production although it is well staged, but it has that much desired quality which makes pictures a box-office success—and that is real entertainment.

Use anything but slapstick comedy shorts. Give the audience a rest.

Produced by Christie. Distributed by Columbia. Directed by Al Christie. From original stage play by Brandon Thomas. Screen play and dialogue by F. McGrew Willis. Dialogue director, A. Leslie Pearce. ## Madonna of the Streets

(Columbia)

Fair Program

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

ALTHOUGH it is handicapped by a far-fetched story, this is a fair program number containing a lot of audience angles. There is a generous amount of hoke, which gets over O. K.

The effect is spoiled somewhat by an anti-climax, considerable footage being used up before the happy ending and final clinch are effected.

Evelyn Brent does good work as the lead, but the tendency to give her too many close-ups is not such a good idea. Robert Ames appears opposite in a role which is new for him. He is the operator of a mission for the unfortunates in San Francisco. A million is willed him by his uncle, but the latter's girl friend is out after the money, and poses as a derelict to win the mission owner's heart. She is successful, but when he learns of his uncle's desire to leave the money to the girl, withdraws his claim to it, meanwhile being married to the girl. She finally confesses her true identity and is forgiven when she saves his life.

There is a kick in the free-for-all fight which comes in the closing moments, and some comedy bits are interspersed throughout the picture. You can bill it as a fair program offering, which will satisfy generally.

Musicals and comedy will balance.

Free Love

(Universal)

Clever Problem Drama

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

HERE is a picture which will cause a lot of talk. Its punch is actually a sock in the jaw and arguments pro and con should head long lines toward your box-office.

Adapted from the play, "Half Gods," by Sidney Howard, the film is of the drawing room variety of talky talkers. Hobart Henley has, however, contrived to keep his camera moving in a semblance of action. His direction is even easier than his previous success of the same general type, "The Lady Lies."

Conrad Nagel and Genevieve Tobin, six years married, are definitely getting on each other's nerves. Nagel wants his eight hours' sleep and a good breakfast. His wife is more interested in her evening's social activities.

Confiding her difficulties to a psychoanalyst, the wife is told she is an "intuitive introvert" married to an "infantile extrovert." Her understanding of the diagnosis is limited but she gathers the meaning to be that she should have more freedom to do as she pleases—even indulge in free love should she wish. She delivers such an ultimatum to Nagel.

Frightened at losing her, Nagel capitulates and, in his efforts to avoid a break, becomes a door mat to her whims and fancies. Learning how far she can stretch the martial ties, the wife seeks even a little more rope. Running around with Nagel's best friend finally results in rope's end and he resolves to give her grounds for divorce.

The day she is to start for Reno their two children are taken ill with whooping cough. The wife announces that sickness will not deter her and is overheard by the doctor, who voices his low opinion of modern mothers. He thinks they should all be spanked.

It is an idea for Nagel. He opposes his wife's going and is slapped for his pains. The blow is a complete surprise. He sees her in a new light and, with the words, "You have had this coming for a long time," he knocks her cold with a well placed right to the jaw.

The preview audience went wild. Feminine gasps of amazement mingled with masculine approval. The arguments that started were still going on when the lobby crowd dispersed.

From the knockout the picture is brought to a quick and very clever close. Nagel is loading a reel of amateur movie film on his home projector. Genevieve Tobin makes overtures at a reconciliation. With obvious efforts to remain coldly indifferent, Nagel accepts her unconditional surrender as the 16 mm. screen before them reenacts their happy honeymoon.

This small screen projection is in the nature of a burlesque of all amateur movie making. Every gesture is exaggerated in the manner of camera-conscious people engaged in taking pictures for their own amusement.

Nagel gives brilliant account of himself as the husband. His performance is in every way top-notch and his blending of farce and dramatic technique and tempo is a joy to watch. Genevieve Tobin is only less expert by comparison, but somehow fails to impress as she did in her debut in "The Lady Surrenders."

Comedy—and what comedy—relief is in the always capable hands of Zasu Pitts, abetted somewhat by Slim Summerville. The Pitts again plays a maid with her surperbly individual touch. Nice moments are contributed by Ilka Chase and Bert Roach. Monroe Owsley disappoints as the friend.

"Free Love" may not be one of the box-office sensations of the year, but it has many elements of popular appeal and will surely be talked about.

Rogue of the Rio Grande

(Sono Art-World Wide)

Novel; Exciting

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THIS is off the beaten track of westerns, a refreshing change from the accepted pattern. It's a fast-moving and exciting narrative of the Robin Hood type, with a generous sprinkling of love interest and humor. Spencer Gordon Bennet did a good job in directing this Cliff Broughton production, which is good program fare.

Outdoor fans will relish the deeds of the bold El Malo, Mexican bandit who robs the crooked mayor of a border town in order to distribute the money among the poor. The mayor's description of him is so incorrect that the bandit is enabled to circulate in the town without being recognized. He falls in love with an entertainer in the cantina, is nearly captured due to a careless conversation, but rides to safety across the border with the girl and his aide. Meanwhile, he has exposed the mayor as a bandit.

The director tried a new wrinkle in casting Jose Bohr in the title role, for Bohr is an Argentinian actor, so his accent is not faked. In addition, he sings well. He played Eddie Dowling's role in the Spanish version of "Blaze o' Glory." Myrna Joy is an appealing heroine and demonstrates her dancing and singing ability. Raymond Hatton furnishes good comedy and the balance of the cast is O. K.

Comedy and novelties will go well with this.

Produced and distributed by Sono Art-World Wide Pictures. Directed by Spencer Gordon Bennet. Story and screen play by Oliver Drake. Length, 7,000 feet. Running time, 70 minutes. Release date, Oct. 15, 1930.

Part-Time Wife

(Fox)

Charming and Light

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

NOT weighty, but pleasant and charming light entertainment.

"Part-Time Wife" demonstrates what a good game of golf can do to improve a husband's temperament. But don't get the idea that the technicalities of the pastime have been permitted to ride roughshod over the entertainment aspects of the yarn, because they haven't. Leo McCarey, who has plenty of good comedies to his credit, did a nice job with this one. He lightened the tempo all the way and saw to it that the chuckles are divided at equal stretches throughout the footage.

It seems that Eddie Lowe is a big gas and oil man too immersed in business to pay much attention to his charming wife, Leila Hyams. So when Leila, who is crazy about golf, finds Walter McGrail on hand to do this and that for her it becomes easy to understand why she accepts. At the same time, it is made perfectly clear that it is Lowe she loves. Finally Eddie and Leila split; he goes back to his gas stations and she to her golf with posings in bathing suits and unmentionables as her source of income.

Lowe, advised by his doctor to take up golf, protests and then does it. On the links he meets Tommy Clifford, Irish caddy and miniature philosopher, whose influence on Lowe eventually de-commercializes him and turns him into the human scout you've always suspected him to be. Re-enter Miss Hyams, who accidentally finds herself matched up with her husband and discovers that he has changed his spots. They become very good friends again and begin to make joint appearances around town.

The only touch of the dramatic which enters this extremely well-done light comedy is the champion match between Lowe and McGrail, which the former loses when Tommy's dog walks on to the green and spoils Loew's determining shot. However, he and his wife, who has been part of the gallery, finally patch their affairs with McGrail out of the reckoning and that's that.

Lowe, in a comedy role, is a departure from the crook parts he has been playing. The Fox crowd is smart in giving him something else to do and the reaction seems inevitably to be a welcome one. Miss Hyams does extremely competent work in a part that never calls for any straining of the emotions. Tommy Clifford is swell as the boy and McGrail satisfactory. The rest of the cast fills in.

For McCarey's direction, it should be pointed out how smoothly the action flows along and the naturalness with which he had his cast perform.

Attempt to Bolster Chi Oriental Grosses

Chicago—B. & K.'s efforts to awaken a little paying interest in the Oriental Theatre are finally taking form. December 5 the house showed "Billy, the Kid" on the Real-life novelty screen. Following week, Buddy Rogers will come in for personal appearances. Other name bookings and novelties for the house, with additional advertising appropriations, are in process. House has been in the doldrums, more often than not, and since the RKO Palace entered upon a 12-weeks' program of big name acts, the slump has been more marked.

Foreign Representatives Here

Tom D. Cochrane, of Tokyo, Japan, Paramount representative for the Orient, and Frederick W. Lange, of Buenos Aires, manager of the Paramount organization for Argentine, are in New York.

Bomb Two Theatres

Akron, O.—Bombs hurled into the Spicer and Peoples, completely demolished the latter, while slightly damaging the Spicer. Labor troubles are said to be the cause.

The Little Divorcee

(Tiffany)

Fine Comedy

ALTHOUGH it hasn't as many laughs as its predecessor, "The Little Big House," this is a fine comedy. These clever chimp subjects are little short of sensational, for the synchrony is nearly perfect, the chimps apparently talking the clever lines. This is a burlesque on family rows, showing the courtship, family troubles and finally the split, with the wife running away with another man. When hubby appears on the scene, her several suitors are in hiding and jump through the windows. Sig Neufeld deserves credit for his direction of these subjects, which certainly are making a dent in the short subject field. Running time, 16 minutes.

College Cuties

Fine

THERE isn't much sense to this Al Christie comedy, but it does manage to garner a bundle of laughs. It is laid on a college campus, with a cross country run the main feature, and the old gag of a lot of bees spurring the frosh on to the point where he wins the race—and the girl. It's directed intelligently and is okay for any type house. In the cast are Eddie Tamblyn, Marian Shockley, Iris Adrian and Rennie Rondell. Al Christie produced and Nat Ross directed. Running time, 19 minutes.

Expensive Kisses

Dandy

BERT ROACH has the lead in this and manages to get over a lot of laughs, but much of the punch is supplied by a bevy of harem beauties. Bert offers to pay his lawyer $1,000 for each girl he kisses and $100,000 if he should become engaged. Within a short time he owes the attorney several millions, for his uncle, who died in Turkey, has wished on him a whole harem in his will. The short has production values and moves swiftly. Directed by William Watson. Running time, 18 minutes.

Believe It or Not

(Vitaphone No. 1038)

Interesting

ONE of the Ripley series and quite interesting. The excuse for "Rip" to spill his collections of odd facts in this instance is an action brought against him by the people in which he has to demonstrate the accuracy of statements he has made. This gives Ripley an excuse to draw and talk at the same time. Running time, 10 minutes.

Editor's Note—In Motion Picture News for August 30, one of the "Believe It or Not" series was reviewed as No. 2. This is an error. It should have read No. 5 and Vitaphone Varieties No. 1093.

One Day

(Visugraphic)

First Rate

THIS one has wide appeal for practically any type house because of its unusual treatment. A pictorial story of Philadelphia is enhanced by numerous trick shots, and although there is included an obvious plug for the "Quaker City," this factor can do little harm to its splendid entertainment quality. Running time, 26 minutes.

Voice of Hollywood No. 23

Very Good

SAMMY COHEN is the guest announcer, aided by the University of Southern California and the Tiffany Chimp. The chimp gets off some clever work, the band is good, Sammy is fairly funny and the finish is a darb. A few screen names are introduced. Running time, 8 minutes.

The Gorilla Mystery

(Columbia)

Good Cartoon

THIS is not up to the standard of other Mickey Mouse cartoons, but it is a good comedy, nevertheless. The telephone sequence is especially good. Running time, 7 minutes.

Way Down South

Just Fair

CREATORE and his band offering a series of southern melodies, synchronized with scenes illustrating them. The music is good, but the subject is just fair. Running time, 9 minutes.

Okay

A VISIT to two ancient Spanish missions near San Antonio, Tex., with a group of studio monks singing in the cloister; a tour of Bermuda and a shot showing a Parisian musician playing simultaneously on two pianos comprise this issue, which packs a general appeal. Running time, 9 minutes.

Slave Days

(Tiffany)

Fair

PRESENTING the Forbes Randolph Kentucky Jubilee Singers in a series of southern songs. It's well done and has a number of good song numbers. Spot it in where novelty and music are needed. Running time, 9 minutes.

No, No, Lady

(Educational—Sennett)

A Wow

HERE is a two-reeler comedy with a plot that actually keeps the cash customers guessing all the way through. A marital triangle develops into a dramatic rehearsal, with the conditions reversed later. Andy Clyde and Dorothy Christy, as the husband and wife, keep the laughs going at a rapid pace, ably assisted by Frankie Eastman, Cyril Chadwick and Charles Coleman. Good for any type of house, large or small. Directed by Eddie Cline. Running time, 19 minutes.

De Woild's Champion

Just Fair

PAUL HURST has been turning in some fine comedy work in features, but this one doesn't give him any great chance for laughs, save for the fight at the finish, which offers a kick. In this he's a ham fighter whose manager matches him with the world's champion, without the fighter's knowledge. After he kayoes the champion on a fluke, the latter's girl friend inveigles him into a return match, the champ certain of victory. However, he makes the mistake of calling Hurst a big palooka, and Paul cleans up on the house. Running time, 20 minutes.

What is the MAJOR Achievement of 1930?

THE Film DAILY Wednesday, December 10, 1930

● ● ● AS THIS dizzy year of 1930 wobbles to a close, what outstanding achievements can be chalked up for the film biz?..... we will select one that may astonish you.....it is American development of the world-wide foreign field.....of course you will snicker and haw-haw at that one.....when you survey the foreign biz all shot to pieces by the talkie upset this past year.....but we're referring to development of the Newsreel.....Fox Movietone News, to be more explicit..... what Clayton P. Sheehan, foreign manager of Fox, and Truman H. Talley, general manager of the Newsreel, have done this past twelve months constitutes one of the MAJOR trade accomplishments of the year.....it reads like a page from a modern Arabian Nights.....right now this organization is turning out 37 foreign editions every week.....Talley has established four major foreign Movietone organizations.....plans are in the works for News Reel Theaters in the important cities of the world.....one year ago the British Movietone News was started in London.....four months later Fox Actualites Parlantes was established in Paris.....then came Fox Tonende Wochenschau in Berlin.....and in far off Sydney, Australia, the Australian Movietone was started.....for each of these organizations it was necessary to establish independent sound camera units, editorial offices, and manufacturing plants..... every one of the 37 editions is edited especially with a view to local prejudices and interests.....practically every important foreign country gets its Fox newsreel made just for its particular VIEWPOINT.....mull that one over, if you think this was a kindergarten stunt that Messrs. Sheehan and Talley put over .....in ONE little year.....it's a job for diplomats..... editing newsreels so as not to offend nationalistic spirit..... and so well has the stupendous task been handled, that the various nationals consider their particular newsreel a NATIVE INSTITUTION.....one American producing concern has solved the foreign problem so far as the newsreel is concerned .....and for 1931 what producer is going to do the same thing for the feature talkies?.....it CAN be done.....

Film Boards of Trade on Trial Until April, When Future Will be Determined

United Artists rushes to deny the rumors, published in South American newspapers and reiterated by an American press association, to the effect that Gloria Swanson is dead, stating the star is living happily at Beverly Hills. "All the other United Artists stars are alive, too," the company asserts.

Coast Climate Burns Brains, Marlene Says

Chicago—Local picture critics who met Marlene Dietrich, Paramount's new-born star and "Garbo-threat," at a breakfast reception arranged by Balaban & Katz in the bungalow atop the Hotel Sherman, were mystified by the strangeness of the German actress.

Marlene, they learned, didn't care about publicity; didn't like Hollywood or Southern California, and couldn't understand how American show people can cheapen themselves by permitting and inviting discussion of their private affairs in the public prints. American news photographers, too, bewildered her with their innocent discourtesies.

"If our photographers at home ever attempt their methods," she said, "I'll attempt violence on them."

Marlene hates Hollywood and the Southern California climate.

"Its sunshine is deadly monotonous. It burns your brains out. It's a good place to work and make money, but to live there—never! My contract specifically states that I shall not be obliged to remain there for more than six months at a time. I'm thinking of having that period shortened."

Contract Scrapping Is Dangerous, James Warns

Wholesale breaching of contracts as a result of the Supreme Court decisions outlawing compulsory arbitration and the credit system will result in general "jacking up" of film rentals and a quick return to the deposit system, William James, president of the Ohio exhibitor unit, warns. James, in New York for a brief visit, urged against taking undue advantage of distributors as a result of the decisions.

Substitute System Offered By Dun Company to Be Studied by Ass'n.

Film Boards of Trade will have until April to demonstrate their right to future existence, it was determined at a meeting Thursday at the Hays office where the budget for the year was agreed upon, subject to action in April when the new fiscal year starts. During the "test" period, the usefulness of the Film Boards, considered in proportion to expense of maintenance, will be weighed with a proposal of a substitute system made by the R. G. Dun Co.

Annual budget of the boards for 1931 will be shaved $20,000 to $25,000. The 1930 budget was $260,000, so expenses available for 1931 will be between $240,000 and $245,000 if they are continued. Thursday's meeting, the regular annual gathering to consider the budget, was confronted with queries on the part of various company officials as to the feasibility of maintaining Film Boards as a result of the credit and arbitration decisions.

Pettijohn Pleads for "Baby"

C. C. Pettijohn, "father" of Film Boards, made a plea for their maintenance, pointing out that while their efforts had been curtailed by the credit and arbitration decrees, they nevertheless saved distributors large sums in various other ways.

Frederick H. Elliott, who was secretary of the former National Association of the Motion Picture Industry which the Hays association replaced, had suggested to some distributors on behalf of the Dun company to set up a motion picture division to take over funtions of Film Boards and the Copyright Protection Bureau. The Dun firm has a similar organization in the textile industry. Discussion brought out that the Copyright Protection Bureau is self-supporting. Hays is to name a committee of six, composed of sales managers and attorneys, to make a study of the Dun proposal. Felix Feist of M-G-M is chairman.

Attend in Force

The following general sales managers or sales managers' representatives were among those present: Sidney R. Kent, Paramount; Phil Reisman, Universal; E. C. Grainger, Fox; Felix Feist, M-G-M; Sam E. Morris and Claude Ezell, Warners-First National; Oscar Hanson, Tiffany; Cleve Adams and Jerome Saffron, of Radio Pictures; Al Lichtman, United Artists.

Among the attorneys were:

Deal Set

San Francisco—Announcement is to be made soon in New York by Sam Katz to the effect that Publix theatres in six Coast cities are to be operated by Fox West Coast under a management deal, it is learned here.

Publix and Fox Chiefs Surveying Coast Situation

Portland—Officials of Fox West Coast and Paramount are surveying Coast situations preparatory to merging of the companies' houses under Fox management. Managers here do not expect new instructions before Dec. 15.

In event the deal is consummated, Fanchon & Marco shows probably will be switched to the Paramount, with the Broadway adopting a straight picture policy.

Several months ago, when Motion Picture News exclusively reported that a management deal was being proposed between Fox West Coast and Paramount, there were prompt denials from both companies concerned.

Latin Actors Are Disappointed; Al Capone Too Quiet

Chicago—A carload of Spanish and French movie folks passed through Chicago this week en route to Hollywood where they will make foreign versions for M-G-M. Local newspapers giggled at the spectacle of such wholesale importations, every one of whom was excited over the possibility of viewing a snack of machine gunning in Al Capone's center of operations. The glimpse, however, was denied them.

The group included Valentin Parera, described as "the Valentino of Spain," and Maria Luiz Callejo, "the Lupe Velez of Madrid." Benito Perojo, one of Spain's outstanding directors; Roger Ferdenand and Jean Blanchon, French scenarists, were also with the "shipment."

FROM CINEMA PALACES TO COUNTRY STORES

RETENTIVE memories will recall that era which added to the industry's lustre the prestige of de luxe theatres in all of the principal cities of the country. It wasn't so long ago.

The development was a logical one in the growth which has carried this business from the onus of a mushroom project into the more substantial, and respected, atmosphere of big business.

The idea, whether deliberately conceived or stumbled upon, did what it was supposed to do and the business, as an institution, profited thereby.

When Luxury Reigned

INTO the public's consciousness there seeped a realization that in the motion picture was an amusement formula that purposed to go somewhere in building its future. The Paramounts, the Roxys, scattered in generous profusion throughout the nation, furnished the proof that clinched the argument.

Gobelin tapestries—the real stuff—were used for lobby decoration. Real works of art were spotted in positions of commanding importance in each de luxe house. The atmosphere was one of dignity, refinement and rest.

Tank Town Stuff

BUT in this year of grace, the dignity of the motion picture's home has been shattered. High pressure merchandisers, described as experts, figure the box-office intake is only part of the scheme. Show 'em silk stockings and they'll buy. So, too, with sheet music, turkeys in the lobbies, honey in the corridors, cartoonists in the lounge, candy machines, weighing machines, all sorts of vending machines. Anything goes, the theory has it. It's a walk-away. The public is sap enough to fall if you advance the bait.

Competition for Nudes

IN a Publix theatre the other night an usher intruded on the conversation of a couple in the lounge with a three-minute sales talk on behalf of a voice recording apparatus. It wasn't so long ago that RKO attempted to sell refrigerators on the stage of several of its major theatre operations.

The Gobelins today are largely concealed with garish cut-outs, more often than not of figures in the nude or semi-nude. The oil paintings are still there, too, but sheet music and one-sheets are providing pretty tough competition. The one time refinement of the ante-rooms and lobbies is rent with ushers who sing theme songs and loud speakers that never stop bellowing.

A Bas Prestige

IT may be very profitable. This super-sort of merchandising may fill the holes shot into box-office grosses by poor pictures. It may demonstrate—to themselves—what smart showmen those who sponsor these practices are.

But in this writer there is neither patience nor room for argument over the irreparable damage which is thus foisted on the prestige of the entire industry. It is inevitable that if the system is not curtailed or dropped, the reaction which will of necessity set in will force on the trade another problem of major importance.

Week After Week They're Pinched, But Shows Go on

Louisville—Fight over Sunday operation of picture theatres at Owensboro between the Owensboro Ministerial Association and R. P. Thomas, resident manager for the Strand Amusement Co., operating the Bleich and Empress, now about six months old, is going merrily along, with the exhibitors in the hole to the tune of $2,000 or more paid in fines, court costs, etc., plus attorneys' fees.

The fight has been marked by weekly arrests of employes of the theatres, on warrants sworn to by the churchmen, following refusal of the police department to swear to additional warrants. When the cases are presented, the defendants are fined, go back and get in a new jam the following Sunday.

Now the Ministerial Association is going further and endeavoring to secure passage of a city ordinance, drawn by a committee of attorneys, and providing that managers of theatres must advertise for 30 days in the newspapers their intentions to apply for city licenses to operate picture theatres, and that applications for licenses must be accompanied by affidavits that the Sunday closing law has not been violated. The ordinance would also provide that employes of a theatre could be arrested as many times as they violated the old blue laws which prohibit unnecessary work on the Sabbath; and that a violation of the ordinance would give the City Commissioners the right to revoke license of the theatre, and if the violations are continued the city would be given the right to cut off power, light and water service at the theaters so violating the ordinance.

Dent Arrives

Arthur Dent, sales manager of British International Pictures of London, is in New York from London.

Step Would Violate Decree, Is View; Hess Version Of Contract Spurned

Washington — Allied States Association will resist "to the utmost the reinstatement of the deposit system, in lieu of the outlawed credit and arbitration system," and has rejected Gabriel L. Hess' version of the proposed standard license agreement drafted by the 5-5-5 conferences, and intends to fight alleged tendency to tie in features and shorts in rental deals, in violation of the trade practice agreement.

This was made clear by President Abram F. Myers in a review of the meeting in New York last week of association directors. Directors, he said, unanimously agreed that any reinstatement of deposits generally or in considerable number could only result from a concerted effort to nullify the credit and arbitration decisions and would amount to a violation of the decree in the arbitration case.

The organization favors the proposed standard form of agreement, but is opposed to the version of it drafted by Hess. When the 5-5-5 conferences ended, Myers and Hess were commissioned to agree upon wording of the agreement, each preparing versions which are at variance.

To Probe Copyright Bureau

Investigatio nof the Copyright Protection Bureau to determine whether its activities have exceeded legal bounds and of the Federal Checking Bureau to ascertain whether information obtained by it would be available to distributors other than those whose pictures are checked, also was voted.

Exhibitors, despite the trade practice agreement, allegedly are being forced to buy features to get shorts and vice versa and protest against the alleged practice is to be lodged and fight against the practice started unless it is eliminated.

Publix to Hold On to Detroit Chain-Trendle

Detroit—Take it from George W. Trendle, the Kunsky theatres are not to be turned back by Publix to their former owner, as stated in a Detroit report to Motion Picture News. There is not a grain of truth in the entire story," he states, and then adds:

"It has stirred up a hornet's nest in the city of Detroit and really should be counteracted as a matter of fairness to the Paramount Publix Corporation."

He says his information is the houses will end their year with a profit in excess of $500,000 and regards reversion of the theatres to their original operator as illogical in view of the contract made at the time of the transfer.

"In the first place," Trendle told Motion Picture News, "the Michigan theatre was transferred to the Kunsky Theatres Corp. wholly at the time the Balaban & Katz people made their deal with Kunsky and in return for Kunsky Theatres Corp. They were given the percentage of the stock of that corporation. When we sold out the entire operation to Publix we made a definite settled deal which particularly provided against the return of any theatre to us. Our arrangement with Publix provides that if we hold a certain number of shares they will pay us a definite price for it."

Publix has been completely silent on the story that the company may turn the Kunsky houses back in the next six months. The reason is reported to be the approximate $21,000 to $30,000 weekly loss under which the chain is declared to have been operating since last year. Prior to publication the Detroit correspondent for Motion Picture News made a thorough check. At that time the story was not denied by Publix officials in that city.

Hatfield, W. E. Australian Chief, Moving Up Ladder

Sydney, Australia—R. M. Hatfield, managing director of Western Electric in Australia, will quit this field and sail for America on December 20. He will be succeeded by J. H. Barker, at present head of the New Zealand branch.

According to report, Hatfield's Australian activities will be rewarded with a still higher position with the parent company.

INSIDERS'

ECHOING through the canyons of Times Square is a persistent yarn that two buddies of years' standing have reached the parting of the ways. They are Winnie Sheehan and Jimmy Grainger.

Take a tip from The Insiders and, if any doubt existed in your mind at all, wipe it out. It's the bunk-unadulterated and pure.

As a matter of faithful reporting, if Winnie and Jimmy weren't so sensible they might have become disturbed. Which they didn't.

When Sheehan came East about three weeks ago for a round robin with Harley Clarke and W. C. Michel, Grainger left New York. What the speculative did know was that three of the big factors in Fox affair were confabbing in New York and that, contrary to expectations, Grainger was not among those present. What they didn't know was that Jimmy had gone into the Southwest on an extremely important and confidential distribution problem for his company.

And so it was that the whispers began to mount. In passing the story on, the usual procedure prevailed. Each gossiper added to the reputed facts until Times Square almost resounded with the reports that Sheehan and Grainger had split.

So much for rumor. Now for fact:

The two men, friends for twenty years and business associates for a goodly number of that twenty, were never closer. They have had and, all things being equal, probably will have disagreements on types of pictures, casts and directors. That, however, is nothing more or less than a situation which will arise in the operations of any business enterprise.

To demonstrate beyond all issue how foolish the schism talk is, get this:

Grainger is on his way West, accompanied by the missns. Together with Edmund, pride of the Grainger clan, they will spend the holidays at the Sheehan domicile. In the meantime, domestic activities on Winnie's part include fattening of the festive board on Christmas morning. And that, The Insiders maintain, disposes of that.

Getting the Lowdown

Harold B. Franklin intends to go slow on proposed acquisitions for his national circuit, it is indicated by his Coast statement explaining that his moves will await the outcome of a nation-wide survey now being made by his staff.

Present business conditions, Franklin realizes, dictate the utmost caution on any kind of financial undertaking. So he is watching his step, rather than trying to rush in on a wholesale building and buying spree. If he gets a report that times are not propitious for an expansion program at the present time, The Insiders understand he will postpone launching of the venture. At any rate, Franklin will not start out after theatres until he is assured a bankroll sufficient to build up a chain of the strength he plans.

The Light of Day

The auditors are having their inning these days. Very much so.

But what they are discovering isn't always pleasant news for the bosses to whom they submit their findings. There is the series of circumstances in one large company where the adding machine ground out schedule after schedule and where the sum total of the conclusions demonstrated that more money was being spent on production than the sales department plus the theatre division could possibly gross.

Times Are So Tough That—

CARL LAEMMLE is reported planning to reissue his Straight from the Shoulder Talks.

M-G-M is cutting down on Leo's meat quota.

R-K-O is omitting the hyphens.

The fellow selling apples in front of No. 729 has folded.

Radio's "giant" has gone into the egg business, thanks to the Pathe rooster.

"Six Syllable" Simmons is reducing to five.

Eric Von Stroheim intends to confine his directional activities to only 29 reels per picture.

Press agents will utilize only 50 per cent of the available supply of adjectives.

The songbirds along Tin Pan Alley are writing 'em in half notes.

A theatre doorman in Chicago was arrested for loitering in the lobby.

The big executives are eliminating "regards" from their telegrams.

Cecil De Mille is planning to use miniature sets.

"Original" scenario writers are borrowing books from the Hollywood libraries.

Signs announcing "All Local Calls Ten Cents" are being placed on telephones in song publishers' offices.

Then came some meetings. The head of production went into a huddle with the president and general financial overseer. Charts were draws. One of them carried the name of every picture since the company started on its way, and the cost. A parallel graph showed what each production had grossed. From that point on, it was naturally easy to figure.

It likewise proved an easy job to convince the production mogul who, like all of his other Hollywood compatriots, had been spending far too much money, that it wasn't in the cards to continue as was. Right then and there it was determined that conservatism, tempered with wisdom, was to be the order of the day.

For an industry panorama, take the instance of this one company and multiply it by as many major organizations as you will today find in the business—and the story is told.

Mr. Fox

William Fox, who has been getting into the headlines pretty regularly of late, now is reported planning, among other things, to become active in manufacture and sales of Universal sound reproducers, made by the same interests which manufacture the Sentry Safety Control device.

Reports also persist that Fox has been a principal figure in a series of conferences with Former Governor Alfred E. Smith and John J. Raskob, looking forward a daddy-of-'em-all merger.

A Bit Anxious

"Cimarron" will cost about $1,700,000 before the cameras stop grinding. They're grinning bravely over at Radio when they talk about this outdoor opus, but they also appreciate the fact that, with a near-$2,000,000 negative, it takes loads and loads of dollars to meet that cost, plus prints, plus distribution, plus exploitation and advertising.

A Lesson—Maybe

Producers and exhibitors who play musicals and weep may find some consolation in the fact that Broadway prototypes, as a general procedure, haven't been any more successful. The money dropped along the main stem this year on warble operas has been plenty. There may or may not be a lesson in all of this, but facts are facts.

Mice and Men

The upset, popular indoor sport of the picture business, is scoring another trophy. That headline grabber, Howard Hughes, is one of the central figures in an interesting situation now fermenting in Hollywood. Young Mr. Hughes, you will recall, almost purchased a substantial interest in Art Cinema, but a last minute upset relegated that development into the limbo of the not-to-be.

In the meantime, Hughes determined to enter the laboratory business and Schenck made a deal with Yates of Consolidated to handle U. A. printing. All of which is reported to have placed in jeopardy the three-picture deal under discussion by H. and S.

It isn't difficult to understand, with Hughes running his own lab, why he placed in the position of having his own pictures printed by a rival concern.

Consequently, if he determines to become an outside producer for Paramount, don't permit yourself to become too surprised.

A Chiseler Called

One of those family indiscretions that are common knowledge to every one but the immediate family continues to earn plenty of snickers among the Chicago film and theatre crowd.

This one is at the expense—just that—of an important circuit exec. who has been everywhere scraping expenditures to the bone in an essential economy campaign. The gentleman involved, has, by an ambiguous position inside and outside the circuit's local office, succeeded in nullifying most of the local economies by extravagances in serving the circuit which are readily turned to his own profit. When called for an explanation he glibly places the blame for mounting expenses for which he himself is responsible on the shoulders of managers.

Recently, not satisfied with the particular chiseling agency he has maintained for months, he attempted to establish a second and similar one. However, the circuit's managers who are getting impatient over the misplaced criticism the explanations of the man in the office is earning them, rebelled at the prospect of carrying the additional load for him, and frankly threatened to air their grievances if he undertook the new venture.

As a result, there is one less printing concern in a certain city than there might have been, and the same company that has served the circuit well for many months continues to furnish its programs and tickets.

Sagacity

Joe Kennedy again showed his business sagacity in completing deal for sale of Pathe assets without including the company's interest in DuPont-Pathe. The latter, which manufactures negative and positive film, has been doing a steadily increasing business, with dividends now being paid at the rate of $40 a share per annum. The company's earnings in 1929 amounted to more than $100 a share and prediction is being made that the 1930 figure will top that high mark.

Liquidation of assets in the RKO deal will become primarily a holder of capital stock of DuPont-Pathe. That will enable Pathe stockholders to realize a real profit on their investment, in Kennedy's opinion, which will be impossible unless the RKO deal is consummated as planned. For that reason, he is confident that the stockholders will ratify the agreement without delay at the forthcoming special meeting.

Hot Wires

ALL is not quiet on the Publix front. There is the Detroit situation, as per example, precipitated when The Insiders' daddy, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, published that hot yarn about the Kunsky houses, their reported weekly dip into the red and the possibility that Sam Katz may return them to their builder in the next six months.

The Katz organization headquartering in New York hasn't spoken. Nary a word came through from the Paramount Building. But, on the inside, plenty was going on. The wires between that city and this, so the story has it, burned plenty, and the economy complex at Publix was shoved unceremoniously aside—for the nonce, at least.

George Trendle, quondam general manager of the Kunsky string when it was independently operated, tells you elsewhere today that those houses can't be returned under the terms of the contract. That may easily be the case and a number of film men in the automobile city so believe. That, however, doesn't dissipate the slant that Publix would like to pry itself loose from them if a deal can be worked out, for instance, whereby Paramount is assured playing time without assuming the red ink of operation.

AHALT is to be called on sexy titles, use of which has been growing at what some consider an alarming rate. The Hays office is taking an active hand in the matter and at a meeting during the week is said to have turned thumbs down on some 60 proposed titles on the ground that they were too hot.

Some of those permitted to get by also came in for reprimand, it is said, only the fact that much of the paper already has been set enabling them to get in under the wire.

There has been a preponderence of hot titles in recent months. In supplying them, producers were harkening to the demands of theatre bookers, who insisted that spicy titles were needed to curb the falling off in box-office receipts caused by present economic conditions. Now, however, there is to be a changed situation, so The Insiders understand.

Among the titles frowned upon by the distributors' association were some used on big successes of silent days. Others had been scheduled for some forthcoming specials, but notwithstanding they were given the bird.

This stand on the part of the distributor organization indicates a sharp swing of the pendulum against sexy pictures. The public has been howling for sophisticated dramas in a big way, and producers could not be blamed for meeting the public demand, but now the cycle is changing.

The success of some of the current pictures emphasizes the point. Clean action dramas with a different twist have shown surprising strength at the box office. Novelty is the big demand of the day and wise producers are preparing to cash in on the fact.

The Highest Bidder?

One of the most interesting deals in Chicago film and theatre history is now pending between United Artists exchange and one of the smallest theatres in the city. The deal involves the Chicago first-run of Chaplin's "City Lights," for which, according to the description of a U. A. representative, a "fabulous" sum has been offered by the owner of the tiny house. It is understood that the amount is a $50,000 guarantee, and percentage.

So tempting has the offer proved to United Artists that no decision has been made to date, although the subject was first broached about one month ago. Moreover, the decision will not be made by local United Artist representatives, as the matter has been carried to home office sales executives. Pending their decision, The Insiders are refraining from publishing the name of the theatre.

The United Artists' franchise held by Publix-Balaban & Katz does not include the Chaplin productions, which leaves United Artists open to give full consideration to the "City Lights" offer and Chaplin has said the film goes to the highest bidder. A decision is expected before the first of the year.

Producers, Prodded by Bankers, Plan To Set Film Maximum Cost at $400,000

Biting the Hand—

Sid Grauman is expected to get himself disliked with Coast presentation of "Once in a Lifetime," for which he paid $10,000 for western production rights. The show indulges in considerable mud-slinging at the expense of the film industry.

Louisville Fans' 50 Million Tied Up Hurting B. O.

Louisville—Business of Louisville exhibitors in the latter half of November and early days of December has been off somewhat as a result of financial conditions, following failure of a number of local banks, which also resulted in closing of suburban branches; several out in the state and two at New Albany, Ind., and five or more points in Southern Indiana. Heavy deposits of business concerns and individuals have been tied up to the tune of $50,000,000 or more in Louisville alone.

People in recent years have gotten so in the habit of depending on the banks and carrying but small amounts of cash that many persons of large means were found counting chicken feed. The effect on business and payrolls has been generally bad. The trouble here started with failure of Caldwell & Co., investment bankers of Nashville, Tenn., which concern was tied in with the National Bank of Kentucky interests at Louisville. In the crash numerous banks in Tennessee, Arkansas and North Carolina also went, which makes for bad business conditions over much natural trade territory of Louisville merchants and manufacturers.

To date one bank in Louisville, the Security, and one at New Albany, the American, have been able to resume. The others may in some cases resume. In the meantime things are naturally dull, and everyone feels it.

Munro Running Hoyt Unit In Australia for Clarke

Sydney, Australia—Charles E. Munro, hitherto general manager of Fox here, is in complete charge of Hoyts, big Australian theatre circuit. Appointment follows Fox's million-dollar purchase of control in the chain.

Tryon With Christies

Hollywood—Glenn Tryon, who recently completed his Universal contract, will next go to Christies. The comedy producers have signed Tryon to star in a feature length vehicle as yet untitled. Tryon recently completed "The Midnight Special" for Chesterfield.

Harley Clarke Suggestion Is Seen as Prompting Move Shaving Expense

Hollywood—Can producers set and maintain a maximum figure on negative costs? That is a question being asked here as developments moved toward a reported understanding to set $400,000 as the top mark for the studios to shoot at in production of pictures.

Harley L. Clarke

Bankers for some time, as pointed out some weeks ago by Motion Picture News, have been laying down the law in the matter of negative cost reductions. Orders have been issued that production costs must be shaved, and the maximum figure is being suggested as a way to bring about the desired result. However, some studio officials question whether there can be a successful plan evolved under an inflexible cost policy.

Harley L. Clarke, Fox president, is credited with having suggested the $400,000 figure, and is said to have found a sympathetic reaction on the part of other producers. Stories henceforth are to be selected with the maximum cost figure in view, it is said.

The success of pictures which have cost considerably below the $400,000 figure and the flopping of others which went far above that amount prompted the new move.

Henley Quits Paramount

Denver — Sam Henley has resigned as manager of the Paramount exchange and gone to Hollywood. H. W. Braly, manager of the Rocky Mountain division, will take over the Denver exchange in addition to his other duties.

Doubling in Brass

A film salesman dropped off the 10:30 local in a Florida town. On the station platform was a truck and, seated on the truck, an old darky in blue shirt and overalls.

The film salesman looked him over and called: "Come here, boy, and tote these grips up to the theatre for me."

The old darky came over, picked up the grips and followed the salesman up to the theatre. The manager was out, so the salesman told the darky to lead the way to the colored theatre. When they arrived at the colored theatre, the salesman gave him a quarter and told him to get busy and hunt up the manager.

"I'se de manager," was the humble reply.

Swatting the Song

Omaha—There's a real mystery in film circles here. When "Just Imagine" was shown at the Paramount it was discovered that the song, "Never Swat a Fly," had been cut out. The miscreant who did it is unknown, but he probably figured that it was not appropriate for this season of the year.

Ohio Censors Now Blind and Deaf? Dayton Thrilled

Dayton, O.—Ohio censors, who have acquired a reputation for ridiculous deletions and wholesale rejections, are now suspected of being asleep at the switch or requiring the services of a competent eye and ear specialist, according to Emil Austgen, manager of Loew's here.

When M-G-M's "War Nurse" opened at that house crowds clamored for admission throughout the entire day, eager to get a load of the forbidden lines usually consigned to the "hell box" by the ever-watchful moralistic guardians who occupy the censorial sanctum-sanctorium at Columbus.

Manager Austgen, in reporting on the situation, said: "New attendance records were established by this picture. Crowds seemed excited. Audiences were thrilled by the risque dialogue. Unusual amount of comment from patrons. Looks like Dayton must have received an undeleted print, or the Ohio censors reviewed this picture with one eye shut and both ears plugged up."

Double-Featuring Vogue in Chicago

Chicago—Publix and RKO theatres remain the only circuit houses not using double features here. The entire string of Fox houses with the exception of the downtown Monroe are now using the double bills. The Monroe tried them out two consecutive weeks, but abandoned them when business declined immediately. The Monroe now advertises a double comedy bill.

Warner houses also use the double features liberally throughout its string of twenty. De Luxe neighborhood houses and the downtown Orpheum are the exceptions in the Warner line-up. Essaness chain is using them in all houses excepting the newly opened Vogue. In addition, about forty independent spots are double featuring.

Fox Crown theatre is also featuring a "country store" night with give-aways once a week.

Raskob and duPont Consulted on All Matters, but Do Not Control Warners

Warners in Frisco

San Francisco—Warners' expansion program along the Pacific seaboard will result in invasion of this city Dec. 25, when the Embassy will be reopened under the Warner banner. The house has been acquired from D. S. Markowitz, owner, who last week took it over when lease of W. B. Wagnon expired. Remodeling now is under way.

Providence Fans Quick in Razzing Draggy Pictures

Providence—Adult patrons in this territory are following the lead of the kiddies in demanding more action in their cinema fare. The novelty of talkers has worn off and, while patrons go strong for 'em, they give the royal razzberry to those pictures that use up footage for no apparent reason.

It is nothing unusual for auditors to sing out a choice bit of advice to the cast when the film begins to drag. Exhibitors are cognizant of this and dislike to book films that deal too much in the "descriptive."

Children have turned their backs on the type of picture now being shown, although "Hell's Angels," "The Dawn Patrol" and westerns always can attract the youngsters. What gives the tots pains in their little tummies are the productions dealing with marital complexities or social problems of any sort. On the other hand, movie moguls point out, those are the only pictures that have a pull with the parents—so what to do?

Seldom now does little Willie toddle up to the b.o. with his adoring parents. He is put in the cooler until pappy and mammy have watched the Gilberts and Garbos do their stuff. If he is a good boy, however, he may be permitted to attend the special performances which all of the houses feature now and then. At these the pictures shown are compatible with the growing boy's idea of red-blooded action. It is significant, too, that girls under 12 have little regard for "fashion" films, preferring pictures of adventure in fast tempo.

Some of the second-run houses are cashing in by playing as first or supplementary attractions films designed to please the little ones.

Lytell, Oland Signed

Hollywood—Tiffany has signed Bert Lytell and Warner Oland. Lytell has been cast opposite Kay Johnson in "The Single Sin," which is in preparation. Oland will play in "Drums of Jeopardy," which will get under way next week, under the direction of George B. Seitz.

Refuse Places on Board; Company in Black and Prospects Bright

Wilmington—While it was intimated that Pierre S. duPont and John J. Raskob exercise increasing voice in Warner affairs, they were not elected to the directorate of the company at the annual meeting here, due, it is said, to their unwillingness to serve. The local financiers failed to carry out their reported pre-meeting plan to secure a controlling interest in the company. About 100 attended the stockholders' meeting.

While he did not mention duPont and Raskob by name, Abel C. Thomas, New York, secretary of the company, who presided in the absence of Harry M. Warner, is understood to have been referring to them when he said:

"We would like to have certain persons on the board, but they have expressed their unwillingness to serve. They would really gain nothing in power by election as directors as they are always consulted by the company. We hope they will soon change their minds and come on the board."

Thomas later admitted that he was referring to Wilmington people, in replying to a question by a stockholder.

Company Prospering

Thomas stated that the company is more prosperous now than during the summer, although he admitted the company, as well as competitors, was badly hit during the summer. Money is now being made, he added. The possible earnings of the company depend on economic conditions, he said.

The need of a picture house in this city was brought out at the meeting and Thomas stated that it was the intention of the company to build such a structure here. Warners have the Grand Opera House here under a lease which will expire in three years.

A stockholder desired to know when dividends would be paid and was told that it would be unwise to pay dividends if it was only for the present, and future payment could not be assured. It was stated that the company wants to be able to continue paying its dividends when it starts.

It was brought out that, with the exception of Australia, foreign business in English-speaking countries was more than satisfactory. Thomas declared that the English business was especially good. He commented that a situation existing in France and Germany would have to be met.

English, French, Spanish and German versions of films would have to be produced eventually, it was brought out. German business is better than the French, it was stated.

Experimenting with Television

The coming of television in due time was predicted by Thomas, who said that the company has spent much money on this development.

Asked if there was any encouragement for

Fight Not Over

Wilmington — The Warner Paramount fight is not over, Abel C. Thomas, Warner secretary, intimated at the stockholders' meeting in statement that the company is friendly in its relationship with competitors although very competitive with one company in particular. He did not care to name the company, although he later remarked that Paramount is Warners' chief competitor.

Publix Building Eleven in U. S.; Five in Europe

Eleven new theatres are under construction by Publix. They are at Helena, Ark., Steubenville, Hamilton, Cincinnati and Middletown in Ohio, Ashland, Ky., two at Chicago, Bristol, Tenn., North Platte, Neb., and Aurora, Ill.

In addition, remodeling is under way at Oakland, Cal., Lawrence, Mass., Roanoke, Va., and Fostoria, O. Work is to start soon on new theatres at Elyria, Fremont and Mansfield, O.; Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Newport News, Va., Newburgh, Glens Falls, and Plattsburg, N. Y.

Five European Houses

Paramount has plans for five new theatres in Europe. A house now is under construction at Newcastle, England, and theatres are planned at Leeds, Liverpool, Glasgow and at Brussels, Belgium.

Warner Scouts Seek Pennsylvania Sites

Scranton—Warner representatives are in Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and other cities in the northern end of the anthracite coal belt, inspecting real estate, with the idea in mind of constructing several houses, thereby providing battle for Comerford-Paramount-Publix in entertaining Pennsylvanians. Three tentative sites in Scranton will be explained to chiefs when the agents return to the Metropolis. Before the merger of the Comerford Amusement Co. with Paramount Publix, Warner productions held feature spots on the programs of leading playhouses here. Naturally but few of these releases are now the rule. It is conservatively estimated that the Comerford chain of independent houses turned at least $200,000 a year into the coffers of the Warner concern. "Get that money," will be the slogan of the Warner outfit.

Dermody at Capital

Washington—Jack Dillon, former manager of the Fox Exchange here, who went to San Francisco, has been succeeded by James Dermody from Albany.

Film Minus Flesh Shows, Predicted By Roxy at AMPA

Complete divorcing of flesh shows from film theatre entertainment of the future was predicted by S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel at Thursday's meeting of the AMPA at which he declared his day as a theatre operator is about over. There are two elements in picture house entertainment of the future, he said, the mechanical element and the human element. The latter, he added, should be kept in the audience, with all the show on the screen. Short subjects of quality supplementing the feature will speed this development, he predicted.

The industry should lose no time in establishing a research laboratory for study of recording and reproducing problems and other new developments about some of which the industry knows nothing, he said. Wide screen pictures are here to stay, he asserted. There is a shortage of product at present because the industry did not know how to cope with the new sound medium. Roxy declined to comment on his future plans or to amplify his statement that his days as a theatre operator are numbered.

Big 4 Has 4 Features And Comedy in Work

John R. Freuler, president of Big 4, announces his company is now producing at three West Coast studios, with films in the cutting room and others in preparation.

Starting with a series of six all-star westerns, the program was enlarged by a further series of six action features starring Wally Wales. The company in addition will release eight melodramas at six-week intervals, beginning in January, and a further series of 12 two-reel comedies, one each month. Release in Great Britain is handled through Filmophone Renters.

"Red Fork Range," starring Wally Wales and directed by Alvin J. Neitz, has been completed. "Hell's Valley," starring Wales, is being cut. Script work has begun on the next out-door film tentatively titled "Range Rustlers," to be directed by Neitz. These westerns are being made at Universal.

"Sheer Luck," initial action meller in the series of eight, features Jobyna Ralston, Nick Stuart and Bobby Vernon. The picture was directed by Bruce Mitchell at Tec Art Studios.

The script on "Just a Minute!" is in preparation for the second in this series.

The two-reel comedy, "Radio Razzberry," is in production at Metropolitan.

W. E. Appeal in Patent Suit Starts on Friday

Philadelphia — Hearing on appeal of Western Electric and subsidiaries from the patent infringement victory won by General Talking Pictures in Federal District Court gets under way here Friday. The Reis patent is the chief point at issue.

Salesman Leases Theatre

Milwaukee—The Peerless, local north side neighborhood house, operated by Ed Olson, has been leased by Elmer G. Huhnke, formerly salesman with First National.

The Sex Angle

Presentation Pictures is distributing, on the state rights market, an old Ufa film titled "Chained—the Third Sex." Dealing with homo-sexualism, it presents a subject which must of necessity be kept from the general run of theatres.

The fact that it might offer strong possibilities of luring heavy dough from the curious through elaborately ballyhooing the abnormal sex angle should not tempt any exhibitor to jeopardize his patronage which is in search of entertainment and not a knowledge of this phase of life.

the stockholders, he replied that the company is making more money now than it has for several months. He appeared optimistic about the company's future.

Thomas spoke of acquiring and wiring additional theatres. Replying to a question, he denied that any obligations are coming due shortly in one large sum.

Thomas declared that he did not expect the amount paid for pictures in the future to be as great as in the past. He pointed out the necessity of obtaining theatres in cities where there is difficulty in having Warner pictures shown by competitors and intimated color pictures will not be produced abundantly in 1931.

Five directors were re-elected at the meeting. They are: Lewis J. Warner, Richard F. Hoyt, Moe Mark, Walter E. Sachs and Morris Wolfe. The hold-over members of the board are Albert Warner, Jack L. Warner, Harry M. Warner, Waddell Catchings, Henry A. Rudkin and Abel Cary Thomas.

G. T. E. Reclassification Of Stock Being Completed

Delivery is being made of voting trust certificates representing common stock of General Theatres Equipment under the reclassification plan agreed upon two months ago. They are being exchanged for 1-3 of a share of new recreated cumulative $3 dividend convertible preferred and 2-3 of a share of common. The new preferred will be convertible into common stock on the basis of 4-5 of a share of common for each share of preferred, and will be subject to redemption at $52.50 a share. Dividends of 75 cents quarterly on this new preferred are to be inaugurated soon. Under the reclassification there will be outstanding 949,318 shares of $3 cumulative dividend preferred and 1,898,637 shares common, compared with 2,847,955 shares of common. The new common was admitted to trading, opening at 9½ and advancing to 10, a point above Wednesday's closing parity.

Orchestra Status Subject of Debate In San Francisco

San Francisco—Negotiations are underway between the musicians' union and the major downtown theatres over eliminating orchestras in sound theatres.

Walter Weber, president of the union, in a statement said:

"A basis of negotiations has been outlined by Fox West Coast, Publix and Radio-Keith-Orpheum that calls for the elimination of orchestras in Loew's Warfield and T. & D. Oakland; the California and St. Francis and at San Francisco's Orpheum.

"Naturally the union is opposing the enforced unemployment this abandonment of orchestras would entail among musicians. We have been negotiating over the new orchestra contracts for the past two months and expect to be able to come to a friendly agreement.

"The proposal of the theatres is not final. It is simply a basis from which the two groups are working toward an agreement acceptable to both."

There is no intention on the part of downtown theatres to discontinue immediately the use of orchestras, but the theatre operators want an understanding that they can do so later if they so desire.

It was stated at the Hays headquarters Thursday night that a formal statement would be issued Friday.

Shecter Reports Mid-West Sales Good

Detroit—Leonard Shecter, at present on a sales trip through Michigan, reports good business throughout the territory despite recent heavy snowfalls. An upturn in theatre attendance reflects the return to work of many employed in the automobile and kindred industries in this district. Shecter is sales representative for Big 4, releasing action westerns.

Talkers, Radio, Autos Cut Music Trades' Sale 60%

Washington—A decline of 60 per cent in the sales of musical instruments, as compared with the year 1927, is attributed to talkers, radios and automobiles by C. J. North, chief of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce. At the same time there has been a slump in the sale of sheet music, piano rolls, records and other by-products.

Major Companies Flirting with Trouble By Plunging Blindly Into Ad Film Field

It Didn't Work

Hollywood—Bill Deal, head doorman at Radio Pictures' studio, had a new gate-crashing experience the other day.

Two young men and two girls drove up in a taxi. The men were dressed in tuxedos, the young women in evening gowns. All wore make-up. They rushed by Bill with a breathless: "We have just received a hurry-up call for the 'Hook, Line and Sinker' ballroom set—open up quickly!"

"Yeah?" drawled Bill. "That picture finished ten days ago."

Rules York Ice Plant Infringes Patent of A. R. C.

Rochester—Decision of Federal Judge John H. Hazel that the air conditioning apparatus in the Rochester, downtown 4,000-seat house, is a patent infringement upon the rights of the Auditorium Reconditioning Corp. of New York, is expected to affect similar devices in theatres throughout the country.

The decision was made in the New York firm's patent infringement suit against the Greater Rochester Properties, Inc., operators of the Rochester. The device here was installed by the York Ice Machinery Corp. of York, Pa.

Machinery of similar nature which comes under the court's ruling of infringement has been installed in theatres in other parts of the nation, according to Charles J. Staples, secretary of the New York concern.

Court Fights Only in Operator Row at K. C.

Kansas City—No violence is to be resorted to by the Sound Projectionists' Association, non-union, in retaliation for alleged union outrages, but all arguments will be settled in court, states F. E. Burroughs, legal advisor. Suits have been filed against the I. T. A. S. E. in connection with bombing of the Baltis, Charles Potter suburban house, and the picketing and placarding of the Art Gaunt and Pershing at Kansas City, Kan. Restraining orders also are sought in Federal Court. Ed Cranfill has replaced Ed Costello as business agent.

Exhibitor Convicted of Burning Theatre

Cincinnati—Joseph Abowd has been convicted of arson in the burning of his Abowd theatre at Fostoria, say reports reaching here. The fire occurred one week after he had taken out heavy insurance policies on the house and its contents.

Jeopardizing Business at Their Chain Houses Unless Plugs Are Plenty Subtle

Wholesale invasion by major companies of the industrial films field is developing a situation which some observers believe will result in driving away thousands of picture-goers from chain-operated theatres if sales messages in the form of paid advertising films are forced upon them.

The radio field recently experienced similar unfavorable reaction when it attempted to subordinate entertainment features of programs to strong sales messages of national advertisers.

Although long recognized as an ideal advertising medium, reaching well over 100,000,000 weekly, screens of the country have been kept practically clear of paid ad plugs until recently, when strong sales qualities of the closely related radio and sound films fields convinced national advertisers that the mass coverage of both offered the surest and most effective means of delivering a nation-wide sales plug in lightning-like fashion.

Important picture interests were approached several months ago with orders to produce "industrials," but the former refused to guarantee distribution over their chain theatres. Later, however, certain companies, including Paramount, about-faced and offered a "circulation" in their chain houses at a fixed sum per thousand persons.

Warners entered the field following Paramount, while others are understood to be formulating plans for representation in the new field, which is said to offer lucrative returns from several sources, including production, physical handling, laboratory work, and theatre screenings.

Upon the ability of picture companies thoroughly to cover the particular ad appeal with entertainment rests the success or failure of this new industrial movement. Unfavorable audience reaction will quickly kill off the new field unless the sales message in the reel is presented subtly, observers believe.

Beginning early next year, large sums from advertising budgets of national advertisers will be diverted from newspaper, radio and magazine to the newly developed film medium. Whether or not newspapers and magazines which may suffer from the deviation will resent the invasion of films in the advertising field is the cause of much speculation. Many predict a boycott of film publicity both in newspapers and magazines if the inroads reach threatening proportions.

Wisecracking Warren (United Artists) Nolan says the latest sobriquet (nickname to you) for Jean Harlow is "The Blond Panic," adding that "if you people don't like this name we can make up some sandwiches instead."

Looks Good

Hollywood — Ernest Schoedsack's wild animal film, "Rango," has great exploitation possibilities and is a potential box office smash for films of this type. The story centers around the lives of apes and monkeys in wild Sumatra with tiger hunts injected for thrill sequences. The talker has a musical background and very little dialogue. It's an excellent type of picture for kids and also has plenty of entertainment value for grownups.

Schnitzer, Marcus Realigning Pathe Operation Status

Hollywood—Realignment of Pathe operation, to conform to the new set-up under the RKO deal, which is to transfer Pathe's assets to RKO, is being worked out here by Joseph I. Schnitzer, RKO president, and Lee Marcus, vice-president. The latter is to be in charge of operation of Pathe under the new set-up.

Ratification of the RKO deal for purchase of assets of Pathe, except the 49 per cent interest in duPont-Pathe, is expected at the meeting of stockholders Jan. 5. The deal will enable Pathe to liquidate its inventories and become primarily a holder of stock in duPont-Pathe.

The agreement with RKO involves the payment by RKO of $4,630,789 ($500,000 in cash and the remainder in 6 per cent notes, maturing in five equal annual installments, beginning Jan. 1, 1932), for the Culver City Studio, Jersey City Laboratory, Pathe News, Audio Review, stars' and directors' contracts, certain scenarios, furniture and fixtures, and three feature pictures now being released. Additional payments are to be made for such other stories as may be acquired; for prepaid expense items; and for stores and supplies inventory. Half of the net receipts from these three feature pictures, above $1,000,000, belong to Pathe. The total consideration to be received from assets sold should be at least $4,850,000, it is said, and may substantially exceed this amount. RKO will continue distribution of our pictures not purchased, for account of Pathe. The deal provides that RKO will assume contracts with players and directors and leased quarters here and abroad, and cancellation of Pathe's RCA Photophone contract.

Hanson, Goe and Wilson Go Higher In Tiffany Ranks

Marking another step in expansion program begun early this year, Oscar R. Hanson has been appointed assistant general manager of Tiffany, with Carl Goe succeeding him as general sales manager, and Sterling Wilson in turn succeeding Goe as assistant general sales chief. Wilson has had charge of the contract department. The promotions were made by Grant L. Cook, executive vice-president.

Hanson's appointment to the new post comes as the climax of his two years as company sales head, during which time he launched the five-year franchise plan. In barnstorming trips across the country, in which he made an extended series of speeches before exhibitor units, Hanson closed around 2,500 franchises. Previously he was in charge of Educational sales in Canada.

Goe has been with Tiffany three years, for two of which he served as Hanson's assistant. He previously had been with Universal, Pathe and First National. Wilson has been in the industry for a number of years, for several of which he has been with Tiffany.

Seattle Liberty Back to 1st Runs

Seattle—Jenson & Von Herberg's Liberty, one of Seattle's first de luxe houses, this week returned to a first run policy with the showing of "Sunny." Hereafter all First National releases will have first run bookings in the Pacific Northwest at this theatre. Former admission prices of 15, 25 and 35 cents have been abandoned, and a new schedule has been inaugurated as follows: 25 cents from 10 A. M. until 1 P. M.; 35 cents from 1 P. M. until 6 P. M., and 50 cents after 6 P. M. These prices are effective every day in the week. They coincide with the admission charges at Hamrick's Blue Mouse and Music Box theatres, and the Seattle Paramount.

Cutting Reproducer Noise Studied at Erpi Meetings

Reduction of extraneous noises in reproducing equipment was studied by more than 50 service department supervisors and technical inspectors of Electrical Research Products meeting in New York this week. The move is to give theatres the benefit of the noise reduction effected in the new recording process developed by the company.

Another Wide Film Stab; RKO Trying It on B'way

M-G-M and Fox having made their bid for public support of wide film, Radio now enters the list with "Danger Lights," which opens at the Mayfair on Saturday. This is the first feature to be filmed via the Spoor-Berggren Natural Vision process.

10 Per Cent Tax Threats in West

Denver—Ten per cent tax on amusements will be introduced in legislatures of Wyoming and New Mexico if present plans materialize. No talk of action of this sort has been heard in Colorado, but as treasuries in all three states are low it will not be surprising if something of this sort does pop up. The Rocky Mountain unit, with Harry Huffman, president, is watching the movements and plans of the legislators in all three states.

Fox Movietone News is making regular appearances in 37 foreign editions, according to Truman H. Talley, who recently returned from Europe.

For the B.O.

Hollywood — Douglas Fairbanks' "Reaching for the Moon" was made for the box office. Fairbanks, in a modern role, is very good and he displays a personality which will endear him to talker fans. Edmund Goulding's direction is exceptional. There is a lot of comedy in the story which moves swiftly. Bebe Daniels and Edward Everett Horton also give outstanding performances. It's swell entertainment.

Build $500,000 'Frisco Theatre

San Francisco—Ackerman & Harris, who made a phenomenal success out of their El Capitan theatre, a 3,000-seater erected in a residential district some thirty months ago, are planning to duplicate this feat. The El Capitan, after it was firmly entrenched as a profitable money-maker, was sold to the Fox West Coast interests. Now Ackerman & Harris, it is reported on unquestionable authority, are planning the construction of a $500,000 theatre, containing 3,000 seats, to be built at the junction of Post and Fillmore Sts.

Irving C. Ackerman, of the firm, when interviewed on the report, admitted that the firm owned property at that corner and had had for some months the contemplation of plans for such a theatre. While he refused to verify or deny the report, he admitted a definite statement would be forthcoming in a few weeks.

Stage presentations, an enlarged screen, new tricks of sound reproductions, popular prices and elaborate conveniences will be features of the new house, it is said.

Hold-up of Vancouver House Nets $450 Loot

Vancouver—Backing Charles H. Doctor, manager of the Grand View, into his office along with three boy ushers, where threats to blow his head off hastened opening of the safe, two masked bandits escaped with $450. Frank H. Bow, Canadian Famous manager, and Miss Bernice Thompson were in the office checking reports at the time.

Dickinson Chain Gets First Illinois House

Kansas City—Glen W. Dickinson Theatres, one of the largest of remaining independent circuits, has begun invasion of Illinois, with acquisition of the Reddish theatre at Jerseyville. The company has 33 houses in Kansas and Missouri. The deal on the Jerseyville house is for 20 years.

Theatres Raising Millions for Needy In Greatest Relief Drive in History

Robot Critic

Cincinnati—The much cussed and discussed lowly critic may find science and invention conspiring against his calling. A mechanical critic, believed to be the first of its kind in the world, has been put into service at Columbus, in connection with the annual "engineers' roundup" at Ohio State University, sponsored by the college of engineering.

The success of a group of plays which will be presented by students will be judged by the amount of applause recorded on a galonemeter. The "robot critic" was invented and set up by the students in engineering.

Philly Pastors Lead Attack on Sunday Benefits

Philadelphia—Although the riot at the Kent theatre forecast a "test case" in regard to the Sunday night film showings in Philadelphia for the benefit of the unemployed, the matter has been dropped, temporarily, at least. Several dances, film showings and vaudeville attractions were scheduled this Sunday night, but all were on the strict basis of subscription or "club" functions, and none of them reached the point where police interference was deemed necessary.

However, the scene shifted to suburban Philadelphia, where the clergy and several laymen of Darby opposed the showing of a film and vaudeville show for the unemployed at the Parker.

The fight against the Parker show reached an intensity on Sunday, when the clergymen were informed that Burgess Thomas M. Eastwood had revoked the license for the show. The burgess was "out of town" during the day and Councilman William E. Buckman of the department of public safety stated that he had not received notice of the revocation and permitted the show to continue. After a brief discussion, the church officials contented themselves with passing out placards and literature condemning the Sunday showings.

Meanwhile, it is understood that in Philadelphia proper Councilman William Roper, a steady opponent of the blue laws, would start a friendly test case on the Sunday opening proposition, with Director of Public Safety Schofield as the prosecutor. An effort will be made to discover the public and judicial sentiment of the city in regard to Sunday showings.

Ask Stage Play Ban

San Antonio—Ban on "Strange Interlude" is being sought here by the Federated Association of Protestant Women.

Food, Clothing and Money Being Accumulated to Help Poor in Present Crisis

Millions of dollars in food, money and clothing is being raised by theatres throughout the country to alleviate the suffering of jobless and needy who have been hit by the present unemployment and general business depression sweeping the country.

From coast to coast, independent and affiliated exhibitors are turning over their houses to relief fund committees in the most gigantic humanitarian effort ever attempted by this industry. In many communities an entire day's receipts have been donated, while in others a large percentage of the gross intake was contributed.

Not since the World War have theatres in this country united so strongly to relieve nation-wide suffering. The movement equals, proportionately, any concerted effort of American industry in the current crisis.

Exhibitors, generally, are doubling usual activities of pre-Christmas days. Toys, clothing and food are being lined up to make thousands of kiddies happier for Christmas.

At Detroit, theatres will stage benefit performances for the needy and at later shows kiddies will receive toys and clothing.

Food obtained as admission to theatres in Scranton was turned over to the poor.

The screens of numerous theatre chains have been placed at the disposal of committees for "buy now" and "return to prosperity" trailers.

Three thousand youngsters traded toys for an admission ticket at Omaha. The van load of toys collected will be repaired and turned over to needy kiddies at Christmas. A duplicate of this occurrence happens almost daily throughout the country.

Practically every theatre in Baltimore will open doors this Sunday for the greatest benefit in the history of that "blue" town. Porters, scrubwomen, ushers, projectionists and other help will work gratis to aid the fund.

Discarded toys, clothing and food will be accepted for admission to special showings at Buffalo.

Jersey City's unemployed will be aided by a monster frolic to be held at the Stanley Saturday night, with Warner, Loew and Fox houses uniting to put over the show.

Philadelphia theatres staged benefit performances last week.

Other towns already have put over special shows, while in many more committees are now at work on plans for benefits to be staged before Christmas.

"Quiet" Withdrawn

Berlin—Without awaiting the verdict of censors, Universal has withdrawn "All Quiet on the Western Front" from Germany. Its showing at a local theatre caused rioting and other forms of protest.

Balto Behind Drive

Baltimore—Ninety-five per cent of all theatres in this territory on Sunday will stage a monster benefit to aid unemployed and needy. Headed by Frank Price, Rivoli manager, practically all but Loew theatres have been enlisted in the drive. Porters, ushers, cashiers, projectionists and other theatre help will donate their services for the fund.

Baltimore's Sunday closing law has always been rigidly enforced, but the town's police commissioner ordered special permits to the theatres for Dec. 14, allowing houses to open at 2 and close at 11 P.M.

De Forest to Hire 75 Salesmen in New Relief Plan

To help alleviate the unemployment situation, General Talking Pictures plans to place 75 additional salesman in the field before Christmas to sell spare and replacement parts for DeForest Phonofilm reproducing equipment. This will be coincident with inauguration of the reorganized plan for servicing Phonofilm equipments, with more than 80 engineers to be made available in 22 key cities. These offices will stock $250,000 in spare parts, it is stated.

The plan for the additional sales force had been contingent upon the completion of 2,000 installations, but President M. A. Schlesinger advanced the date to help unemployment. The firm still is about 200 short of the 2,000 mark, he says.

Shoes Admissions at "Feet First" Charity

Indianapolis — Skouras - Publix theatres here put on a campaign in conjunction with the Indianapolis Times and the Salvation Army to obtain food and shoes for the needy.

On Saturday the price of admission to see "Feet First" was one pair of shoes. After the last show the Salvation Army counted 2,500 pairs of shoes which are to be distributed to those who need them.

At the same time at the Indiana all day Friday and up to 6 P. M. Saturday night the price of admission was one can of food. The house was packed to capcaity at all shows and 6,000 cans were collected by the Salvation Army.

Eugene Zukor Heads Drive

Settle Strike in Racine; Weekly Loss Was $9,000

Racine, Wis.—Following a meeting between theatre operators, managers and Mayor William Armstrong, difficulties in the wage dispute are believed to have been ironed out and all eight Racine houses were expected to reopen Dec. 13 after being closed for two weeks.

The managers of the three downtown theatres had demanded a 7½ per cent reduction in the pay of their operators, but finally agreed not to pare a single cent from the old wages of $57.75 a week for five hours a night. Managers of five neighborhood houses had demanded a 20 per cent reduction and the operators had agreed to a 5 per cent reduction.

As finally agreed upon, the cut will be 9½ per cent. Wages of operators who have been receiving $52 will be cut to $45 for a basic 33 hour week. However, pay for extra hours will remain the same, it was stated. This varies from $1.33 to $1.66 an hour.

Theatres involved in the strike include the Fox State, RKO Mainstreet, Warner Venetian, and the Capitol, Uptown, Granada, Crown, Venetian and Douglas. While the theatres have been closed, other sources of amusement had flourished, including the local dance halls and the public library. Theatre managers estimate their loss at about $9,000 per week. The chain theatres posted signs in their lobbies advising the public to visit their theatres in Milwaukee and Kenosha during the strike. These signs created some ill feeilng, however, and were removed before the end of the strike.

Chicago Critics Yawn At Realife Wide Film

Chicago—Local critics were unimpressed by Realife, introduced here this week with "Billy, the Kid" at the Publix-B. & K. Oriental Theatre. Only passing mention of the size of the screen and the clarity of the picture was included in the reviews. Comments were noticeably mild, at least by comparison with the "rave" notices these same critics accorded the Spoor-Berggren Natural Vision process at the "Danger Lights" inaugural at the State-Lake theatre two weeks ago. Business, though only average, was better than it has been at the Oriental for several weeks past.

Print Theft Charged

Warning to exchanges to be on the lookout for a man who, among other aliases, goes under the name of Jack O'Brien and who is alleged to have stolen a print of "Simba" from the Sheffield Film Exchange, Denver, has been sounded by M. J. Weisfeldt, head of distribution of Talking Picture Epics.

Fraser, general manager of the Lloyd Corp., left New York for Hollywood this week to work on the comedian's next, following conferences with Paramount home office officials regarding distribution and exploitation of "Feet First."

Wm. R. Fraser

Fraser believes the drop in box-office receipts due to the present economic depression will be short lived, although a return to normalcy of general business will not occur for many months.

Pantages Theatre Appeal Is Denied

Washington—Review of the decision of the court of appeals for the ninth circuit in the suit instituted by the Pantages Theatre Co. against the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, involving income and profits taxes for 1918 and 1919, was refused by the United States Supreme Court December 1.

The suit was brought on the ground that agreements to waive the statute of limitations had not been signed by the commissioner of internal revenue personally or until after the statute of limitations had operated against the taxes in controversy.

The Board of Tax Appeals had held that it was not necessary that the commissioner sign such agreements personally and that it was not material when they were signed, which view was upheld by the lower court, and apparently is concurred in by the Supreme Court.

Thacher Decree No Bar to Suit, Colo. Court Says

Denver—In what is probably the first decision of its kind, Judge Frank McDonough of the State District Court ruled that while a distributor could not, under the Thacher and U. S. Supreme Court decisions, arbitrate under the eighteenth paragraph of the standard contract, there was nothing to prevent arbitration by other means, or from suing at law for breach of contract.

M-C-M had sued the owners of the Tabor Theatre on a standard contract made in 1929 and action was taken because the pictures contracted for had not been used. The Bi-Metallic Investment Co., Tabor owners, insisted upon the right to arbitrate under the eighteenth paragraph. M-G-M offered to arbitrate in any manner not in conflict with the Thacher decision, providing the findings would be binding. This the Tabor refused to do, and when M-G-M brought suit attempted to have the case thrown out of court.

Judge McDonough ruled that since M-G-M had offered to arbitrate in the only way open to them and had been turned down by the Tabor owners, the distributors had cause for action and denied motion for dismissal.

Change Opening Date After Strike Settlement

St. Louis—With settlement of the music dispute, the Fox and Missouri have advanced the opening day of their week to Thursday. It is probable that the Ambassador, Loew's State and St. Louis will follow and open their weeks on Thursdays. Fanchon & Marco units are being used by the Fox.

Theatre-Taxicab Tie-Up Gives Patrons Free Ride

Denver—The Denver, in a tieup with a taxi company, has made arrangements whereby cash customers can ride to the theatre and return home after the show for the price of the trip downtown. When the patron buys a ticket to the show he must get a receipt from the cashier and this is good for the journey home.

Harold B. Franklin Circuit Plans Hinge On Survey of Conditions Now Under Way

Present Situation Demands Watch Step Policy, He Declares on Coast

Los Angeles—Immediate plans of Harold B. Franklin in proposed establishment of a national independent circuit hinge upon the outcome of a survey on business conditions now being made by the staff of the former Fox West Coast chief.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, he has neither closed nor negotiated for any financing in connection with his future activities, Franklin says.

"My staff and I," he declares, "have been making a careful survey of conditions throughout the country and the results of this survey will determine my future plans. It is a well known fact that business conditions at present warrant the most careful consideration and any activity that I finally undertake will be founded on a sound financial structure."

Four Hour Shows!

Sydney, Australia—Made desperate by deflated receipts, the management of a theatre on the fringe of the city proper is experimenting with a three-feature talker bill. With a news reel and an episode of a serial the running time is precisely four hours! The orgy can be witnessed for 25 cents.

Through the Exhibitors' Association, independents have been fighting for a universally definite policy of one feature and shorts for six months. To them this experiment represents the last straw. Question agitating the trade is, how is an insatiable public going to take a return to the single feature programme if ever such is again brought about?

Music License Fee Refused by Canada Exhibs

Montreal—Exhibitors have not capitulated to the Canadian Performing Rights Society in the matter of payment of annual music license fees despite the two visits to Montreal of J. C. Rosenthal of New York, representing both the American Society and the Canadian organization, it is announced in Montreal. The American association now holds a 50 per cent interest in the Canadian society.

Canadian theatre companies, it is said, have no intention of submitting to the society unless the latter abides by the decision of the Privy Council to register all of its musical assignments at the copyright office in Ottawa—which would represent an outlay of $500,000 in registration fees.

$27,300 Week For "Morocco" Is Smash on Coast

Los Angeles—"Morocco" is continuing as a local sensation and in its second week grabbed $27,300 at Grauman's Chinese. The film was given a smash send-off by Frank Whitbeck's campaign and came through in fine shape. "Min and Bill" is showing strength at the Carthay Circle and "War Nurse," with Eddie Peabody on the stage, gave Loew's State a good week at $30,000.

"The Doorway to Hell" did well in its second week at both Warner houses, but "Only Saps Work" at the Paramount and "Lottery Bride" at the United Artists were weak. The Criterion, with only $7,000, hit its lowest gross in months with "Jenny Lind."

"Sin" Is Pulled After 1 Week by RKO in Detroit

Detroit—A sudden shift at the insistence of the New York office caused the RKO Downtown to pull "Sin Takes a Holiday" after it had been announced that the picture would be held for a second week. "Tol'able David," which followed, drew only average business. Weather conditions were fair for business at the box office.

Victor McLaglen's latest, at the Fox, drew heavily from those who like that sort of thing, with "War Nurse" at the Michigan boosting business. "Abraham Lincoln" at the United Artists not going so good with "Outward Bound" dying due to lack of exploitation.

Buffalo Kids Give "Sawyer" $31,500 Week

Buffalo—Kids and flappers, out to see "Tom Sawyer" and Charles (Buddy) Rogers in person, built up the Buffalo's matinee business plenty and threatened to set a record, but night patronage is still below normal, so $31,500 was good.

Plenty of plugging, with increased newspaper space stressing the sensational nature of "War Nurse," brought the Great Lakes up to $21,000, which is very good.

Lafayette shows increasing and surprising strength. Low prices and extensive programs continue to get 'em.

Harry Reavey Dead

Cleveland—Harry Reavey, for 20 years prominent in local picture activities, died from an apopleptic stroke. He was stricken in Ashtabula, where he was checking a picture. He was connected with Metro before that company had a Cleveland office, selling Metro film out of the Pittsburgh office. He has been identified with the industry ever since its earliest beginnings. Prior to that he was in the circus business.

Legit Show Folds

Providence—Films scored another bulls-eye over the legitimate stage in the folding of the Carlton stock company. Although the unit was well liked and patrons constant, the houses were too small to carry the nut. The Clive Players started at the Providence Opera house Dec. 9 to run as long as attendance warrants.

Improving Eugene House

Eugene, Ore.—Fox West Coast Theatres will spend $50,000 here this winter in building improvements on both the Fox McDonald and Fox Rex theatres, according to Russell F. Brown, Eugene manager. Elmer Hanks, northwest supervising engineer for Fox West Coast, will have charge of the work.

"Just Imagine," "Big Trail" Cop Big Seattle Coin

Seattle—"The Big Trail" and "Just Imagine," two of Fox's big productions for the season, brought a majority of the theatre business to the Fox and Fox Fifth Avenue theatres, respectively. Opening on Thanksgiving Day, "The Big Trail" in eight days at the Fox took about $15,000 for the biggest week's business in many weeks. "Just Imagine" at the Fifth Avenue, aided by the initial appearance of Rube Wolf as master of ceremonies, also took about $15,000 in seven days. Vic Gauntlett gave Wolf a great publicity campaign that built much business for the house.

Other houses did not fare so well. "Sunny" opened at the Liberty as the initial new season's first run attraction booked there, but did only about $10,500. A lack of names in the cast, plus a rather weak story, were not good for the box-office. "Sea Legs" at the Paramount didn't click, getting only about $10,000 on the week. This house on its all-screen policy, has lost all personality, and audiences dislike the miles and miles of shorts that are booked simply to eat up time. "The Third Alarm" at the Blue Mouse was rather dismal, and was pulled after six days. At the Music Box "The Bat Whispers" was good for average business only.

Estimated takings:

"THE THIRD ALARM" (Tiffany)

"Big Trail" Okay At Albany with $11,600 Intake

Albany—Thousands of persons in this city "hit the trail" for Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, with the result that "The Big Trail" drew capacity audiences throughout the week and proved a big money-getter for the six days. Plenty of newspaper advertising had been used by the theatre in putting over its message to the public. The weather was bitterly cold for a good part of the week, but this did not seem to keep the people at home.

"Those Three French Girls" at the downtown Leland did not pan out any too well, and while the house was practically filled each night, the picture itself did not measure up to expectations.

The Mark Strand, using plenty of publicity and with a rather novel lobby display, attracted only normal business with Winnie Lightner in "The Life of the Party." At the Mark Ritz, "River's End" played to about normal business, but pleased. The theatres of Albany will probably do some slight increase in general business now that stock has closed at the Capitol, leaving films the sole entertainment for the capital city.

"Remote Control" Lifts Portland House to $15,900

Portland—An exceptionally good screen and stage program was served to an increased number of cash patrons by Manager Marc Bowman at the Fox Broadway, including "Bill" Haines in "Remote Control," plus Fanchon & Marco's presentation of the official U. S. Indian Reservation Band, all of which brought out heavy morning and evening lines and gave the house another heavy gross of $15,900.

The juveniles were given another treat at Fox United Artists in "Abraham Lincoln," endorsed by many patriotic associations, bringing a gross of $14,800, which was up. Paramount brought forth its newest feminine attraction, Marlene Dietrich, in "Morocco" and won third place with $14,300.

Dietrich Is The Noise on B'way; 2 Films Click

Marlene Dietrich is the big noise on Broadway, appearing in two films which are leaders in the procession, which is quite a ways behind normalcy. The Rialto, with "Blue Angel," Ufa film in which Miss Dietrich plays opposite Emil Jannings, is standing 'em up this week, while "Morocco" is continuing to click at the Rivoli in a big way, even building on the strength of the German actress' appearance down the street in "Blue Angel."

The pre-holiday slump and general hard times are cutting big swaths in intakes at the various houses. The best Will Rogers in "Lightnin'" could get at the Roxy was around $93,600, which is not hot considering the house and attraction, but it's playing a second week. The Paramount has a bet in Ed Wynn's picture, "Follow the Leader," after a light week with "Fast and Loose." "Mothers Cry" has replaced "The Life of the Party" at the Winter Garden and is going just so-so.

"Min & Bill" Sets 6 Month Philly Top at $56,000

Philadelphia — "Min and Bill" crashed through at the Mastbaum last week for $56,000, one of the best figures of the year and far in excess of anything the house has done in the last six months. While it did not break the theatre record, it scored the best gross for any bill which did not have a special stage attraction. Picture proved to be such a hit that it was immediately moved to the Stanton, where a run seems in prospect.

The picture seemed to skim the cream of the week's business. While none of the other houses went distinctly "off" in business, none of them, except the Earle with $20,000 with "The Silver Horde" and a stage show, had any better than average business.

"The Virtuous Sin" at the Fox, "Sin Takes a Holiday" at the Boyd, and "Derelict" at Keith's held up to average. "Hell's Angels," after grossing $19,000 for its first full week at the Aldine, took a definite slump to $15,000, while "River's End" brought in the lowest comparative score of the week with $14,000 at the Stanley.

Trent in Seattle

Seattle—Stanley Trent, founder of the Stage and Screen Club in Los Angeles, arrived here last week to organize a similar club for the development of theatrical talent. He has opened offices and studios here and is at present recruiting a cast for the presentation of a light opera during the coming season, for the benefit of a local charitable institution, yet to be selected.

"Hell's Angels" Gets Top Kale In Des Moines

Des Moines—"Hell's Angels" made the top box-office here with a week at $18,000 in spite of cold and disagreeable weather. Every other theatre in town suffered for the first few days from business drawn to the Des Moines, where "Hell's Angels" was showing, while the Paramount, next door, received an overflow from those turned away at the Des Moines. After a couple of days business returned to the other theatres. "Hell's Angels" has not broken any house records though it comes up with any picture that has shown at the Des Moines this year. Grossed $6,000 above "Feet First" for the week. It will be held over for another week.

"War Nurse" Held To $9,300 in Off Okla. City Week

Oklahoma City—Two well exploited and highly advertised films shown here drew good crowds but failed to prove a sensation, probably because Christmas shopping was well under way and afternoon shows were not as high as might have been expected.

"War Nurse" (M-G-M) drew a good house at the Criterion, a Publix theatre, to the tune of about $9,300, while "The Big Trail" (Fox), accounted for about $8,600 at the Mid-West, a Warner house.

Holiday Slump Holds "Sawyer" Down to $40,500

Boston—Customary Christmas holiday slump in theatre grosses is at hand, with all of the theatres showing its effects. The Metropolitan with "Tom Sawyer" grossed only $40,500, which is the lowest figure shown for some weeks. "Sin Takes a Holiday" at the Keith Memorial was good for $16,500, also a slump from past weeks, while the Keith-Boston on its new four-show plan with "The Silver Horde" showed only $18,500.

"Abraham Lincoln" at Loew's State grossed $22,500, only fair considering it was first showing here at popular prices, Loew's Orpheum with "A Lady's Morals" was good for $24,000, which is only fair. "Just Imagine" at the Uptown and Olympia simultaneously did pretty well for a total of $25,-500.

Tampa Theatre to Try A Full Week Schedule

Tampa—When the Tampa was built several years ago a policy of two changes on the week was established and it has stuck to it since, in spite of the fact that many pictures shown would have stood up for a week, or even longer. This week the house is doing some fancy plugging for the new Harold Lloyd feature, "Feet First," which is to come in next week for a full week, the first in the history of the house.

The Tampa is one of the Publix houses here and in the past when it has had attractions suitable for one or two weeks' showing it has been using the Victory, but this summer the Victory went "pop prices" and so now the circuit has no other de luxe house for week stands, and is giving it a try at the Tampa.

'S Fact

Mike (Six Syllable) Simmons tells the one about the acrobats who had been spotted for years as the closing number on a vaudeville bill, where they usually played to an emptying house. Illness of a headline numher caused them tu be spotted in number four position, and the result was that the senior memher of the team nearly died of stage fright.

'Sin' and 'Sawyer' Click in Omaha; Only One Flops

Omaha—The theatres here are getting a real break. The mildest November in years ushered in an even milder December.

An excellent, well balanced program that drew a rave from the reviewers gave the Orpheum the money of the town at $19,375. Picture was "Sin Takes a Holiday," with Virginia Watson and Carl Randall heading the four act RKO bill. First named member of the team once lived here.

Packing in both kids and their folks, "Tom Sawyer" got the World $12,075, which is a great week. Last half at the State, "Old English" made money at $2,250. "Bright Lights," first three days, was par at $2,250.

Only flop was "Just Imagine" at the Paramount which grossed $7,225. Picture went unappreciated in general. "Never Swat a Fly" song production was neatly cut out somewhere between the exchange and the theatre. Nobody seemed to know whose scissors did the job.

Cooper New Manager Of Seattle Orpheum

Seattle—Joe Cooper, for the last year or more director of advertising and publicity for Radio-Keith-Orpheum theatres in this city, Tacoma, Portland and Spokane, has been appointed manager of the local RKO New Orpheum. His appointment followed closely upon the heels of a visit here by Homer Gill, Western division manager, who presided over a gathering of all Orpheum managers from the Pacific Northwest territory at the local theatre a few days ago. Cooper succeeds Ellis C. Bostwick as manager of the house, and Bostwick expects to announce other theatrical connections shortly, it was reported.

$22,500 "Cincy" Gross Chalked Up by 'Whoopee'

Cincinnati — Reversal of the traditional downward trend usually experienced in the pre-holiday season was recorded by local houses for the week, all of them chalking up appreciably higher grosses than indicated by the total strips for the week previous. Collectively, the aggregate comparative intake showed a healthy improvement.

The RKO Palace proved the Mecca for local show shoppers, who appeared to turn out en masse for "Whoopee," the final returns at this house checking over seven grand more than turned in the week before.

"War Nurse," at the RKO Capitol, clicked heavily with the regulars, and the box-office till contained $3,500 more on the week than it did for the seven days before.

The third house in line in the skyrocketing grosses was the RKO Lyric, with "Morocco," which recorded an upturn of slightly over $3,000 in contrast with the prior attraction.

Generous use of newspaper display, together with unusual exploitation and tie-ups, and, in the last analysis, pictures with a real box-office draw, are turning the trick in this man's town.

The unemployment situation is not materially affecting houses here. In fact, it is having the opposite effect since the inauguration of the local ticket-selling brigades sponsored by the RKO organization in its nation-wide campaign to enrich the personal exchequer of those whose finances have been depleted through enforced idleness.

Films with Burlesque

San Francisco—Feature pictures will be added to the regular supplementary programs at the Capitol, burlesque house. Manager John Goldsmith is installing additional projection equipment which will enable the showing of regular film features, in place of the current comedies, newsreels and shorts. Warren Irons, eastern producer who opened the Capitol here last July, made a brief visit over Thanksgiving, returning to Chicago after a series of conferences with Goldsmith.

Sex Show Banned

Edmonton, Alta.—The attorney general prohibited presentation of "Artists' Models" hy W. M. Davidson in an Edmonton theatre on threat of further prosecutions following the conviction of Davidson at Calgary on the charge of corrupting morals, for which he was fined $500 and costs. The show consisted of sex films and an anatomical display uf women on the stage.

"Silver Horde," 'Sin' Get $18,500 Each in Frisco

San Francisco—RKO theatres and Fox West Coast maintained a comfortable lead over the field during the past week. Business throughout the city was only fair. This week saw the practical elimination of one of the W. B. Wagnon theatres, the Embassy, which reported a surprisingly low gross even for a depression period.

Both the RKO theatres, the Orpheum and Golden Gate, two of the major downtown houses, reported each around $18,500 for the week, the former featuring "Sin Takes a Holiday" and the latter, "The Silver Horde."

Of the Fox West Coast chain, the El Capitan apparently had the best of the week, relatively speaking. Of the Publix chain, the Paramount led.

Honor Miss Stecker

Cincinnati—Recognition by various civic and welfare groups is being given to Miss H. Dora Stecker, manager of the Forest, neighborhood house located in one of the fashionable suburbs, for her sponsorship of special Saturday matinees for children. In addition to showing a picture with a distinctive juvenile appeal, suitable souvenirs are given.

"Feet First's" $16,000 a Good Start at Cleve.

Cleveland—There were slim pickings at the picture houses here last week, taking it all in all. "Feet First" got away to a pretty good start at the Stillman, where it opened an extended engagement, and "Sin Takes a Holiday" did fairly well at the RKO Hippodrome, but the other pictures did not have enough box-office appeal to buck the severe snow storm that tied up the city the first half of the week. Legitimate theatre competition was also keen, with "Strictly Dishonorable" playing at the Ohio and "Artists and Models" at the Hanna. Gus Van, as the headline attraction of the RKO Palace vaudeville bill, pulled business up at that house. The suburban theatres suffered from the heavy storm.

"Min and Bill's" $15,000 Good for Indianapolis Top

Indianapolis—"Min and Bill" at the Palace took the honors here this week with a gross of $15,000. George Arliss in "Old English" did not draw as well as usual and neither did the Circle with "Laughter." The Indianapolis public does not seem to appreciate smart dialogue. The Lyric had Aunt Jemima of Follies fame on its boards this week, but the gross there was $7,500, which is about 90 per cent for that house. "Half Shot at Sunrise" at the Indiana was only fair and would have flopped except for the personal appearance of Bobby Jackson, formerly master of ceremonies there.

Estimated takings:

"MIN AND BILL" (M-G-M)

Gate Crasher

Tampa—Two exhibs were talking shop.

"I tell you this past year has sure been lousy," said A.

"Huh! Don't tell me anything about it," said B. "Why, the old wolf is camping at my front door."

"Camping at your door? Why, boy, you ain't heard nothin' yet. The old wolf is right inside my show shop and had pups."

Mpls. Spurns Hell Themes; $27,500 Goes to "Sawyer"

Minneapolis—A couple of Sins and a Hell took the count during the week here, and who do you think knocked them more or less goofy? None other than the young, unsophisticated gentleman named "Tom Sawyer," who came within an ace of cracking down on the record hung up by Amos 'n' Andy.

It wasn't much of a defeat at that, however, for "Hell's Angels" and "Sin Takes a Holiday" are holding over for another week, while the lovable "Tom" retires gracefully with his laurels. RKO Orpheum is sending the Sin picture into the RKO Seventh Street for its second bout, while "Hell's Angels" repeats in the Century, where it started.

"The Virtutous Sin," which upheld the naughty tradition, did about normal business at the Lyric. "The Life of the Party" did very fair business at the State. "College Lovers" was about normal at the Aster and "See America Thirst" paid expenses at the Seventh Street.

Pantages is doing rather surprising business with Tiffany films, this week's offering being "The Third Alarm," which brought out the melodrama fans.

K. C. Dishes Out $21,750 for Load Of "Min & Bill"

Kansas City—Two pictures did outstanding business here. "Min and Bill" gave the Midland one of the biggest weeks in the history of the house, taking in $21,750, which is about 50 per cent above average intake. The Mainstreet came within $1,500 of reaching its Amos 'n' Andy gross with "Sin Takes a Holiday." Picture brought the house $21,000, which is near a record.

"Tom Sawyer" in its second week at the Royal continued to draw above-average patronage, taking in almost as much as it did the first week. Intake was $5,600. "The Big Trail" did only average business at the Newman, getting $12,500.

$25,000 Is Big Dough for "Min & Bill" at Prov.

Providence—High honors for money grabbing went to "Min and Bill" at Loew's last week, the combination of Wallace Beery and Marie Dressler clicking for $25,000. Even for this house the figure is real money.

The RKO Albee, showing "Sin Takes a Holiday" for the second week, was strong at $11,000, while the Majestic, with "The Gateway to Hell" and "Oh Sailor, Behave," also did nice business, garnering $12,500. Paramount was off at $9,000 with "Only Saps Work" and the Victory was on the edge, catching $8,500 with "Danger Lights."

"Wedding Night" Plus Stage Show $19,000, Leader

Montreal—The Capitol walked off with the show business in Montreal during the week with a combination of Lillian Roth in person, "Her Wedding Night" on the screen, the second Publix stage unit to play here, "Putt Putt," and a soloist. Result: $19,000 for the seven days. Other attractions fell far short of being a panic, although "Balaclava," a British film, road-showed at His Majesty's for eight days and received $11,500 as takings. This picture is to be released in the States under the title of "Jaws of Hell."

An indication of the business trend was seen when both the Palace and the Princess offered a free pre-view of the coming week's attraction on Thursday night, following the regular show, so that patrons grabbed two shows for the price of one. Nancy Carroll wasn't so hot in "Laughter," but Frederic March, the new male lead, practically saved the picture—and the Palace counted only $14,500 for the seven days. "Raffles" was fair for a second week at the Princess at $12,000.

Fair Sex Gives Chevalier Go-By; Gets Only $16,000

Toronto—The big houses did not fare very well during the week, what with the preliminary Christmas shopping skirmish, the last of the big football games, disagreeable weather and professional hockey. The women showed less interest in Maurice Chevalier, and his "Playboy of Paris" gathered a mere $16,000 at the Imperial, which was not considered good enough. Loew's also took in $16,000 with a straight film bill headed by "The Singer of Seville." This was good, but not up to recent record weeks. The Uptown, with its new policy and with Thomas Daley as the new manager, had its best week in three months with $12,000 on "Three Faces East," as compared with $11,500 on "Feet First" the week before. But this is nothing like the great showing of a couple of years back when the Uptown was hitting $20,000 or more regularly on film and stage shows. The Tivoli faded with "Half Shot at Sunrise" to $11,500, while Shea's Hippodrome had a fair week with "The Sea Wolf" and vaudeville at $12,500.

"Africa Speaks" $4,400 Worth to Lead in Ottawa

Ottawa—Although Dec. 1 forms the date for the more or less formal opening of the Christmas shopping season in Ottawa, because of the government pay arrangement, the theatres of the capital experienced a brace for the better in a number of instances. This also in spite of the Ottawa Horse Show during the first week in December. With the exception of "Up the River" and "A Devil with Women," B. F. Keith's theatre has done much better during the past month than was registered a year ago. "Africa Speaks" at the Regent took in $4,400 for the six days and this was well above the average. The Imperial called it a good week with "Renegades" at $2,600, while B. F. Keith's, with its big seating capacity, took in $3,900 in three days on "Those Three French Girls" which was popular with both English and French-speaking residents. Incidentally, the Regent got most of the stag crowd with "Africa Speaks." The Centre was quiet with "Girl of the Golden West."

"Sawyer" Big at $61,000 in Chi; Adults Like It

Chicago—After four successive weeks of mediocre and worse business, the Loop staged a comeback of substantial proportions to make a liar out of the first seven days of the "worst box-office month of the year." "Tom Sawyer" sent the Chicago to $61,000, a figure the house hasn't experienced in a long while, and a particularly significant one in view of the heavy kid trade at reduced prices. Most of this business, however, came during the Thanksgiving holiday week-end, slowing up at the first of the following week, when it was replaced by a fine adult draw until closing.

The Palace was in the prosperity van with an approximate $30,000, a top figure for the house. Moran and Mack on the stage are credited with the draw, but "The Dancers" was approved by critics and audiences and fitted in well to give the spot one of its best all-around programs and one of the most satisfactory bills in the Loop during the week. The Woods neared the $17,000 mark with "Today" in spite of pannings. Picture is playing to "adults only" and was held over. State-Lake was also prosperous with "Sin Takes a Holiday," which got $38,000 in ten days. The picture may last another seven days.

"Hell's Angels" was unusually strong with $30,500 for its second week at United Artists. Orpheum was big at $6,050 with "Man to Man," and McVickers, too, was pointed toward prosperity with "Min and Bill," which came in at midweek, getting $17,500 in four days. Punch & Judy theatre, swank independent house which opened in September, went dark the first of the week. Out-of-the-way location and inability to get drawing pictures provided the text for the tombstone.

Sex and Silks

Providence — Silken drama with smart cracks and fashions furnishing the motif has all the better of it in the sticks where the girl friend tells her escort what pictures to see. Such films as "Sin Takes a Holiday," "Laughter" and similar pictures with lavish scenic and sartorial effects coin the dough. The boys may prefer the rugged he-men, but the ladies go where there is the best style show.

Stage Show Aids "War Nurse" to Denver $14,000

Denver—With "War Nurse" leading the town at $14,000, Harry Huffman was able to pull up the gross of the Tabor somewhat with "Up the River" as the attraction. The figure is an improvement, but not so hot for the house.

Katherine Kaderly and Eloise Rowan, billed as the Paramount twins, put the organs through their paces with their best presentation since the house opened. They have a large following here and broadcast daily.

"War Nurse" went over to little better than average at the Denver with the help of Ted Mack and the "Sky High" stage show.

"River's End" did around $500 better than last week at the Aladdin while "The Way of All Men" flopped at the Rialto.

Estimated takings:

"Sunny" $23,400, 'War Nurse' Gets $21,600 at Balto.

Baltimore—Loew's Century and Loew's Stanley ran neck and neck for first place for high grosses for the week.

"Sunny" and the Loew-Capitol stage unit, "Rustic Fancies," were included on the Century bill and the gross was estimated at $23,400, which was excellent for this house, while "War Nurse," aided by a large slice of the national newspaper advertising appropriation, brought $21,600 into the Stanley box-office, making a very high rating for that house.

"Tol'able David" went over nicely at the Rivoli, aided by the personal appearance on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of Richard Cromwell, with special exploitation and publicity yarns in newspapers. The gross was figured at $7,600.

"Min and Bill," during its second run at Loew's Valencia, caused the gross to go way above normal, the takings being estimated at $4,500. Wallace Beery and Marie Dressler gain in popularity here with every new picture.

"Juno and the Paycock" proved a flop at the Little, the gross for the week at this 267-seater being estimated at about $400. The name of the picture, despite the publicity given it by the stage presentations here, seemed to mean nothing and the subject matter appeared to have no appeal.

The Gang Buster

(Paramount)

Oakie—All-Laughter

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

PARAMOUNT'S freckle-faced funster, Jack Oakie, comes to the front in a comical talker that kids the underworld and does it in great style. Besides plenty of comedy dialogue and mirthful situations, the picture is based upon a clever story and that helps to make it rate as excellent comedy screen fare.

Fine for the week-run houses and sugsequent engagements. It's the type of gangster stuff that will suit any audience and, plus the Oakie name, should do at the box-office.

Eddie Sutherland, the director, has succeeded in timing his gags correctly and keeps the piece moving at a swift tempo. Joseph Mankiewicz, who is undoubtedly a swell writer of dialogue for the Oakie personality, turns out a neat job, and as a result the lines are funny and at the same time natural.

The story is about the adventures of an ambitious, fast-talking insurance salesman from Arkansas who comes to the big city. Oakie, as the salesman with his dumb looks and unnatural luck, sells a big policy to William Morris, whom William Boyd, as the gang chief, has put "on the spot." The insurance policy is rejected. Oakie goes to tell Morris—and incidentally—to keep a date with Jean Arthur, the daughter. In the meantime Miss Arthur is kidnaped by Boyd and Oakie goes to rescue her. His innocence of gang methods gets him into many tough places, but he finally emerges the winner after getting two rival gangs trapped by the police and finding the girl.

The fadeout comes with Oakie and Miss Arthur locked in a room filled with tear gas, declaring their love while crying. It's a pip of an ending.

The story in some spots is rather vague as to why certain things occur as they do, but these are of minor importance. Unlike many comedy talkers, when the serious moments arrived the preview audience took them that way, but when it was time to laugh they roared.

Oakie fits the role of the Arkansas lad perfectly and his performance is top notch. William Boyd, as the gang chief, and Wynne Gibson, as his "moll," are well cast and handle their roles expertly. Others who give good performances are Francis McDonald, Jean Arthur, William Morris, Albert Conti and Tom Kennedy.

Beau Ideal

(Radio)

Sadly Disappointing

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

IN common with most sequels, "Beau Ideal" does not live up to its predecessor, "Beau Geste." Herbert Brenon directed both and much was expected of his latest effort. The result is disappointing.

You are left with the impression that, despite the shortcomings of the involved plot, more could have been realized from the material at hand. Yet it is extremely difficult to point a finger at any one individual who is at fault. The thing as a whole so misses fire.

The picture opens dramatically with a group of imprisoned Foreign Legionnaires dying of starvation and thirst. One of the characters is identified as John Geste and a flashback takes up the threads of the story which proceeds the opening sequence.

An episode in the childhood of the three Geste brothers introduces the game of Stout Fellow as it was played in "Beau Geste." John and another boy, an American youth named Otis Madison, are competing for the hand of Isobel. Their game has hardly reached its conclusion when the American boy's mother announces an immediate sailing for the States. The children say fond farewells and urge the visitor to return soon.

Many years pass before Otis (Lester Vail) returns. His boyhood affection for Isobel brings him back to England bent on confessing his constant, if more mature, love. Isobel tells Otis of the tragic deaths of the two oldest Geste brothers (as detailed in "Beau Geste") and of the present imprisonment of John in the French Foreign Legion penal colony. Another flashback is employed here in explanation of John's sentence to prison.

Otis volunteers to go after John and if possible help him escape. As a consequence, he, too, enlists in the Legion and connives to have himself sent to the prison camp. His plan to commit a minor insubordination miscarries so instead he confesses to a mutiny of which he was not a member.

In prison he rebels against unjust treatment, is defended by John and both are thrown down a pit comparing favorably to what is known as "solitary" in American jails. Still unknown to one another, John is not identified by Otis until he murmurs "Stout Fellow." Which brings us back to the opening sequence.

Explanation of the prisoners' deaths by starvation in the pit is forthcoming. The entire prison colony and barracks have been massacred by Arabs. An Arabian chieftan riding by with his caravan to check his men's handiwork finds Otis and John are the lone survivors. They are saved from death by some sort of super-empowered dancing girl attracted to Otis. The motivation of this incident is extremely weak and not in the slightest helped by Leni Stengel's violent display of histronics.

The dancer makes Otis a proposition. She will betray the Arabs and allow him to escape with John to warn the Legionnaires of further uprising if he will take her to Paris. Otis, thinking of Isobel and her love for John, agrees. After the Arabs are repulsed in bloody battle, Otis returns to keep his bargain, only to overhear the dancer propositioning his major about a Paris trip. Therefore he feels free of his bargain and goes back to be best man at the wedding of Isobel and John.

"Beau Ideal's" main claim to fame rests upon the excellent filming of the desert marching and the fighting sequences. Full thrill values are achieved in the battle stuff and beautiful desert shots abound. Outside of these highlights the picture definitely misses.

Brenon will be criticized roundly for numerous incoherencies. There is so much plot, dialogue has considerable explaining to do and not all of it is done clearly.

The performances with few exceptions are thoroughly capable. Lester Vail, as Otis, has the heaviest assignment and acquits himself unevenly. In his better moments he shows definite promise as a comer and even at his worst, only a lack of screen experience. Ralph Forbes takes premier acting honors—such as they are—in the role of John. There is also a smooth piece of work contributed by Paul McAllister. His old Legionnaire adjutant is the picture's most memorable character. Loretta Young seems miscast as Isobel.

There have been many better Foreign Legion films than "Beau Ideal." It will probably do moderate business mainly through the popularity of "Beau Geste." Play up heavily the sequel angle.

Lack of comedy relief makes all comedy support in shorts desirable.

Follow the Leader

(Paramount)

Loaded with Laughs

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

ED WYNN didn't make such a dent in the box-offices in silent days, but he will overcome that handicap with "Follow the Leader," which has laughs in abundance. Patrons will have a gay time following his silly antics, for they surely are funny.

This is an adaptation of the musical show, "Manhattan Mary," but Paramount wisely has subordinated the musical slant, making it but incidental to a good action comedy. Even the title was changed to remove the musical comedy onus. The result proves the wisdom of the company's policy of reserving the right to change pictures on its program if and when changing public tastes warrant.

Wynn is all over the place, getting laughs at every turn, and can be guaranteed to bring down any house. Lou Holtz is a close second in this and Lou screens well. Ginger Rogers and Stanley Smith supply the love interest. The balance of the cast is fine. Norman Taurog did a fine job of directing.

The story is merely incidental to Wynn. He's a stagestruck waiter who accidentally knocks out a tough gangster and is made leader of a gang. The gang decides that the restaurant owner's daughter is going on the stage, and threaten to bump off Lou Holtz, a press agent, if she doesn't get a break.

Then they force Wynn to see to it that the leading lady is missing on the opening night, so the girl can get the star part. She's a hit and goes abroad to star in Paris, returning finally to her sweetheart, with whom she has had a falling out.

The dialogue in this is sparkling, having been written by George White, DeSylva, Brown and Henderson and Billy K. Wells. The latter has written some funny stuff under the Fox banner. White appears in the picture as the producer of George White's Scandals, which adds to the selling value of the picture.

The Royal Bed

(Radio)

Delightful Sophistry

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

HUMANIZING royalty has concerned several of our playwrights in recent seasons. Outstanding among the crop was "The Queen's Husband" by Robert E. Sherwood, and his play now reaches the screen guised under the somewhat cryptic title of "The Royal Bed," but with minimum changes in its film adaptation.

As simon-pure entertainment for intelligent audiences this talker has few equals in its class. Lowell Sherman, credited with directing as well as enacting the leading role, has turned out a delightful tid-bit in sophisticated satire. Class houses can tout this picture to the skies and look the patron in the eye both coming and going.

The story opens in a royal palace of a mythical kingdom. The queen is about to depart on a money-raising trip to America and is satisfying herself that everything will run smoothly in her absence. She has small regard for the abilities of the king, whose crown rests lightly on a democratic brow. In fact, the king seems much more interested in playing checkers with a lackey than in running the affairs of state.

For example, he has long avoided signing orders for the execution of fifty-odd convicted revolutionists. The militaristic premier demands action, but without avail.

Soon after the departure of the queen the threatened revolution breaks out. Mobs storm the gates and the palace is under artillery fire. The premier has had himself made dictator by parliament and proposes to quell the uprising by force.

It is then the king does a little rising up himself. Free for the first time since their marriage from the domineering influences of his wife, he ceases to be "The Queen's Husband" and decides "to give the royal prerogatives a little much-needed exercise."

The king meets with the leaders of the revolutionists, finds them pleasant fellows with legitimate grievances and sets out to right those wrongs. This he accomplishes by disbanding parliament and forcing the resignation of the premier-dictator, things he did not know were in his power until necessity forced his reading the constitution of his country.

While he is at it, he also makes possible the marriage of the princess and his secretary, the man she really loves. Thus he upsets the unwelcome wedding of his daughter and the prince chosen for her mate by diplomatic treaty. Having turned like a long suffering worm, the king then goes back to his job of being just "The Queen's Husband." All of this is told with subtle charm and delightful humanness.

A cast that could hardly be improved upon supports Lowell Sherman, whose work is deft as ever. Mary Astor should always play royalty, so lovely is she as the princess, and Nance O'Neil makes an admirable queen. A sterling portrayal of the dictator is contributed by Robert Warwick. Gilbert Emery makes memorable the checker-playing lackey and comes near to stealing the picture.

Sherman is to be commended in his direction that allows every player full opportunity. Story values are never sacrificed to personal footage of the actor-director.

Like the manufacturer who advertised he stood behind every bed he sold, conscientious showmen can back up this "Royal Bed." Play it by all means.

The Criminal Code

(Columbia)

Swell B. O. Melodrama

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

COLUMBIA has turned out a swell box-office picture in "Criminal Code." A fine story, with cast and direction to match, makes this picture one of the outstanding prison dramas of the year. It has humor, suspense, pathos and action, and just enough of each. Howard Hawks, the director, knew what he was about when he filmed this piece, and the treatment he gives it is noteworthy.

In the cast, Walter Huston and Phillips Holmes have the important roles. Huston, as the district attorney and later the warden, is well fitted for his role and gives a great performance.

Phillips Holmes, as the boy whom Huston sends to prison, gives a portrayal that is of stellar importance. Constance Cummings, in the part of the warden's daughter, is impressive in her screen debut and fits the role ably. Mary Doran is well cast in a small role. As Galloway, Boris Karloff is outstanding for a fine performance, while others who appear to a distinct advantage are DeWitt Jennings, John Sheehan, Nicholas Soussanin and Otto Hoffman.

The story concerns young Holmes, who is being railroaded to prison by Huston in order that Huston will get favorable support in the coming elections. Holmes, in defending Mary Doran from a rich man's son, kills the youth in a fight. After serving six years in the jute mills, Holmes comes before Huston, now the warden, and is made a trusty—Huston's chauffeur. Here Holmes falls in love with Miss Cummings and she falls for him. They do not declare their love, however.

When Karloff kills a "squealer" in the warden's office Holmes is aware of who committed the crime, but will not tell. Huston has him thrown into solitary confinement in order to save his job as warden. When the daughter learns of this, she tells Huston she knows he "railroaded" Holmes and demands he set the lad free—a parole having been granted him. The lovers are thus united and Huston forced to suffer.

Most of the story takes place in prison and the production is marked by elaborate sets and intimate glimpses of prison life. Important details in prison conduct have not been overlooked, and the talker is marked by reality in its presentation. All this enhances the appeal of the film version over that of the stage play.

This talker rates plenty of attention as a feature for the better class first-run houses. It will do well in the subsequent bookings also and will stand up under heavy exploitation. Don't be afraid to buy it.

The Yellow Mask

(British International Pictures)

Hash

(Reviewed by Robert Hoge)

THIS is billed as "a musical melodrama to end all melodramas," but it comes pretty late for that. Anyway, we're in favor of it (the elimination part). Edgar Wallace wrote the story, a combination of mystery thriller and musical comedy. When it sticks to the mystery slant, it's fairly good, but when it's musical comedy it's not so good. The two have been hashed together in such a manner that the resultant mixture is altogether a tiresome affair.

The producer warns that the film is not to be taken seriously, with the spectator invited to join with the author in kidding musicals. He was kidding himself. The story is so implausible and unreal that it doesn't click, the comedy is of the unfunny kind, despite Lupino Lane's labored efforts, and the music is dull.

We're not familiar with the routine, but we can't imagine the British government sending a lone and apparently unarmed aviator to capture the yacht of a powerful Oriental, who has kidnaped the heroine and stolen a priceless diamond from the Tower of London. The British fleet would be more like it. There are other sequences as bad.

Lupino Lane is featured in the billing, playing the role of a reporter. By means of some ingenious trapdoors and some slapstick (silly, but funny) he succeeds in getting some laughs. Warwick Ward as the cunning Oriental deserves top honors in the cast, composed of names unfamiliar to American audiences.

This may get by on a double feature program, but put a strong film with it.

Igdenbu

(Amkino)

Lacks Wide Appeal

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

ENTERTAINING only so far as a fondness for the educational qualities of race study is concerned. At "art" theatres and in the non-theatrical field, it should be appreciated, but the general run of theatres will find very little to satisfy amusement-hungry patrons.

Produced by Vostokino, it portrays an intimate life study of a small tribe in the waste lands of Siberia, where primitive methods still are depended upon for a livelihood. In a background of terrific blizzards and a flood, the hardships of this tribe are presented, with unusually fine scenic beauty the highlight.

The bare story thread moves slightly through six reels and its continuity is choppy more often than not. Photography, except in a few rare spots, is sloppy. Titles by Shelley Hamilton seem uncertain and reveal but little. Soviet propaganda, as usual, appears at the climax.

If you run this at all, use a strong feature on a double bill and some light shorts.

Produced in Soviet Russia by Voskino. Distributed in U. S., via state rights market, by Amkino. American titles by Shelley Hamilton. Length, undetermined. Cast, all natives.

Mothers Cry

(First National)

Drama, Usually Effective

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

FIRST NATIONAL set out to wring the tears from the women quotas in the audience and, as a general observation, succeeded in reaching its objective.

This is a mother story, as the title obviously indicates. It is also pretty drab stuff, almost always unrelieved by any light touches. Whether the women will go for it, despite the fact that its appeal is evidently designed almost entirely for the weaker sex, remains to be seen. "Lummox," another mother love yarn, was a generally fine picture and far better in treatment and performance than "Mothers Cry," yet it did an almost perfect nosedive at the box-office. It is this writer's suggestion that the exhibitor take a look at this one before making up his mind.

The story has five principal characters. Dorothy Peterson is the mother; Helen Chandler and Evalyn Knapp, her daughters; and David Manners and Edward Woods, her sons. From the day of her engagement all through the years the drama takes you, getting off to a nicely tempoed comedy beginning with bustles and flannel nightgowns providing the amusement, and so through the struggles that come with raising a family on a moderate income. Helen Chandler proves to be a member of the intelligentsia, dissatisfied with her surroundings and eager for the better things of life. David Manners is the model son who achieves manhood and a reputation as a promising architect. Miss Knapp is the replica of her mother: plodding, patient, resigned. Woods is Danny, the bad boy who develops into a gangster and the ultimate devastator of his entire family.

Miss Chandler eventually goes wrong; Manners reaches success as a designer of buildings. Miss Knapp marries happily and Danny travels down the road to ruin. Over them all the mother watches—ready to conciliate, to forgive, to slave her fingers to the bone in order to keep her family together and happy. The climax comes when Miss Chandler, weeping over the love letters of the man who ruined her, becomes involved with Danny, just out of prison. He wants the letters for blackmail and kills his resisting sister to get them. But the law takes its course and Danny is electrocuted, thereby reducing the family to two. The mother, jealous of the successful architect-son, persuades him to leave and to deny his relationship with the murderer. He does, but is later reunited with his mother if only temporarily. In his success, she finds solace.

A fine story, this yarn by Helen Grace Carlisle. Yet something has been lost in the transfer from the printed word to the screen. The performances are uniformly good, with Miss Peterson, as the mother, in the lead despite the fact that her job leaves something to be desired. Reginald Pasch, as the German son-in-law, is splendid. Edward Wood, as Danny, is usually very good, except for an occasional inclination toward overacting.

Produced and distributed by First National. From novel by Helen Grace Carlisle. Directed by Hobart Henley. Adaptation and additional dialogue by Lenore Coffee. Length, 6,855 feet. Running time, 75 minutes. Release date, Jan. 4, 1931.

Reducing

(M-G-M)

Laugh Riot

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

M-G-M sneaked this one into a cold house on Sunday night for a preview. The regular Hollywood preview crowd was absent as a result, but the audience made up for any lack of cheer leaders. They almost tore the seats out with laughter.

"Caught Short" surprised the studio heads by crashing box-office records. This picture may surpass even those records.

Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are teamed again and if anything they have many more chances to bring giggles than they had in their first offering. They have an excellent cast supporting who contribute considerable to the comedy while carrying along the romance and other components of the story.

Willard Mack and Beatrice Banyard are given credit for the dialogue continuity. They have furnished all of the players with clever speeches which have been interpreted in highly amusing fashion by Charles Reisner, who deserves a hand for the direction displayed. Further wisecracks have been added by Robert E. Hopkins and Zelda Sears, who assisted with the dialogue.

Anita Page is seen as the small town daughter of Marie and Lucien Littlefield. The latter is especially good as the rather pathetic husband of the amply proportioned comedienne.

Sally Eilers is cast as the ritzy and haughty daughter of Polly, who runs a gaudy beauty parlor in New York.

Buster Collier, Jr., is the roue who first seduces Leila and throws her over for Anita, only to be forced at the conclusion, at the point of a Civil War pistol wielded by Marie, to marry Polly's daughter.

William Bakewell has a sympathetic role as the country boy sweetheart of Anita who is greatly distraught during her affair with the smart city slicker. Of course he gets her back at the finish.

Jay Ward and Billy Naylor as Jerry and Marty Truffle, the two trouble-making sons of Marie, who are always causing excitement, gather in no little of the applause and laughter.

The story revolves principally around the swell beauty parlor operated by Polly. She sends for her cousin, Marie, who arrives with the entire family, amid a lot of slapstick gags, to live with the tilted-nosed city folks.

Polly's daughter is disgusted with her country relatives and is considerably put out when her sweetie gives her the air to pay court to the country girl.

The thrill climax comes when the city girl, discovering Anita on her way to the apartment of the city fellow, goes to Marie and discloses that she is going to have a baby. Marie takes the situation in hand, however, with her big revolver, and forces the rapscallion to marry Leila.

When Polly discovers what has happened she goes to Marie's home in the tenements, where she moved after a battle with Polly, and makes a dramatic speech renouncing her high toned ideas and begging forgiveness.

Some of the scenes in the beauty parlor, when Marie turns on the wrong switches and almost bakes a few customers, pushes Polly into the mud baths and in general wreaks havoc, convulsed the customers.

You can depend on it to bring them in. Will need only dramatic shorts of almost any kind on the same bill.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M. Dialogue continuity by Willard Mack and Beatrice Banyard. Directed by Charles F. Reisner. Photography by Leonard Smith. Additional dialogue by Robert E. Hopkins and Zelda Sears. Edited by William LeVanway. Running time (preview), 77 minutes. Length, 6,930 feet. Release date, Jan. 3, 1931.

The Bachelor Father

(M-G-M)

Clever Adult Comedy

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

THEY have done a nice job of cleaning up this spicy stage success, and as a starring vehicle for Marion Davies it seems tailor-made. It will be considered by many her best talker to date, and is good for a week's stand in any house where Davies is a draw.

None too much emphasis is placed on the legitimacy of "The Bachelor Father's" three children. There is a line which suggests many marriages, but the suggestion will be overlooked by most of the audience. Much of the dialogue is on the border line of the risque in innuendo.

Sir Basil Winterton, facing a lonely old age, is persuaded to gather his three children from various corners of the earth, bringing them to live with him. He has been supporting the offspring of his glamorous youth for many years and decides he may as well have their companionship, too.

His lawyer (Ralph Forbes) rounds up a boy, Geoffrey, in rural England; Maria, daughter of an Italian opera singer, in Florence; and Tony (Marion Davies) in New York. Meeting his three children proves an ordeal for Sir Basil. But despite his grouchiness the trio put him on a month's probation to give him a chance to act like a father.

The month ends with the engagement of Tony to the young attorney. Then she hears the news that she is not, after all, the daughter of Sir Basil. A widow with her eye on the bachelor father attempts to discredit Tony by revealing her real parentage. This revelation leads to a break between Sir Basil and Tony, so the girl prepares to join a young aviator in attempting to hop the Atlantic.

Sir Basil, hearing the take-off broadcast by radio from the aviation field, realizes he loves his pseudo-daughter, and attempts to stop the flight. Her fiancee is dispatched to the field to bring her back. He arrives to find her injured by the plane's crash in the trees. A complete reconciliation all around follows.

Acting honors go to C. Aubrey Smith in the title role he created in the original Belasco production. It is a delightful performance, suave and authoritative, and dominates the picture, though closely contested by Marion Davies. Ralph Forbes makes a forthright hero and Nena Quartaro is charming as the opera singer's child. Others are uniformly good in support. Robert Z. Leonard's direction deserves attention.

"The Bachelor Father" is built for the box-office and should get its share of business.

Aunts in the Pants

(Radio)

A Riot

MARK SANDRICH and Johnnie Grey have done a whale of a job in gagging this comedy, which is one long howl. It has plenty of novelty, generous gobs of good old-fashioned slapstick and some clever lines. Walter Catlett is featured, the nephew of a wealthy and sedate spinster aunt (Cissie Fitzgerald), who on the side is a wow for wild parties. They awaken, after a wild party, to learn they are in a jam with a copper, whose eye auntie had blackened, and that they had brought home a few sailors, a horse, some chorus girls and a fellow in dress suit who has lost his pants. Then when auntie's old maid sister comes on the scene in her effort to have auntie declared incompetent, there is a merry mix-up. One of the best comedies in many moons. The sequence showing the horse in bed is a howl. Running time, 21 minutes.

Wizard Land

Okay

TOM TERRISS manages to make this trip to Papua more exciting than ordinarily, showing close-ups of the warlike natives and their domestic life. The Vagabond Director again plunges himself into a hideous danger, embellishing the synthetic drama with his excitable voice, but once again he escapes and his cameraman manages to follow. Running time. 11 minutes.

Another Fine Mess

(M-G-M)

A Pippin

LAUREL and Hardy are in a class by themselves in the comedy line. This one has plenty of good hearty laughs and a number of real situations. Director James Parrot wisely lets action carry the sequence whenever possible, cutting talking to a minimum, which is one of the reasons why these comedies never drag. Laurel calls a cop a sissy, and they take refuge in a mansion whose owner is just leaving for South Africa. When prospective lessees arrive, they are on the spot and plenty happens. Hardy's deal to lease the house for $20 a month, which he tells the purchaser to mail to him in South Africa, is a wow. Running time, 28½ minutes.

Excuse the Pardon

(Vitaphone No. 1,069)

Wet

CAREY, an accused murderer, gets his pardon. Then the pardon board discovers it was all a mistake and, in order to save their political heads, get the prisoner back by a ruse. The warden, believing Carey innocent, tells him so and promises the prisoner he will do what he can to secure his release. Silly story, developed with as much dramatic sense. Ralph Morgan and Katherine Alexander featured. Running time, 10 minutes.

Trader Ginsburg

(Radio)

Fairly Good

NAT CARR appears as a radio salesman who has chased his prospect across Europe and lands in the African jungles, where the millionaire is engaged in a lion hunt. Carr has a narrow escape and in disgust tosses away his radio sample, a vest pocket affair, and an ostrich tries to swallow it. Just then some cannibals come along, and believe Carr is a god, for the ostrich is apparently singing. Taken before the king, Carr is told to make the bird sing, but an S. O. S. has taken all radio stations off the air, so Carr and the millionaire are put into the kettle. However, the radio again functions and Carr trades it for their release. The story is novel and has some good gags. Running time, 18 minutes.

Short Subjects

Strange As It Seems, No. 4

(Universal)

A Pippin!

FOURTH in the series of "Strange As It Seems," by John Hix, the newspaper columnist, this one far surpasses its predecessors in the same group and runs far in the lead of the many competitive reels now in the market. Colorful backgrounds used in the presentation of facts and oddities of nature are outstanding, and the Multicolor used reaches an unusually high mark. This has wide appeal and most certainly deserves a spot on any type program, from the standpoint of both entertainment and educational qualities. Running time, 14 minutes.

Who Killed Rover?

(M-G-M)

Great Card

THESE M-G-M dog comedies are sensational and this one is no exception. It's a meller take-off on Philo Vance yarns, with a newlywed heir captured by kidnapers. The bride is heartbroken and the district attorney craves Vance's aid. Vance does his stuff and finally reaches Rover, but too late, as he has been bumped off. A great novelty two-reeler, which will click anywhere. Zion Myers and Jules White deserve great credit for the uncanny manner in which they induce these dogs to act. Running time, 14 minutes.

Accordion Joe

Diverting Nonsense

BIMBO turns a long-distance accordion champ in this and comes through with a load of credit for himself. His plane drops in the Indian country where Bimbo makes violent and reciprocated love to an Indian maid. The tribe turns sour and plans a tomahawking party, but Bimbo's music turns them into jazz steppers instead. Good cartoon. Produced by David Fleischer. Running time, 7 minutes.

Framed

(Universal-Leather Pushers)

Popular Stuff

THE same old conventional "Leather Pushers" Boasting only of snappy ring action, which features each of the series, the current reel is in line with the type of screenfare which second, third and subsequent runs go for in a big way. The more sophisticated picturegoers will probably find too much sloppy "hero" stuff and an absence of intelligent handling in important situations. Running time, 18 minutes.

Copy

(M-G-M)

Fair Hoke

A SHORT drama with a newspaper city room as the setting. Roscoe Karns is the hard-hitting city editor, launching a campaign against the unseaworthiness of excursion steamers plying to and from the city. The steamship magnate threatens to get Karns, who is told to drop the campaign by his chief. Instead, Karns quits, announcing that first he will get out the next edition. Meanwhile, one of the steamers takes fire and Karns is told his wife and child are among the victims. He sticks to his post and learns the wife and child are safe. Some of it is hoke which newspapermen are sure to kid. That getting-out-the-next-edition gag is a jarring note. Running time, 23 minutes.

The Dixie Chase

(Pathe)

Excellent

SHOT in North Carolina, this Grantland Rice Sportlight is packed with interest from start to finish. It starts off with an informal fox hunt and shows the actual capture of the animal. Then there is a night hunt for 'possum, and the camera shows the prey treed. The baying of the hounds adds realism to the short. Running time, 13 minutes.

Go Ahead and Sing

(Paramount)

Pretty Funny

TOM HOWARD tries to do a little pan-handling in this comedy, singing to the accompaniment of his wop pal's fiddling. They are in front of a hospital and an attendant comes out to ask them to stop. But the fiddler says it doesn't mean a thing, telling Tom "Go ahead and sing." He does and the attendant gets tough, warning them they must stop, with the same result. Finally, he socks Tom with a baseball bat, while the fiddler is repeating his "Go ahead and sing." Running time, 11 minutes.

Springtime at the Zoo

(British International Pictures)

Fine Short

A VISIT to an English zoo in springtime, showing the various animals and birds getting ready for the new warm season. A wide variety of subjects are shown, with a lecturer giving their names and discoursing throughout the reel. Running time, 7 minutes.

Pickin' Cotton

Average Short

THIS series of Negro musical numbers, presenting the Forbes Randolph Kentucky Jubilee Singers, is well done, but there is a sameness about the various subjects which deprive them of real kick. This one is about on a par with the others, registering as an average short. Running time, 9 minutes.

Camera Trails

(Paramount)

Fine Scenic

A NEW idea in scenics is employed in this entertaining Robert Bruce subject. It opens on a film location, where the director is forced to a retake because the girl slammed a door too hard. Then the cameramen engage in conversation, one stating his present job is nothing like the fine time he had making travel subjects. Scenes of the many spots he visited then are shown, until the director is ready for the retake. Running time, 8 minutes.

Doctor's Orders

(M-G-M)

Not So Good

HAL ROACH"S Boy Friends haven't much to work with in this comedy. A couple of the kids want to meet some girl friends, so they fake a wreck in the girls' yard, with another playing the role of doctor, and then doubling as the nurse. It has action, but the plot is silly and the laughs infrequent. Running time, 22 minutes.

Audio Review No. 48

(Pathe)

Interesting

THE three units comprising this issue will appeal to all types of patrons, their diversity being notable. The first depicts the ancient castles and chateaux of France, with a background of rare scenic beauty; in the second "The Rollickers," a radio quartette, sings one of Rachmaninoff's songs, with marked success, and the third is an English comedy, produced "way back when," entitled "The Fatal Sneeze." It proves that movies do move and any audience will get a kick out of it. Running time, 9 minutes.

Stone Age Stunts

(Pathe)

Good

A CONSIDERABLE amount of originality makes this Aesop Fable highly entertaining, combining modern civilization with caveman days. The prehistoric mouse and his sweetie are having a gay time in a cabaret located in a skyscraper mountain when it catches fire, and the brave firemen, elephants who spray water through their trunks, save the lovers. Running time, 7 minutes.

Too Hot to Handle

(Radio)

Some Funny Gags

LOUISE FAZENDA gets off a few laughs in this comedy, which is climaxed by a wild ride in a fox hunt. Louise poses as a social secretary and by mistake sends her hard-boiled family out to serve as professional society guests. Things happen when the fox hunt starts, and Louise has some ride. A fairly good comedy. Lewis R. Foster directed. Running time, 21 minutes.

Looser Than Loose

(M-G-M)

Pretty Good

THIS has a good plot and some good gags, averaging well with other Charley Chase comedies. A fairly good sprinkling of laughs help considerably as the action is somewhat slow. Charley is told by his boss to take a good customer on a party, and when he assures his fiancee it's to be a nice affair, she insists on going along. The customer prefers her, so forces Charley to make a trade. Thelma Todd opposite Charley looks like a million and is a good trouper. Running time, 21 minutes.

High Steppers

(Pathe)

Fair

APPARENTLY Grantland Rice ran out of punchy ideas for his Sportlights, for in this edition he travels from one section of the country to another for the purpose of shooting runners and sprinters. Why doesn't he concentrate on football during the season? It's too tame for the average audience that demands something for its money. Running time, 9 minutes.

The Glories of Nikko

(M-G-M)

Fine Travelogue

THIS is the first of the current Burton Holmes series for M-G-M and it's a highly entertaining subject, showing the beauties of the Japanese city of Nikko. The beautiful "fence" of Nikko is one of the world's architectural wonders, and Holmes interestingly describes how it has endured for centuries without defacement. A program suggestion in billing the short is to contrast this fact with what its fate probably would have been in the United States. Running time, 9 minutes.

China's Old Man River

(M-G-M)

Good Scenic

ANOTHER of the Burton Holmes travels, this time a trip up the Yangtse in China. The sordidness of the surroundings, the various modes of river travel, an American gunboat and the swirling rapids of the upper river are interestingly presented and described by Holmes. Running time, 8½ minutes.

Short Subjects

Mickey's Bargain

(Radio)

Ingenious

MICKEY (Himself) McGUIRE and his gang surely have a lot of contrivances to play with and guard their hangout in this comedy. It is highly entertaining, the antics of the kids sustaining the interest throughout. It's a burlesque on "The Big Trail" and the Indian fight is well done. Running time, 19 minutes.

The Bughouse

Just Fair

ANOTHER of the Toby, the Pup, series, produced by Charles Mintz. It follows fairly familiar lines, in that it contains the various assortment of dancing contortions, common to cartoon subjects generally. Only fair. Running time, 6 minutes.

Alpine Echoes

(Vitaphone Varieties)

Very Well Done

THE use of prop scenery for mountain backgrounds takes little from the production value of this one in which a colorful setting is made for Douglas Stanbury's presentation of two songs. He is assisted by the Chalet quartette, but aid of the latter does very little to strengthen the entertainment qualities of the reel. Spot in any place. Running time, 8 minutes.

Seeing Bermuda

(Talking Picture Epics)

Colorful Scenic

REACHING a high mark in scenic material. Bermuda offers a picturesque background, with its quaint towns and picturesque beauty. Dubbed to the voice of Frank Ormston, who helps, in his convincing description, to raise entertainment value. Nicely made and deserving of a booking in practically any type theatre. Running time, 11 minutes.

Curiosities

(Columbia)

Splendid

WALTER FUTTER knocks out a pip in this new "Curiosity" release, covering many unusual fields in presenting wonders of the world and freaks of nature. Voice is nicely synchronized with the action. Okay for a spot on any type bill. Running time, 9 minutes.

Peas and Ques

(State Rights)

Educational

MADE in England by Pro Patria Films, this one stacks up as splendid material for schoolroom use or at kiddie matinees. Highly educational from the biological standpoint, but lacking entertainment interest. Showing the wonders of nature in certain biological aspects. Voice dubbed to the silent print is weak. Running time, 9 minutes.

Go Ahead and Eat

Just Fair

TOM HOWARD, "goofy" comic, in a vaudeville skit which is good for a few laughs. It's not as good as his "Go Ahead and Sing." Tom and another down-and-outer find a policeman's cap and coat and try to work the old army game on a restaurant, i. e., one eating a meal, and the other appearing on the scene as a cop. It works swell the first time, but Tom is out of luck on his try. Running time, 11 minutes.

Johann Strauss

(FitzPatrick Pictures)

Rich in Entertainment

HIGHLIGHTED by his "Blue Danube Waltz," the tuneful melodies of Johann Strauss are featured in this "Music Master" and develop into one of the most colorful and entertaining shorts of the FitzPatrick series. The production values rate high and are enhanced to a considerable extent by the Victor Symphony Orchestra. A scenic episode is beautiful. Running time, 11 minutes.

Girls We Remember

(Vitaphone Varieties)

Snappy Revue

THERE are more steppers in this one than in many of last year's feature musicals. They form the background for an entertaining revue, in color, during which numerous specialty numbers are staged. Nicely made, although only one tune, the title song, is used for song and dance. Running time, 10 minutes.

Major Hammond—Adventure

(State Rights)

Thrilling

A THRILLING deep-sea fishing trip along the coast of southern California and Mexico, presenting close-ups of numerous big catches. Has a strong appeal for sports lovers. The kids will like it, too. Running time, 9 minutes.

Love Business

(M-G-M)

A Rib Tickler

HAL ROACH'S "rascals" turn in a remarkable performance, particularly because of the limited action provided them. Laughs galore emanate from the "serious" situations woven around a "romance" between Chubby, Freckles and their pretty school teacher. Young and old howled plenty at the performance. Spot this one on a heavy bill and let the "kids" do the rest. Running time, 18 minutes.

Politics

(Vitaphone Varieties)

Fair

TYPICAL George Jessel screen fare, with a weak yarn—and an old one at that—doing much to take the edge off of George's performance. Jessel's Jewish monologue is depended upon for the laughs, which are not forthcoming. Blame the story. Running time, 11 minutes.

Mysterious Mose

(Paramount)

Very Good

MAX FLEISCHER'S Talkartoons are unique in the cartoon field. This is an illustrated version of the "Mysterious Mose" song and it's good for a generous number of laughs. Running time, 6 minutes.

"Music Tax" Suit Launched at Denver

Denver — Clinton M. Stowell of the Washington Park is being sued for $250 for showing "True to the Navy" with the song "There's Only One Who Matters to Me." Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, says he had no license for public performance of the song.

Backfire

Chicago—Both the press agent for a Loop theatre and the theatre's owner are gentlemen known locally for spirited temperaments and unbridled tongues. Putting them together in the same office (particularly with business being what it is) produces some amazing results. Not the least interesting of these is the frequency with which the official status of the press agent is subject to change. Hardly a week passes without the p. a. either being "fired" or "resigning." Braddock, Pa.—Here's a practical plan for theatre operators to help in the present unemployment situation. It is the idea of Sam Bleyer, manager of the Capitol. # Appeal from U. S. Anti-Trust Ruling Sought By RCA

Philadelphia—Setting aside of the verdict of the U. S. District Court of Delaware that the Radio Corp. of America had violated the Clayton anti-trust law is asked in petition to the Court of Appeals filed by John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for President in 1924. The charge related to a dominating control of the radio tube business through pooling of patents with those of General Electric, Westinghouse Electric and other companies. The DeForest Radio Co. is victor so far in the action.

RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse are defendants in a Department of Justice action charging trust law violation in the deal which gives the two last named firms control of RCA in exchange for patents.

Big Sales Drive

Seventeen hundred and fifty-two exhibitors, including 32 circuits, have signed for the entire list of Sono Art-World Wide Thrill-O-Dramas, in a record sales drive just completed by Budd Rogers, sales director. He cites this as an instance of the sharp trend toward action pictures. There are ten pictures in the group. The first picture of the series, "Swanee River," now is being prepared for production in Hollywood by George Weeks. In addition, Rogers has closed with a number of circuits for showing of "The Costello Case" and "Reno."

Villain Always Licked By Code, Wunder Asserts

Des Moines—Key to continued improvement of films is in the hands of the public, Dr. Clinton Wunder, of the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences, told the Kiwanis Club and the film committee of the Federation of Women's Club here.

"Above the minimum level of the 'production code,' the public must decide what it will have," he said. "If it attends sensational pictures and stays away from those reflecting the highest standards of art and drama you cannot blame your local exhibitor for adjusting his schedule accordingly."

He attacked the belief that crime was encouraged by pictures, declaring: "There is an ironclad rule that will not let the guilty escape punishment. The actual content of pictures tends to encourage enforcement. A study of 620 features made during 1929 showed that 33.7 per cent contained no villain and no crime, 17.5 per cent killed off the villain, and in 33.8 per cent the villain was captured and left in prison. In 10.4 per cent the villain reformed and tried to recompense society for his crimes."

Chi Thermometers California Ads to E. Throckmorton

Chicago—Eddie Cantor refused to come out of his coat collar and answer questions when met at the Dearborn St. station here en route from California last week. The mercury in the Santa Fe's thermometer, appended to a post in the open, wind-swept station ramp, stood at exactly four degrees above the formidable zero mark. Eddie looked at it and shrunk further into his coat collar, turtle-wise.

"Ow," he muttered. "Who pays for these California advertisements around here?"

Eddie and his wife were members of the Sam Goldwyn party, New York bound. Goldwyn indicated he was prepared to do his part to relieve the unemployment situation.

"I'm looking for a new leading man for Gloria Swanson," he said, "and a new leading lady for Ronald Colman. We need new faces. They're the life of the industry."

Eddie had his head further inside his overcoat. He will work on a picture called "Palmy Days" when he gets to New York.

Seating Industry Asks for Square Deal in Petition

Washington — Proposed changes in the trade practice rules for the public seating industry were discussed in a brief submitted to the Federal Trade Commission by counsel for the trade practice committee of the industry, in which certain of the changes were declared to be acceptable while others were felt to be undesirable. It was suggested in the brief that the judgment of the industry as to what trade practices are unfair methods of competition and what business methods are unsound should be very carefully considered before being over-ruled, as proposed in some of the changes.

"We have no desire to violate either the letter or the spirit of any law," the commission was told. "We do desire to eliminate unfair methods of competition, price discrimination and unsound business methods from our industry.

"We believe that trade practices which are clearly unfair methods of competition and that unnecessary qualifying and confusing verbiage should be omitted.

"We believe that if a certain practice is not an unfair method of competition, does not restrain trade, does not tend to create a monopoly, or does not discriminate in price but is regarded by the industry as unsound and undesirable—that our industry should be permitted to go on record as condemning such practice.

"We believe that in case of doubt as to whether a certain trade practice is an unfair method of competition, or is an unsound business method, the industry should be given the benefit of the doubt until such time as it shall develop that the practice is against the public interest."

Walsh in New Post

Cleveland—Ralph Walsh has been appointed district manager of Warner theatres with headquarters in Cleveland. Walsh will work directly under Phil Gleichman, zone manager.

Racine Second Runs to Operate Only 3 Nights

Racine, Wis.—Subsequent theatres in Racine are planning to operate only three nights a week. It is generally conceded that competition in this city of approximately 75,000 is keen and that the town is overseated. With economic conditions in the present strained circumstances, it is keenly felt in Racine, which does not offer a greatly diversified line of industries.

All three of the large circuits in Wisconsin, Warners, Fox and RKO, operate a theatre in Racine. Warners have the Venetian, Fox the State and RKO the newly renovated Mainstreet. These are the only first-run houses in the city.

In addition there are the Uptown and Capitol, operated by the Racine Amusement Corp.; the Douglas, Crown and Granada, all independent houses. How soon the three-day-a-week policy will go into effect has not been made known, although it is said to be seriously considered by the subsequents.

Henger at Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City—George Y. Henger, formerly connected with the exploitation and publicity department for Skouras Brothers Warner theatres in St. Louis, has taken over duties as director of publicity for Warner Mid-West theatres, Leto J. Todd Ferguson, assistant to Niemeyer, has handled the department since the departure of the first director and the arrival of the second.

Loyola Ban on Night Football Pleases Exhibs

Chicago—The action of Loyola University of Chicago in reducing football to an intra-mural, rather than an intercollegiate sport, has won the approval of local showmen, if no other. During the past season Loyola had opened a new stadium on the north side of the city and played its well-attended games at night under a flood of arc lights. Neighborhood theatres, and even Loop houses, felt the competition and now welcome its ending as they would the death of any other competitive enterprise.

This more or less innocent competition with the theatre business was even offered by Rev. Robert M. Kelly, president of Loyola, as one of the major reasons for the abolition of the sport as a public spectacle. Football is in the "amusement stage" now, he said, due to the fact that it was getting away from the schools and being centered on the public.

"In other words," Rev. Kelly explained, "colleges and universities are competing with entertainment agencies for the patronage of the public."

The big intersectional football games which attract thousands to the city and are played in the daytime, are regarded as a boon to local theatre business. Loyola's games, however, do not fall into this category and, played at night, are strictly competition for theatres.

Chicago—Warners put a personal guarantee on Pathe's "Big Money" when the picture played the Avalon, de luxe South Side Warner house, and a user of prominent advertising space in local dailies.

Prominently displayed in the theatre's ad space was a box which read in bold-face type: "We stake our reputation as judges of good entertainment on this picture. We are proud to GUARANTEE 'Big Money' as the most delightful and unusual comedy drama of the year. (Signed) Warner Bros."

Only hitch was that B. & K. was advertising Warners' own picture, "The Life of the Party," at a downtown theatre as the "most delightful and unusual comedy of the year" at the same time the Warner guarantee appeared on the Pathe picture.

U. A. Chi Office Cleared of 'High Pressure' Charge

Chicago — Explanations indicating that the United Artists exchange is not guilty of saddling the defunct Punch & Judy theatre with a fatal guarantee for its initial offering, "Abraham Lincoln," were made here this week. Local exhibitors have made the charge and in so doing imply that high pressure sales methods were responsible for closing the "Lincoln" deal, and that the guarantee specified by the exchange imposed an obligation that was at once the death blow of the swanky Machat venture

It has been authoritatively disclosed—and verified—that the United Artists exchange here not only used no "high pressure" methods in connection with the deal, but actually attempted to discourage the "Lincoln" booking. It is not claimed that benevolence prompted the exchange's arguments against the bookings. It was feared that the Punch & Judy engagement might prove disastrous to the picture's subsequent business at the United Artists theatre.

The Punch & Judy's owner, however, refused to be dissuaded from taking the picture and readily agreed to the stipulated guarantee. His belief in and enthusiasm for his new venture in "arty" theatres was not to be shaken even by a $25,000 guarantee. After opening the theatre, the picture lasted six weeks and grossed approximately $40,000. Six weeks later the house closed. The revival of old, distinguished productions wasn't enough apparently to draw them to the house's out-of-the-way location.

George F. Sivore & Co., rental agents, are now trying to find a tenant for the house, with a scarcity of prospects in sight.

Paris Likes U. S. Talkers

Chicago—Charles Boyer, husky French actor, and Maurice Ernou, former commander of a French submarine chaser, paused here en route to Hollywood this week and paid their respects to American moviedom.

"American talkies are highly rated in Paris," said Boyer, who will make a French version of "The Big House" for M-G-M. "You have superior equipment and a head start on us. Your foreign market problems, I believe, are being well met by the making of foreign versions in Hollywood."

M. Ernou will be married to Jeanne Helbling, of "The Big Parade" cast, in Hollywood.

"Drop In" Trade Is Imperiled By Chicago Subway

Chicago—Theatre interests here, it is believed, will oppose plans which have been submitted for a downtown Chicago subway system inasmuch as they provide for a pedestrian underground thoroughfare in addition to a transportation system. Stores and shops will be permitted to open on to the underground avenue, and, it is believed, the enormous diversion of pedestrian traffic from the present street levels, on which fully half of the Loop's theatres are located, will have a disastrous effect on future theatre business here. This effect will be particularly emphasized in inclement weather when State Street theatres at present reach their highest peaks of "drop in" business.

The present subway plans call for transportation and commercial underground thoroughfares on both State and Madison streets. Along these thoroughfares, within the Loop, are located Publix-Balaban & Katz' Chicago, Roosevelt and McVickers theatres; the RKO State-Lake; Warner's Orpheum, and C. E. Beck's Castle theatre. There are only five additional major picture houses within the Loop.

Only Four Illinois Houses Shut in Month

Chicago—Four Illinois theatres went dark during November, the fewest closings of any month of the current year, according to the current report of the Chicago Film Board of Trade. One of the four closings, the Orpheum at Georgetown, Ill., was caused by fire, and will be reopened after repairs. The other closings were: Golden, at Golden, Ill.; Opera House, at Seaton, and the Illinois, at Ottawa.

The following changes in ownership occurred during the month: The Admiral, to the Madrid Theatre Corp.; Blaine, to Lewis S. Glans; Logan Square, to Henry Lipsie & Co.; Parkside, to the B. G. L. Amusement Corp.; Vogue (formerly Chateau) to Essaness Theatres; Woods, to Jones, Linick & Schaefer; Strand, Brookfield, Ill., to Berwyn Auditorium Corp.; Central, Fairbury, Ill., to Perceny & Frantz; Family, Gary, Ind., to Gary Family Theatre, Inc.; Lyric, Genoa, Ill., to Adkins, Hill & Sowers; Princess, Le Roy, Ill., to R. A. Isaacs, and the Colonial, Oglesby, Ill., to E. E. Alger.

Chicago—Opening of branch offices of the Federal Theatrical Accounting Service in New York, Albany, Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh is announced by Harry Ross, president. Ross's organization also has offices in operation at Milwaukee, Detroit and Indianapolis, in addition to the headquarters here. More than 1,000 checkers are now engaged by Federal to work on percentage checking in these cities. In addition, a corps of supervising inspectors is employed to verify the work of the checkers.

Pink Routs Red

Chicago—"Today," the independent production which has been making swell dough at the Woods, is the perfect example that a pink ticket can offset any sort of review published about a picture here. But how they went for it (the ones who pay).

Chicago—O. F. Spahr, president of Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Co., was host to the Chicago chapter, S. M. P. E., at its regular monthly meeting here last week. The program included a lecture by V. A. Schoenberg, Enterprise sound engineer, and a screening of "Whoopee," offered by the United Artists' exchange. The meeting was held at the Enterprise laboratories.

The meetings of the Chicago chapter now alternate from month to month between semi-social dinner sessions and technical and business meetings.

'Videballeton' Is New Treat for Film Audiences

Chicago—A combination of synchronized motion pictures and "flesh," each contributing to the entertaining and interpretative values of the other, will provide the perfect theatre programs of the future, in the opinion of Andreas Pavley, of the Pavley-Oukrainsky ballet, following a tryout of his original presentation idea at the Eighth Street Theatre here.

Pavley has styled his combination picture and flesh acts as the "videballeton." It was presented here on a stage outfitted with what resembled a standard motion picture screen, with the difference being a central arched opening in the screen, within which the living performers appeared. On both sides of the screen opening motion pictures were projected, providing not only a colorful stage setting, but action which was synchronized with and contributed to the living tableau in the center of the stage. The picture's synchronization served also as the synchronizing agency which made the flesh action a unit with the action of the picture.

The innovation proved particularly adaptable to the Pavley entertainment; aiding materially in a novel presentation of interpretative dancing. It was well received by audiences. Critics, though not enthusiastic, were interested. They pronounced it, for the most part, "unusually interesting" and possessing "distinct possibilities."

In its present form it would undoubtedly prove popular in presentation houses, either as a single "act," or with a combination of acts. Theatre men here agree it might profitably replace entire stage shows in the de luxe combination houses.

Wells Promoted

Chicago—A district sales meeting of National Screen Service brought together about 25 of the company's representatives at the Chicago office last week. The appointment of "Gilly" Wells, widely known National Screen salesman, to the post of divisional sales manager for Iowa and adjacent territory, was made known at the meeting. Wells' headquarters will remain at Des Moines, his former post. Pat Garyn, general sales manager, presided at the meeting, assisted by Hal Young, local manager for National Screen.

Swanky $75,000 Chi House Folds After Two Months

Chicago—After two months, the $75,000 Punch & Judy, swanky house, has folded, due to indebtedness and unavailability of product. Operators expecting pay checks were disappointed, it is said.

Saunders Joins Ross

Chicago—Claude Saunders, former Paramount exploitation chief, and a former district supervisor of RKO theatres in the Northwest, has been named first assistant to Harry Ross, and will have an important part in the future expansion and development of Ross's Federal Theatrical Accounting Service.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

Can We Learn?

OUT of some old scrap-book we find a passage which says: "A slip of the foot can soon be recovered, but a slip of the tongue may never be gotten over."

It's a sad, but nevertheless true fact that many of us act as if we know it all, regardless of what the subject may be, or the standing, experience, and knowledge of the man who approaches us. Yet that man may simply be striving to do his duty with faithfulness to his chief.

John Wanamaker, in one of his many writings said, "some milk gets sour over-night, but some men's natures sour in a minute over small suggestions made in the interest of the business."

Does that strike home? Be honest with yourself. Are you that type? Do you lend a willing ear to constructive suggestions or do you immediately assume that the giver is trying to tell you your business?

We have pounded home the angle time and again; and the whole structure of the Round Table Club is based upon the idea that we can all learn something from each other.

Here we are, an organization of some three thousand members, banded together on the theory that to help each other we are helping ourselves. And if that theory was all wrong the organization would have perished by the wayside long ago instead of constantly growing.

The head of the Century Circuit in New York, and a famous merchant, both had the same idea. One says, "Go slow, take it easy and don't rush." While the other: "Think twice before speaking, or take a glass of water and head off hasty speech."

These men are typical of successful operators in their respective fields. We would do well to profit by their teachings.

We, in the theatre game, taking into consideration, mergers, consolidations, chains, etc., had to change many of our viewpoints. Hundreds of showmen, accustomed to running their own theatres must now listen to the advice and counsel from numerous superiors and the home office.

Under this new system of theatre operation we soon learn that it pays to listen to what we are told with the idea that those who are doing the talking know what they are talking about. Don't take it for granted that you know it all. If it's from your direct superior, try to keep in mind that he too has a job to fulfil, he too is held accountable for the conduct of the houses under his supervision.

Listen and try to profit by advice because you don't know it all—yet.

"Chick."

Who Said "Depression"?

This picture, taken prior to the closing day of Amos 'n' Andy's first cinema effusion, "Check And Double Check," at the Golden State Theatre in Riverside, California, seems to bear pretty strong evidence of the fact that Riverside, at least, is paying no attention to the prevalent hullabaloo and bemoanings about business depression in both the amusement and commercial worlds. The lines of people, four abreast, extend, as best we can make out, for at least an entire city block. Maybe we need more "Amos 'n' Andys" in the country. Who knows?

Blackface Gag On Pepsodent Pluggers Helped O. Brownlee

Contests will generally click in any town. It all depends upon the type of contest used. Will it fit in with the town's idea of what a contest should be? Will it help business? These and questions of like nature are asked of himself by every showman when he wants to put a contest across. The "blackface contest" staged by Ollie Brownlee of the Joie Theatre in Fort Smith, Ark., must have passed muster on all these questions, as the Publix showman used the stunt, and also included a parade.

Tie-ups with two music stores and a drug store enabled Brownlee to put on the Amos 'n' Andy make-up contest for all grade school children, with a Fresh Aid Taxi contest for all public schools, including the Senior and Junior High Schools.

The prizes to the winners of the make-up contest were: To the two grade school boys made up to the nearest perfect likeness of Amos 'n' Andy—two portable victrolas; to the grade school girl made up to the nearest perfect likeness of Madame Queen a beauty set was presented. The school entering the nearest approach to the Amos 'n' Andy open air taxicab was given a Victor radio.

The two music stores furnished the two portable victrolas and the radio. The drug store donated the make-up material for the kids to use for the make-up contest. The only co-operation sought for was getting the contests presented to the pupils —and this was accomplished through the school board and the High School and Grade School executives.

The kids went for the contests with plenty of enthusiasm. They were assured of not only being probable winners of one of the prizes offered but also guests of the theatre to see the preview before the parade. With the sanction of the school board, the individual school executives and teachers went for it with as much enthusiasm as the kids themselves. The bands of both Junior and Senior High Schools were secured to take part in the parade.

The interest shown by the school children and the attention given to publicizing the contest in the schools by the school heads is evidenced by the fact that more than 1,000 kids turned out to take part in the parade.

The preview of the picture was given to the kids in make-up so as to encourage them to make up and also get them all together at one spot to better organize the starting of the parade. The word-of-mouth comment taken home and passed on by these children also made the opening of the regular showing a tremendously big attraction.

The parade started immediately after the preview screening —about 11:30 Saturday morning, and proceeded up and down the main street, headed by the High School bands, closely followed by the fresh air taxis and the kids in make-up carrying banners on the picture.

The parade was advertised by 60-inch ads in all local papers paid for by the music stores, and also ample news articles gratis. It was witnessed by thousands. It was a picnic for the kids and completely sold the public on seeing the picture.

The winners, who were picked by competent judges, had their pictures published in the Sunday issue with a news story heralding the whole stunt as one of the biggest advertising stunts ever pulled in Fort Smith.

The campaign went over very well, the theatre receiving reams of publicity, to say nothing of the good-will garnered. As it is Brownlee's custom to turn out work of this sort week after week, we think that we will have more of it to pass along in the near future. Are we right, Ollie?

This Type of Letter Made a Hit with All Persons Receiving It

Still displaying showmanship out on the Pacific Coast, Richard L. Moss is now selling shows at the Fox Pasadena Theatre in Pasadena, Cal.

Those regular followers of the Club pages will all remember Dick as a very active showman, his work having appeared here on numerous occasions. And we think that it has always contained an item or two of interest to his fellow showmen and members of the Round Table Club. He was formerly located at the Regent and the Florence Theatres, so should you be wondering if this is the same Dick Moss, we'll say, yes.

Though his house is located on the main street, he is a bit removed from the downtown section of the city, therefore, it is rather hard work to sell shows. As a matter of fact, it was said that the house looked like a cluck when construction work was first started on its present location. But Moss is proving otherwise. Judging from the work he is turning out, the house should be going along merrily. Just to give you a line on what he did recently, and show you the value of the stunt, we want to tell you about the gag he pulled on "Laughter."

A special letter was made up, imprinted on the theatre stationery. The letter carried but one paragraph, in which was stated: "Enclosed are passes for 'Laughter.' The only favor we ask in return is that you tell two or more of your friends that 'Laughter,' the new Paramount sensation is at the Fox Pasadena Theatre for one week starting Friday, (Date)." It was signed by Moss. The letter created a lot of word-of-mouth comment and resulted in the theatre obtaining some good publicity.

Should you be able to work a stunt like the above in your town, we think that it will prove to be a valuable one. The cost of the gag is trivial, and you might even arrange to make up a regular form, in which you can include the title of the picture, sending the letters out to various people, on each new change of show. We understand that Dick is going to pass along some more stunts very soon. Well, Dick, we're looking forward to seeing them so that we can let the rest of the Club know what you are doing. Oke?

Magazzu Turns Out Showmanship at the Grand in Hazelton

Out in Hazelton, Pa., showmanship has long thrived. We have presented a number of the activities indulged in by the live-wire showmen operating in that town, and we are sure that in many instances slants of value were to be noted in the work on display. We would like you to meet the latest Hazelton showman to hook up with the Managers' Round Table Club organization—P. A. Magazzu, manager of the Grand Theatre.

Mr. Magazzu has been in the show game for quite some time, so he is well versed in the racket and thoroughly qualified for the job he now holds. He is very active in the town, too, having helped the local merchants in many ways. One of his recent stunts, engineered through a tie-up with a local paper, was that of offering free passes to the best letters submitted to the editor of the paper on what was considered the best news in the paper. This gag was used as a plug for "Good News." It went over especially well.

With Mr. Magazzu constantly on the go and displaying so active a brand of showmanship, we think that the Club has acquired another member who will prove active. Let's hear some more about your work, "P. A.," so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club.

Service Staff at Olympia Thea. Has Wide-Awake M'bers

Harmony among the employees of a theatre is an indispensable asset to any showman. With each and every employee performing his own function, and at the same time working in unison with the person above or below him, the showman is assured that things will run smoothly. Thus he is permitted to go out and devote his entire attention to the selling of his shows, if it so be that the occasion warrants it.

At the Washington St. Olympia Theatre in Boston, Mass., they have an excellent organization among the employees. It is called the Olympia Service Club, and numbers the service staff, cashiers, etc., among its membership. All is harmony at this house, and it is a certainty that George Laby, manager of the theatre, does not have any petty grievances brought to him for settlement. The boys have their own arbitration board, all disputes being settled among them. They have a special Club room, donated by, and in, the theatre, in which all business is transacted, special parties such as midnight suppers, are given, and entertainment in the form of boxing and fencing offered.

An excellent publication, called the Olympia Service News, is turned out by, and for, the Club members. H. L. Shonting is editor-in-chief, with R. G. Morely as associate. D. Martin is business manager, and R. E. Randall and A. De Young handle the advertising and circulation departments, respectively. Perusing the magazine closely, we notice that the boys think a lot of Laby, a number of mentions being made of his fine manner of treating the boys. In this edition, his picture appears on the front page. It is also interesting to note that the magazine is dedicated to Edward Zorn, the district manager, of whom a notice, signed by the staff, says:

"It is with greatest pleasure that the dedication of this magazine is in honor of a man who is esteemed a sincere and loyal leader. One who deserves the utmost praise in his energetic efforts for Publix ideals. One who has shown real fellowship and co-operation. We speak of none other than Mr. Edward Zorn, our district manager—wishing him greater success in the future."

Not bad, is it? We'd like to hear more about Mr. Zorn and his work.

This edition of the Olympia Service News contained eight pages printed on good coated stock. If you would like a copy of the publication, why not send a note to Mr. Laby requesting it? We are sure that he would be glad to comply. Look it over. Perhaps you can make use of some of its slants.

Monster Radio Set Plugged Comedians For H. Bamberger

A gigantic enlargement of a Westinghouse radio receiving set, extending the full height of the lobby of the Kentucky Theatre, Lexington, Ky., made a splendid display for the showing of "Check and Double Check."

Herman Bamberger, manager of the Kentucky, arranged for the "dummy" cabinet through the local dealers of Westinghouse radio, using it in connection with cut-out "heads" of Amos 'n' Andy.

In addition to immediately identifying radio with Amos 'n' Andy, the device was also used to attract attention to the theatre. A sign was placed on the display telling everyone that the Pepsodent Hour would be received on this giant set each evening.

In between broadcasts, a record reproducing device played Duke Ellington orchestral selections. A real radio unit was placed in back of the dummy front, and this enabled the theatre to receive Amos and Andy broadcasts, as well as reproduce the records.

The residents of the town and patrons of the theatre all paid plenty of attention to the display, so much so that the theatre found business to be excellent during the run of the film. We are glad to note that Bamberger is still hitting the showman high spots, and we would like to hear from him again. What do you say, Herman?

A truckload of toys was collected at the special morning show that Ed. Hiehle, manager of the Midland Theatre, in Newark, Ohio, ran recently. The purpose of Hiehle's show was to secure toys—broken or whole—for distribution to needy kids at Christmas time, along with the various foodstuffs and clothings that the city yearly distributes. Upon presentation of a toy, a kid was entitled to free admission to the show. The employees of the house contributed their services. The newspaper hit the line with all the force of its columns. The affair was a big success.

A SWELL GROUP-AD!

Showmen who are responsible for a group of theatres located in any one town or city might be interested in this group ad for the RKO houses in Cincinnati, Ohio.

We have already passed on one or two examples of group advertising from this circuit houses in Cincinnati, and we believe they are the work of Danzinger, the publicity director for the RKO group.

We suggest that you study the make-up of this ad, and keep in mind that it is a two-column by 14-inch affair, with the black background setting off very nicely, each one of the individual announcement. A close study will reveal the variety of sales appeal which have been injected into them.

Pay particular attention to the text, and general make-up of the individual ads in this group, as they can all be applied to advertising on attractions other than the ones referred to in this ad, and for that reason should become valuable to those who are constantly seeking new plans or novel texts for their advertising make-up.

We are always delighted to pass along work of this kind and any of our other members or readers who are at all interested in passing along something new in the way of newspaper advertising are cordially invited to clip and send us some of their ads. They will receive our immediate attention and those that we feel so warrant treatment, will be played up aside from the other group ads which appear from time to time on the Club pages.

We are grateful to the RKO continued co-operation and we are always glad to throw space open on the Club pages to broadcast their numerous showmanlike activities.

Levinson Does Good Work at State in Ozone Park, L. I.

When he played "The Dawn Patrol" at the State Theatre in Ozone Park, Long Island, N. Y., M. J. Levinson, manager of the house turned out an excellent campaign that resulted in box-office receipts above the average.

Though a bit handicapped by local conditions, Levinson nevertheless, sets out to put every picture across in some manner. At times it happens that just a ballyhoo will sell the picture. At other times he finds that heralds put the show across for him. There is nothing out of the ordinary in that sort of business-getting. It seems that it happens all over the country. An instance of the way the public flocks to see shows, when word-of-mouth comment starts to spread can be seen in a couple of playdates at the State not so long ago. The picture on the opening day did just a fair business. On the second day, the house was packed. The third day, they had to hold them out. What did it? It's rather hard to say. It might have been Levinson's excellent campaign or it might have been the word-of-mouth comment. Then again it might possibly have been the heralds.

On "The Dawn Patrol," Levinson found that his best bets were a truck ballyhoo and an atmospheric front. The truck ballyhoo was driven about the theatre neighborhood and the surrounding vicinity, attracting attention wherever it went. The atmospheric front was well made up. The copy on the art work, and the background, was done in international tone. Flags decorated the marquee, and bunting was placed about the lobby. A special banner was placed on the marquee to plug the picture.

These few activities are but a small part of the work Levinson turns out at the State, but as they are all we have on hand at this writing, we are passing them along. We hope that "M. J." will keep us posted on his future work, as we believe it will contain some items of interest. Right, "M. J."?

Excellent Campaign Turned Out by Hance For Special Week

When he learned that he was to do his part and promote Paramount-Publix Prosperity Week in his town, Monte Hance, manager of the Saenger Theatre in Biloxi, Miss., stepped out and turned in a splendid campaign.

The various merchants, newspapers and banks all helped in making the week one of the most prosperous in the history of the city. A nice tie-up with one of the banks was affected whereby Buddy Rogers presented a one-dollar opening account to all girl babies born during the week, and Nancy Carroll kicked in in the same manner for the boy babies. The newspapers played this stunt up quite a bit even recording the letters that were presumed to have come from these Paramount screen stars. The bank took care of all the deposits of which there were five, and expense of the stunt.

The dollar circulation stunt was also put into effect. A dollar bill to which was attached a paper, was signed by every person getting hold of this particular bill. Whoever had it at certain hours of the day was to phone in to the newspaper office just so a record of its travels could be traced. This stunt meant daily write-ups in the papers which further helped to carry out the Prosperity idea.

A contest was also worked with the Classified Ad page of the paper Using the 14 letters in Prosperity Week, these were scattered through the classified columns; four one day four another day, and three and three. To the first 15 persons submitting these hidden letters, arranged in proper sequence, in the most unique form, one guest ticket was awarded to see the current picture. Merchants further co-operated by making some reference to Prosperity Week in their regular ads and the newspaper contributed many excellent write-ups on the same subject.

Publicity and good-will of considerable value were secured through Hance's activities on this special week, and these most assuredly, will stand him in good stead throughout the coming season. It is work of this type that helps keep theatres out of the red and sailing over the blue week after week. But since Monte turns out plenty of activity every week, we won't say any more right now.

Reward Heralds Were A Big Feature Of R. Lamb's Campaign

When it comes to displaying showmanship that will bring them up to the theatre box-office in droves, you can depend on J. E. Watson, manager of the Broad Theatre in Columbus, Ohio. His recent work on "Good News" bears out our contention that Watson is a live-wire.

In addition to his usual routine advertising, such as advance trailer, lobby display, etc., a large electric sign carrying the title of the picture was installed on the marquee. The location of the Broad Theatre is such that the sign was plainly visible from a large portion of the business section of the city.

A contest was run in the Columbus Citizen, whereby readers were invited to give their interpretations of "Good News," selected from the columns of the paper. Best letters were awarded theatre tickets. A tie-up was effected with the leading hat stores of the city. The stores ran notices in their ads to the effect that anyone bringing a hat to the theatre, and turning it in as a ticket would be given free admission to the house. The theatre profited on this angle, securing newspaper advertising free of charge. In addition to the notice in the ads, each of the stores carried copy, to the same effect, in their windows. Stills were also used. All of the music stores were tied-up.

The picture went over very well, holding up strongly during its run. Keep up the good work, "J. E.," and let's have some more of it.

Ballyhoo and Paper Bag Stunt Helped Gordon Sell Show

One of the stunts that Leonard Gordon, manager of the Palace Theatre in Newport News, Va., used recently on his campaign for "All Quiet On the Western Front," was the imprinting of a quantity of paper bags with an advertising mat on the film. The bags were distributed to various dealers, who used them on all purchases made at their establishments.

The paper bag imprinting stunt is one that has appeared on the Round Table pages many times, and we are pleased to state that it was found to be effective in nearly every instance used. We do not think that much money was involved in the tie-up that Gordon made and we are sure that the amount expended more than paid for itself. Are we right, Leonard?

Along with this story, we are showing a picture of the novel street ballyhoo that plugged the picture. A compoboard tank, lettered with the title of the picture and the theatre, and painted a dull gray color, was constructed and mounted on a Ford car. The improvised tank was driven about the city, the driver sounding the horn blatantly whenever a congested section was reached. A great deal of interest was shown in this ballyhoo, and it undoubtedly did much towards putting the film over at the Palace.

We are glad to note that Leonard is stepping out and doing his part along the show front of Newport News. Let's hear from you again, Leonard, and tell the rest of the showmen in your town that we'd like to hear from them, too.

Announce that you will have a local celebrity—preferably the Mayor—auction off the gifts to the highest bidder. The proceeds of the auction to be donated to a worthy charity for the distribution of food and clothing to needy families on Christmas Day. The theatre can offer a reduced rate admission price, and also turn the proceeds over to the charity. The employees of the house should be glad to donate their services. The plan is a worthy one. Act on it!

Checks and Double Checks Stencilled by Cohen on Streets

One of the many excellent stunts used by Manager Ben M. Cohen in putting over Amos 'n' Andy in "Check and Double Check" at the Publix-Capitol Theatre, Hazelton, Pa., was the use of a Fresh Air Taxi such as appears in the picture and is seen all through it.

The dilapidated taxi was used three days in advance and during playdates. Special ads appearing in the newspapers as well as being lettered on the sides of the taxi invited the public to hail the Fresh Air Taxi for a free ride to the theatre. Most everybody in town was anxious to see the popular radio entertainers and many of them took advantage of the Fresh Air Taxi to get one of the thrills of life. This stunt clicked so well in the estimation of newspaper reporters that they brought along their staff photographers and made their respective stories more vivid by picturing the Fresh Air Taxi itself.

Using an advance stunt, a bed was put in the lobby with a dummy in the bed as though sleeping. A card on the bed stated that this person was waiting to be one of the first ones to see Amos 'n' Andy in their first talking picture.

With the Mayor's sanction, the sidewalks were chalked with single and double checks with the populace quick to get the significance of "Check and Double Check." This unique stunt created more than the usual gossip, which in turn helped to remind persons about the picture. Upon receiving notification that the picture was to be held over, Cohen secured an excellent co-operative page with the merchants and also lettered the fact on the Fresh Air Taxi. And boy! when they hold 'em over, it means something. Or, in the Amos 'n' Andy jargon, "ain't Dat Sump'n."

Is Cohen always active? Yes, sir! Take the recent Prosperity Week Campaign in which he plugged both the week and the film, "Monte Carlo."

Cohen induced the mayor to issue a special proclamation which was carried by the newspaper, then he had this reprinted and it was distributed by the Chamber of Commerce. Cohen had a Prosperity Dollar Bill in circulation for the week for which merchants offered $1.50 in trade; ran an essay contest in the high school on "Prosperity"; tied up with leading milk company to start a bank account for each baby born during Prosperity Week and tied up a treasure chest stunt with the merchants, the chest being on display in the theatre lobby. On top of all this, he lined up a half dozen merchants for a fashion show at the theatre, with the result that business for the one day of the show ran $150 above normal.

Limerick Secured a Valuable Tie-Up as Part of Campaign

Even the trolley companies are coming to the fore and taking advantage of those marvelous faculties possessed by showmen throughout the country which are employed for the betterment of business, whether the country be enjoying "Business depression" or "prosperity." The latest gag pulled by George Limerick, assistant manager of the Coleman Theatre in Miami, Okla., which, though used as a plug on "Dixiana," seems to us to savor of an ulterior motive that contains all the appearance of a clever idea to combat Old Man Bumbiz. Anyway, here's the stunt.

When he learned the playdates of "Dixiana," Limerick arranged a tie-up with the North East Oklahoma Railroad, the company agreeing to furnish free transportation to all persons going to the theatre to see "Dixiana." The railroad furnished a special car, which, for five days prior to the showing, was run over the entire route. The car was especially bannered and plugged the excursion trip and the film. In addition to this, the company also placed special ads in the newspaper telling of the free tickets. Limerick reciprocated by running a notice in the regular theatre ad. The conductors on the trolleys gave out special tickets entitling the holders to the free trip. The stunt caused plenty of talk all about the town, and resulted in many new faces being seen at the theatre, persons who never before had entered the house. The railway company was more than pleased with the publicity it received; the theatre, ditto.

As we think that it is an excellent institutional plug, we are showing a couple of the novel ads that the trolley company uses in the daily papers. Should you have secured the co-operation of your trolley company in the past, or contemplate gaining it in the future, it might be a good idea for you to show the ads to the local traction head. They are really very novel and there is no doubt but that they are effective. And remember, the idea may also be used by your theatre to carry special messages. The "Trolley Talk" can be changed to Blank Theatre Talk and the message put across. A cut of the front of your house will brighten the ad and provide a more effective plug. What do you think? Oke, George. Keep up the good work.

Natalie Tolman Has Her Say On Kid Biz. Building Problem

"Supervisor of Juvenile Activities." Whoo-eee! What a title! We certainly didn't have them like that in the days when we used to work around a theatre. But today—ah! that's different. The title heading of this paragraph is the one conferred upon Natalie Tolman, the "Big Sister" in charge of Paul W. Kunze's Kiddie Klub at the State Theatre in Stoughton, Mass.

Under Miss Tolman's guidance, the Kiddie Klub has grown to gigantic proportions. She has put plenty of work into it. It should. Let's give you a line on what she does to keep the kids happy, and at the same time boost business for the State Theatre. In showman language—boy, she sure picked this up quick—she tells us about her work on Children's Book week, saying:

"Plans for our celebration of Children's Book Week by our State Theatre Kiddies' Klub, Nov. 16 to 22, had been running through my mind for quite some time. Noticing your box-comment on the approach of this week and your advice for its observance caused me to construct a complete workable outline of activities which I feel may be of some assistance to managers planning to recognize National Book Week. Incidentally, next year, posters and other helpful Book Week material may be obtained from National Association of Book Publishers, 347 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

"Being a nation-wide activity with the Parent-Teachers' Association in back of it, makes it a very easy opportunity for beneficial tie-ups and likewise creates tremendous good-will. It seems to be the consensus of opinion, especially of the Parent-Teachers' Association, that "movies" are more or less an injury to children rather than an educational feature. Here is the chance to break down this barrier to some extent.

"The first step was to interview the superintendent of schools and find out what the schools planned to do to observe this week. If this interview did nothing else, it put the theatre in right with the super. To have the schools in back of the theatre is a valuable asset—children are great boosters. We have found with our Kiddies' Klub here that the week-end business has increased in adult admissions practically double that of last year, as a direct result.

"Several contests were arranged with the superintendent's permission. For the Junior High pupils we had a poster contest for Book Week—three prizes awarded at the theatre Saturday afternoon of that week and donated by the theatre. Local drawing teacher and several art students to judge posters and the best work displayed during the week in the lobby.

"For lower grades—a word contest—object being to make as many words as possible from the words "Children's Book Week." Each room teacher took charge of this contest and prizes, donated by local book store, were presented in each room on Friday of the week. Thus giving myself as theatre representative an opportunity to make personal visit to each room to talk to the children. This works out as a spelling feature with the spirit of rivalry. Likewise, being done in the homes, gets the parents interested due to the fact that adults get a "kick" out of this type of contest. This contest itself does not require any special talent and goes over big.

"It can also be carried into the High School English Department, by an Essay Contest on "Books" sponsored by the Woman's Club with rewards donated by them.

"Every afternoon during the week story hours were conducted on the mezzanine floor following the matinee. In every community there can be found some one with the ability to tell stories; either an elocution teacher or a school teacher. This is a tremendous good-will proposition. Due to many houses running a continued policy, it is possible to work out a story hour at Library with the theatre sponsoring story teller. This tie-up is a great newspaper publicity bet. Every child attending the story hour was given a souvenir book-mark with the compliments of our Kiddies' Klub.

"The local book store gladly put a New Book Display in lobby and also co-operated to the extent of supplying books for the Story Hour and advertising the same, in their window display for that week.

"Our Kiddies' Klub arranged a tie-up with the library. The Klub furnished book marks to be put in all the outgoing children's books—one week in advance and during the week. This book mark was a souvenir of the Kiddie Klub and mentioned the daily Story Hours to be held at theatre during that week.

"For our Saturday afternoon meeting coming in Children's Book Week we worked on a little playlet entitled 'When the Books Speak for Themselves.' It was a very simple little thing requiring very little effort to put on, but containing a marvelous lesson.

"For this same meeting we had booked a special educational short subject on 'Printing' showing the evolution of printing and how books are prepared for the public. In this way it was possible to get children into the theatre whose folks are not active picture-goers.

"We observed the Book Week last year in less elaborate a manner due to the fact that the Kiddie Klub was not active at that time. We did, however, find much co-operation from the schools, newspapers, and library, and, as the observance can be made at negligible cost to the theatre the effort is really worth while. This is a dignified proposition and establishes a contact with an element which can not be reached by ordinary theatrical promotions.

"Sincerely hope that this outline can be of some use to you, and that it will be found helpful to the rest of the Round Table Club's showmen.

"Keep smiling with

"Natalie Tolman."

Oke, Miss Tolman. And let's hear some more from you.

Three Girls Formed Bridal Party As A Plug For Picture

Three girls featured in a recent street ballyhoo used by A. P. Barry, manager of the Polk Theatre in Lakeland, Fla., to sell the attraction current at the house.

One of the girls was dressed as a bride and the other two as bridesmaids. The girls rode around town in an open touring car—with a chauffeur to pilot them. Banners on the car with copy pertaining to the picture, theatre and playdates and the three girls gave the picture an excellent publicity break.

Barry also had a unique-looking lobby display that attracted plenty of attention. This display consisted of a large pile of old shoes placed in a corner of the lobby with a sprinkling of rice on and around the shoes. On top of these shoes was an art card reading, "Waiting for Joan Crawford in OUR BLUSHING BRIDES." During run of picture, the rice was sprinkled in front of theatre on the outer part of sidewalk.

The stunts went over to great results, the theatre receiving a lot of publicity and additional business as a result. We'd like to hear some more concerning Mr. Barry's work, and we hope that he will pass it along to us. And include your photo and some dope on yourself, also, "A. P."

McKoy - Falkenburg Are Active Miami, Fla., Combination

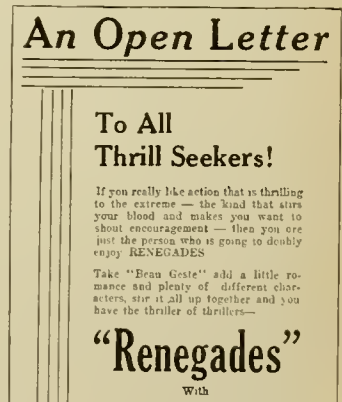
And still another method of securing free publicity in the newspapers comes to light. The stunt was executed by James McKoy and Francis Falkenburg, manager and assistant manager, respectively, of the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla., down where some fine work is displayed.



When "Good News" first broke upon the theatre horizon, a tie-up was effected, by the producers, with a nationally known manufacturer of phonograph records. The company distributed special stills, showing the stars of the picture bearing a record apiece plugging the picture. Falkenburg secured one of these pictures, had his artist blank out the record plug, and, in white, stencil in "The Olympic Theatre (on one record), through the courtesy—of the Herald—offers Miamians—'Good News'." The still was then taken to the Miami Herald and used as an advertising plug on the amusement page.

This is but one of the many examples, that we have come across, where a showman has used his head to good advantage. Securing publicity in this manner is a stunt that would do credit to any showman's ability. Keep it up, Francis.

Open Letter Ad Was Used by Forrester To Help Sell Show

Ever since the open letter idea proved to be a winner in the amusement field, showmen have used it often. It has been utilized to plug pictures, to plug service staffs, to plug sound, to plug the theatre, and almost anything of interest to show patrons. It is generally conceded that in the open letter may be found one of the most potent mediums of a showman's Campaign and one that is especially studied.

When "Renegades" played the World Theatre in Kearney, Neb., recently, Eddie Forrester, live-wire manager of the house, whose exploits have appeared on our pages before, decided to adopt the open-letter slant and use it in his newspaper advertising. He followed through with his resolution and the result was the ad which we are showing. We understand that the ad created somewhat of a sensation when it first appeared in the local paper and aroused the interest of every amusement seeker reading the pages devoted to theatredom. Young and old perused every line. As the film was booked in for Friday and Saturday, it meant that the kids would be there in droves on the Saturday matinee show. And they were. If you'll study the copy closely, you will see that it is especially fashioned along the lines that the head, "To All Thrill Seekers," implies.

An Open Letter

To All Thrill Seekers!

But don't forget, the last showings tonight of Bebe Daniels in DIXIANA, with Wheeler and Woolsey

The WORLD Theatre

FRIDAY — SATURDAY

An ad of this sort, simply made up and carrying copy that sells, will always bring in additional business to the box-office. But again, as we have done before, we want to point out that it is well not to use the open-letter stunt too much, as persons becoming used to seeing it will attach no importance to your message. It is best used when you have a picture or a feature that you are certain will please the public. And being located in the town, you should know the public. Oke?

William Brown Had Them Talking About "Animal Crackers"

One of the big reasons why "Animal Crackers" scampered over to the winning side of the ledger when the Mark Brothers' film played the Marboro Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., was the corking tie-ups arranged by William Brown, manager of the house.

Upon receipt of his booking, Brown got in touch immediately with the National Biscuit Company, who agreed to furnish 7,500 animal crackers, which were distributed in paraffine bags carrying the theatre imprint and a plug for the company. They also put special window displays in several of the neighborhood stores. In addition to this—and deciding to make a great job of it—they sent an expert window trimmer to the theatre. The trimmer built a beautiful platform 12 feet high and six feet wide having a background of colored crepe paper. The background was to be used to set off a display that Brown had arranged in conjunction with the company and with a local confectioner.

Through his tie-up with the confectioner, he was enabled to secure a solid chocolate cow, which weighed fifty-four pounds, as well as several other chocolate animals, ranging in weight from one to three pounds. Interspersed among the candy animals were placed boxes of animal crackers. On each side of the display two cut-outs of the Uneeda Biscuit Boy were deposited. The boys, in addition to carrying a box of the company's product, carried a sign which stated that: "The Uneeda Boy Suggests You Try 'Animal Crackers'" (play date, etc.). We are showing a photo of the completed display in the event that you would like to use a stunt of this type for your house. The display created a lot of comment from everyone entering the lobby, with the ultimate result that business went up a couple of notches all during the run of the film.

We would like to tell you that the smiling showman whose photo appears at the top of this story is none other than William Bill Brown, himself. We think he deserves a compliment for the splendid tie-up he arranged. What do you think?

And he also deserves another one for the way he plugs his Club. No. matter how busy Bill is, he always manages to get in a good word for his fellow showmen. What do you think?

Gallagher Used a Group of Stunts to Sell Lloyd Picture

Due to the excellent campaign that he turned out on "Feet First" when it played the Capitol Theatre in Sioux City, Ia., Gerald Gallagher, manager of the theatre was enabled to chalk up another box-office winner to the string of victories he has annexed in his years in the show game.

The outdoor billing consisted of 10 24-sheets, posted up-side-down, two weeks in advance. 100 window cards in shine parlors and shoe hospitals, with tie-up copy which eliminated passes. 35 dashboard cards were used on as many street cars, 20 inserts were placed in prominently located windows, and 20 tire covers were used on spare tires of taxicabs.

Inasmuch as the picture played Sioux City on Election Day, Gallagher got out 10,000 "Vote for Harold Lloyd" throwaways, which were distributed at the polls. 2,000 20" cardboard rulers were distributed in office buildings. In addition to using illustrations of Harold Lloyd, these rulers carried copy reading, "You won't need a ruler to measure the deep, long laffs in Harold Lloyd's latest comedy, 'Feet First.' Every inch a laff. Capitol Theatre, starts Friday, November 7."

Following through on the national tie-up made with Florsheim shoes, Gallagher arranged for a very attractive window display in the store of the local Florsheim dealer. A 3-column cut of the window appeared in the Sunday edition of the Sioux City Journal.

Six columns of co-operative advertising were sold by the Sioux City Journal for "Feet First." These ads included the Florsheim dealers in town, as well as the shoe shine parlors and shoe hospitals, who were not regular advertisers. Two days in advance of the opening, a truck was used to ballyhoo "Feet First" on the streets. This ballyhoo consisted of a float in the form of a huge cut-out of a shoe on which was printed the theatre's announcement.

The Sioux City Journal ran a series of stories, offering free admissions to the first 100 persons bringing wearable old shoes to the theatre. These shoes were donated to the Salvation Army for the needy.

We are passing these ideas along in the event that you can use some of them yourself, should the occasion arrive where they can be spotted. We want to thank Gerald for passing them along and we hope to have some more in the very near future.

The REAL Green Pastures!

Christmas . . . happiness . . . joy . . . peace on earth, good-will to men . . . just a few weeks more and it will be here . . . a day in the year when everyone expresses happiness . . . oh, pardon us . . . we said "everyone" . . . we're wrong there . . . for a moment we forgot about those poor humans to whom Christmas is just December 25 . . . another day on the great calendar of Time . . . another monotonous day . . . another day of privation . . . another day of suffering . . . while the other half of the world laughs . . . laughs and says: "Merry Christmas" . . . oh, well . . . it seems that some people forget . . . but . . .

It is not a showman's duty to forget . . . already the showman should have set his dates for special shows . . . benefits . . . anything . . . so long as it is going to help lessen another's burden, if only for a moment . . . think of the joy all around if on December 25th you can be thinking: "Well, I've done my bit . . . I've given the local charities plenty of food . . . and clothing . . . and toys . . . for distribution among the poor" . . . say listen guy! . . . it's the greatest thrill you'll ever get . . . remember what James Russell Lowell says:

". . . he who gives but a slender mite,
and gives to that which is out of sight,
That thread of the all-sustaining Beauty
Which runs through all and doth all unite,—
The hand cannot clasp the whole of his arms,
The heart outstretches its eager palms,
For a God goes with it and makes it store
To the soul that was starving in darkness before."

Sure it's poetry . . . but it's human poetry . . . it's the kind of poetry that makes a man's chest expand as he breathes:

"There's nothing like Charity—WITH A CAPITAL 'C'." Will YOU say the above?

American & Foreign Talkies Presented At State Theatre

At this time, we'd like to introduce to you a manager on the J. Real Neth Circuit of theatres in Columbus, Ohio, who is turning out some good work. Meet John McCormick, manager of the State Theatre.

Mr. McCormick enjoys the distinction of being the first showman in the city to present talking pictures in a foreign tongue. The innovation has recently been introduced by Mr. Neth in the State and from all accounts it looks like a winner. The first picture to be shown was "The Big Pond" Paramount's all-talkie starring Maurice Chevalier. It and the short, "Molesson," and "Clinique Musicale" met with a great reception. The foreign films are to be presented on stated Saturdays at 10 A. M. The series will continue throughout the winter.

With two types of films to plug, American and foreign, it will no doubt be interesting to see how they are sold by this live-wire showman handling the State. We hope that he will keep us posted on what he is doing out there along the showman line so that we can pass along his work to the rest of the Club. What do you say, Mr. McCormick? Let's hear from you.

We want to thank Miss Jean LaRoe, publicity director of the circuit, for shooting this photo, and a line or two along to Club headquarters. We want to hear some more about the circuit's activities, Miss La Roe.

School Tie-Up Netted Davis a Lot Of Local Good-Will

Through the use of a well-known showman stunt a short time ago, Claude Davis, manager of the Bohemia Theatre in Cleveland, Tenn., was enabled to chalk up some record business at his house during the playdates of "Africa Speaks", when the film unreeled before the town.

As the schools presented a natural tie-up, Davis immediately got in touch with them and arranged to give a short talk at each one on the value of the picture. The playdates happened to fall in with Educational Week and this aided Davis considerably in crashing the schools. After his talks, he distributed literature on the picture. All of the school teachers were given passes and invited to be the guests of the theatre. The result was that the teachers were so pleased that they told the kids about the picture. The kids, upon returning home, stated that they wanted to see the film. The "standing room only" sign had to be dusted off and placed on the box-office at both matinee and evening performances. Which, you will agree, spoke well for Davis' showmanship.

To give you a line on the type of sign work and poster design used by Davis, we are showing a couple of photos of the art. We think that you will be especially interested in the white caricature of the elephant used as a plug for "Swing High." Look this type of work over, as you might find it a welcome change from your regular run of art work. If you want any more dope on it, drop Davis a line at the theatre and we are sure he'll supply the desired information. Thanks. Claude, for passing this along. Let's hear from you again real soon.

Miller Handling A New Theatre Down In Baltimore, Md.

With the new house on his hands, we are sure that W. L. Miller, manager of the recently opened Patterson Theatre in Baltimore, Md., is going to display some corking showmanship.

Since he has been in the show game, Miller has been turning out some fine examples of showmanship, and his work at the Red Wing theatres bears out our statement. The opening campaign for his house was well planned and executed. The theatre was spick and span, lobby crowded with flowers, house staff arrayed in resplendent uniforms, and every one eager to put the evening over successfully.

We want to wish Miller the best of luck on his new assignment and we hope that he will keep us posted on his future work. Let's hear from you, "W. L."

Teaser Postcards Utilized By Finley To Plug Attraction

A lot of interest for his film, "Strictly Unconventional," was aroused by O. G. Finley, manager of the Victory Theatre in Tampa, Fla., when he set out to sell the picture to the public by means of teaser copy on postcards.

Five hundred cards were signed "Lewis" and another 500 were signed "Catherine." Copy on the cards read: "Dear: Knowing it to be strictly unconventional to call you at your house, will you arrange to meet me Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at the northwest corner of Tampa and Zack Streets? Hurriedly."

The cards aroused interest to the extent that about 500 phone calls were received at the theatre on opening night of picture and about 15 people were seen waiting at the designated corner. The street address mentioned in the copy on cards was that of the theatre itself.

We have shown many gags of this sort, and have always stressed that it is essential that you know how your town will take the stunt. In some towns it will never click. We are sure that Finley must know his public to use it. Let's hear from you again, "O. G."

Burgum Featured A Show To Aid The Unemployed of Town

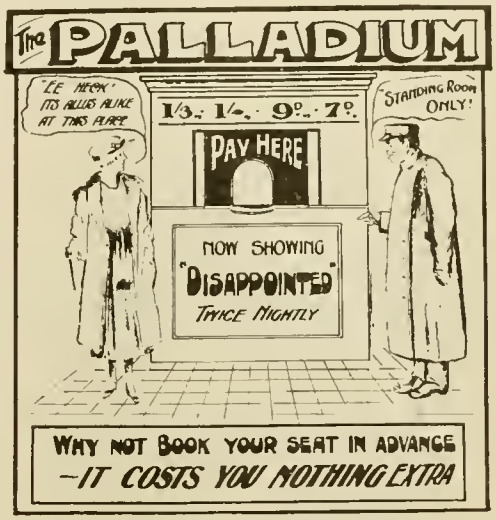
Following right along behind the many other showmen who have been taking every opportunity to do what they can to help relieve the unemployment situation, Dan Burgum, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Greenville, Miss., ran a special Saturday morning benefit show, the purpose of which was to secure food for distribution to the poor and the unemployed.

A great many of the towns kiddies were in attendance at the show, the admission price for the youngsters being the donation of some sort of food, no matter the quantity. The photo we are showing will give you an idea of the number of kids that turned out for the performance.



Half of the food received was turned over to the Red Cross for distribution through their organization. The other half was divided between the hot lunch department of the public schools and to the Salvation Army. The newspaper got solidly behind the idea, giving it some wonderful breaks in their columns, not neglecting to mention some particularly complimentary stories directed towards Burgum and his house personnel, all who had donated their services towards the worthy cause. The good-will stunt helped to further the good-will stock of the theatre, and this alone was a tremendous result of the benefit.

By the way, Dan, we'd like to hear from you more often. And when you send us in your next contribution, include your photo.

Schosberg Boosted Kid Business on a Recent Film Show

Building up children patronage was the objective of Milton Schosberg of the Hippodrome Theatre, Pottsville, Pa., when he played "The Silent Enemy" at his house recently.

Through a tie-up with the city's schools and the leading bus company of Pottsville, he invited 1,500 children to a special morning matinee, the children being admitted upon presentation of a special ticket circulated in all the schools. These tickets, which made no special concession in price, permitted all children showing them to the bus company, to get free transportation to the theatre.

Schosberg first sold the school superintendent on the picture's educational value and then sent a special letter to each of the principals advising of this fact, with the result that they recommended the picture to their classes. The kids matinee turnout on the picture is said to have been the biggest the theatre ever had.

Another one of Schosberg's activities—and one that helps tremendously—is his "side" job as movie editor of the town's leading paper. He presents a daily comment of interesting and timely movie chatter, and though not permitted to ballyhoo the theatre, he manages to get in a line or two now and then. The newspaper editor is very well pleased with the column, and so are the readers—so much so that Schosberg is kept pretty busy answering inquiries. In order to give information as nearly accurate as possible he secures his information from Motion Picture News' Blue Book of cinemadom, the Publix Manual, and the circuit's house organ "Publix Opinion."

This is the first time Mr. Schosberg has appeared on the Club pages and we'd like him to know that if he continues this activity he will more than be eligible for an active membership. When you send us in your next contribution, Milton, include your photo and some of your show history, too, so that we can pass it along and introduce you to the rest of the Club.

The Ten Commandments of Efficiency

A vast amount of study on business management and elimination of waste has been reduced to formula by the U. S. Department of Commerce. This formula consists of ten rules, which might well apply to the motion picture industry, as to any industrial enterprise. The ten points are as follows:

1. Define your purpose. You must know what is to be done before you can know how. This is your master task.

2. Analyze your problem. Your master task then will break up into many detail tasks. Consider them all. Neglect none.

3. Seek for facts. Study every condition governing each task. Find the undesirable element to be eliminated, and the desirable element to be retained. Then standardize right conditions.

4. Devise the one best method. Aim to conserve energy, time, space, material. Determine relations of details to the master task.

5. Find the person best fitted. For each task, certain personal qualities are essential. In each person, certain qualities dominate. Find the person best fitted.

6. Teach the person best fitted, the one best method. Not by driving, but by thorough, patient teaching, are understanding and skill developed.

7. Plan carefully. Right planning of arrangement and sequence of work, will enable you to accomplish tasks in logical order, accurately, quickly, economically.

8. Win co-operation. Co-operation means working together. It cannot be demanded. It must be won. Accept your share of responsibility. Respect the right and aspirations of others.

9. Avoid secrecy. Act on the motive that what is good for your trade as a whole, must also be good for each individual firm. The general pooling of ideas should be fostered. Avoid the attitude of suspicion towards all others in the same line of business.

10. Sift the efficient from the inefficient; the modern method from the antiquated: and keep on doing it week to week, month to month, from year to year.

Parent-Teachers Tie-Up Helped Break the Ice for E. McDaniel

Good-will building is another of the many tasks that a showman is confronted with when he takes over a house in a town where he is practically unknown. It is sometimes a matter of months before he gets on familiar enough terms with the local citizens to permit his securing their co-operation on various ideas which he wishes to use in order to gain business for himself and the merchants. But, in a little while, everything is ironed out. The stiffness on the part of local merchants, which is so noticeable to a showman when he enters a town cold, departs and the showman is then able to get in some work.

Upon his transfer from the Rialto Theatre in Sinton, Texas, to the managership of the Rialto and Queen Theatres in Kingsville, Texas, E. McDaniel had to do some fast stepping to get in the good-will plugs that he obtained while still a "newcomer" to most of Kingsville.

The first move that he made netted him considerable comment from the residents. He co-operated with the local Parent-Teachers' Association on a membership drive. For every member that was brought in by a Public School student, a free pass was issued to the nominee. The pass was good only on a certain matinee day. In return for his co-operation, the Parent-Teachers' Association rewarded McDaniel with an endorsement of his shows, and sent the endorsement to every class in school, and to the members of the association. The local newspaper pounced upon the angle and played it up strongly, thus giving the theatre an excellent publicity break, and the showman handling the house an introduction.

Another stunt that was cleverly engineered and executed was that of tying up with the local bakery. The baker agreed to place theatre heralds in every loaf of bread leaving the shop. Every hundredth loaf contained a free pass to the theatre. Six thousand heralds are distributed weekly in this manner. A credit line is given to the bakery, with the shop well pleased with the resultant advertising and word-of-mouth comment.

We understand that Mr. Daniel hopes to continue the work that characterized the live-wire efforts of C. S. McClellan, former manager of the house, who was very active, both at the theatres and on the Round Table pages. Oke, "E. M." We are going to check you up on that. And, by the way, shoot us in a photo and a little dope on yourself so that we can give you an introduction.

Floral Display Was Used to Brighten Up Lobby of House

One of the prettiest lobbies in Altoona, Pa., may be found at the Strand Theatre. It is here that Alvin Hostler, manager of the house, handles the selling of the theatre and its amusement offerings. One of the reasons for the beauty of the Strand lobby is the floral display. The flowers are promoted from a local florist, who, in return for a credit line, gives Hostler the flowers which we are showing in the photo. The stunt is an excellent one, its value being proven by the number of persons who enter the theatre and express their delight at the display.

When he played "Office Wife" recently, Hostler promoted some office furniture from a local dealer and placed it in the lobby as an advance plug. A card was placed atop of a desk, and plugged the picture with copy: "Why Do 10,000,000 Women Fear This Woman? See 'Office Wife,'" etc. The display created a great deal of comment and helped put the show across in no small measure.

For his selling of "Whoopee," one of the best tie-ups that he effected was that of introducing a "Whoopee" Sundae that was placed on sale at 100 fountains. Cards and streamers were used to plug the picture and the concoction. As nearly the entire town was covered, it was a pretty sure thing that the publicity and word-of-mouth comment resulting would tend to boom business at the house during play dates. There was no disappointment in evidence! The theatre was jammed from opening to closing! Whoopee showmanship sold "Whoopee"!

As a national play is being made today by showmen in an effort to bring back the kiddies, a great deal of work has been centered upon the serial. For an inaugural showing of "The Indians Are Coming," a special herald of the circus flyer type, printed in black on yellow stock, was distributed to all of the kids in Altoona. The move proved a good one. Another stunt that has helped Hostler's business building is the cards that are placed in every loaf of bread wrapped and sold at a local bakery. The cards give a credit to the dealer, as well as plugging the picture. Passes are placed in some of the loaves wrapped.

We think that enough has been passed along now to show that Hostler is right there when it comes to show selling. We hope, in view of the fact that he is so active, he will keep us posted on his future work. Let's hear from you again, Alvin.

Prosperity Week Campaign Executed By Ponton Clicked

The recent Paramount-Publix Prosperity Week that the circuit houses were featuring not so long ago gave many showmen opportunities of displaying tricks of the trade, and at the same time let them know how they stood along the good-will line in their town. Knowing that good-will building is one of the greatest of theatre assets, W. H. Ponton, manager of the Carolina Theatre in Fayetteville, N. C., contacted the secretary of his local Merchants' Association, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Fayette Observer, local paper.

When the plan which Ponton formulated was presented to the various heads of the local organizations, they all expressed their satisfaction of the generous and mutually advantageous scheme; so it was decided to make Paramount-Publix Prosperity Week a local affair and call it Fayetteville Prosperity Week.

The Observer sold 36 merchants the idea and subsequently ran three full pages of advertising—tying in on the prosperity idea. Ponton figured that the only way he could cash in on the local Prosperity Week was to use the Prosperity Dollar stunt—and all the merchants agreed to give $1.25 in merchandise for this particular dollar bill.

It was announced in advance on the screen that Buddy Rogers was sending along the dollar bill to be put in circulation to show what a dollar would do if kept in circulation. The newspaper contributed a front-page story about the dollar bill that it was received from Buddy Rogers and was then turned over to the secretary of the Merchants' Association. The story also stated that the holder of the bill at certain times of the day was to phone into the newspaper office in order that a check of its whereabouts could be kept.

The dollar bill created a lot of talk during the week and indirectly proved a good medium in advertising the week's attractions at the theatre. As some of our members may recall, we carried a story on this dollar bill angle not so long ago. It must be clicking pretty good in the Middle West and in the South, as many showmen are making use of it. Perhaps it will go in your town, also. Why not give it a trial if it will fit in with local conditions? We want to thank Ponton for letting us in on his work, and we hope that his future contributions will be forthcoming shortly.

Classified Ad Tie-Up With N'paper Proved Profitable for Jacob

A good-will stunt that helped boost his stock with the local paper, thereby setting him right in line for anything that he might want to break in the sheet later on, was engineered by A. M. Jacob, manager of the Century Theatre in Jackson, Miss., when he tied-up with the sheet and innovated a classified ad tie-up in conjunction with the showing of one of his feature pictures.

The tie-up with the newspaper offered the users of the classified ad page an opportunity of acquiring one or two tickets to see the picture without cost. All that was necessary to win one or two theatre tickets was to place a 25-cent classified ad (and get one ticket) or a 48-cent classified ad (and get two tickets). It was also necessary that the type of ads be "cash" ads and also that no one person could get more than two tickets.

Many persons took advantage of this offer, but no matter what the amount of persons receiving passes, Jacob was still way ahead of the game. Indeed, if his house had been nearly all paper (which it wasn't, though) he would have profited by the good-will angle. It is interesting to note that the large amount of space that was devoted to his theatre served to sell the Jackson public on the picture, boosted business a good bit above par. We'd like to have some more accounts of your work, "A. M."

Just A Reminder

The picture tells the story. It shows the vast amount of edibles collected by David Silverman from members of the Mickey Mouse Club of the Belmont Theatre, the house managed by Silverman in New York City, when a show was arranged whereby free admission was granted to all children bringing some form of food. The merchandise is to be donated to the needy persons of the neighborhood. Are you doing your bit?

J. Manning Dressed Up Gag and Used It As Plug for Picture

Again proving that many stunts appearing on the Club pages may be adapted to suit various pictures, Jack Manning, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Greenwood, Miss., made use of the old wedding ring and pink ribbon gag to turn out a novel exploitation plug for Clara Bow in "Her Wedding Night," the titian-haired siren's latest film.

By means of a piece of pink ribbon, the wedding ring (an inexpensive affair which may be purchased from any wholesale novelty dealer) was attached to a card that carried copy on the picture reading: "Clara Bow in 'Her Wedding Night'—Whom Fate Has Joined Together Try to Put Asunder! Come and Tell Clara How to Rid Herself of Two Unwanted Husbands on 'Her Wedding Night.'" A couple of ad mats were also used on the card. Title and play dates of film were shown.

When the cards first made their appearance, they were met with plenty of enthusiasm, and long before the world-of-mouth comment had gotten around, the cards were all given away. Manning reported a good business on the picture, and, in no small measure, it was due to this gag. We are glad to see that Jack believes in making stunts fit his pictures and not sitting and waiting for certain films to come along, or, after using a stunt once, discarding it. Keep it up, Jack, and let's hear some more from you.

Binstock Presents Novel Backgrounds On Advance Displays

For a number of good reasons—all of them showmen—Astoria, Long Island has been the center of a lot of corking showmanship for the past few seasons. We have presented, on the Club pages, many examples of live-wire work that we are of the opinion proved to be valuable to whoever used it when we passed it along. Of the Astoria showmen, Paul Binstock, manager of the Fox Astoria Grand is very active.

No matter what type of picture he is playing at his house, you will generally find that Paul is right there with the goods and turning out some knockout flashes for a lobby display. One of his most recent ones was on "All Quiet on the Western Front," and because it presented an unusual picture, he gave it a great break as an advance plug. We are showing a photo of the display, arranged in his lobby, and all set to sell "All Quiet" with a big noise. We believe that once before it was pointed out that Paul uses a painted background, or a twenty-four sheet background, on most all of his advance displays. If you will look closely at the photo, you will note that he is using this idea in conjunction with the picture he is plugging. The background sets off the display of machine guns, helmets, rifles and sandbags very well. Cut-outs were also placed alongside the display.

Should you be using this form of lobby display, it might be well for you to consider the angle that Binstock has hit upon in the form of the depictive background. It is one that will attract a lot of attention especially if blinker spots are focused upon it and shed green and red rays over the scene. The whole idea may be put into effect at a small cost, and we believe that the publicity resulting from it will more than help you jam them in during playdates. Before closing this story, we'd like to enumerate one or two of Paul's other activities, so that you may see that he knows his stuff along all of the other show lines, too, putting it into use at every possible opportunity.

A real estate corporation was plugging some newly built homes in Astoria. They offered free bus service to all persons wishing to inspect the houses. Binstock arranged to place a large banner, plugging his picture, directly below the company's banner. This move was found to be very valuable, aiding him in the selling of the show to good advantage. The real estate men liked it because, as they stated, "it made people look at the bus." Other valuable tie-ups included the securing of the co-operation of a fur store to plug Jeannette McDonald, star of "Monte Carlo," the feature playing the Astoria Grand at the time. The store permitted Binstock to place large signs in their windows. As the fur dealer has one of the best clienteles in the town, it is easily seen that the tie-up was a most advantageous one.

And now. At the top of this article you will notice the picture showing Paul, busily engaged in transacting the office routine—as much as possible—over the telephone. We want to ask you to look closely at the photograph and note the prominent spot that his membership certificate occupies on the office wall. How about your certificate? Does it, too, occupy so outstanding a position? Let's see it. Thanks, Paul.

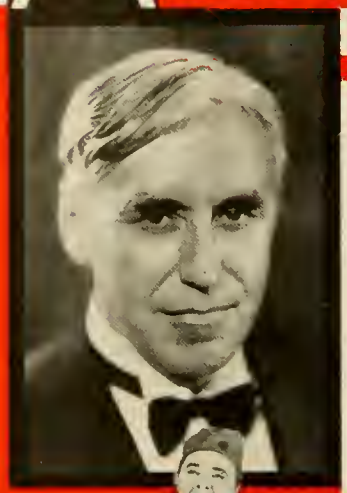
Dear Sir:

We are quite well pleased with results from the initial advertisement of our schedule which was prepared and placed by your company in the Motion Picture News, "Showmen" Issue of November 1, 1930.

So far we have received, and are still getting, a very gratifying number of inquiries from exhibitors, dealers and others who are interested in our non-breakable P. & V. Cast Aluminum Sign Letters.

This tends to substantiate your argument that sales on a good product properly advertised in the right field, through the right medium, can be increased even in times of so-called depression.

We hope your future efforts in our behalf will continue to be as effective as they appear to have been in this instance.



Sincerely yours,

FRIEDLEY [illegible] Co.

AMERICA IS SAFE AS LONG AS IT CAN LAUGH

America's collective sense of humor is one of the principal reasons for its greatness; one of the surest guarantees of its future.

Among its most honored sons and daughters have always been those who made its millions chuckle. For they do more for public morale than most of its statesmen.

While you can laugh you'll never be licked. Every time you play a good comedy you are helping your box-office to win. And you are adding your bit toward strengthening the public courage—and that's all America needs now to start the ball of prosperity to rolling again.

"A HOLLYWOOD THEME SONG"
with
Harry Gribbon
Yola D'Avril Patsy O'Leary

Mack Sennett is famous for his satires on the movies themselves. And this one, kidding the theme song, is one of his greatest. The critics call it "great fun", "one long howl", "a riot."

"ROUGH IDEA OF LOVE"
with Marjorie Beebe, Frank Eastman, Mildred Van Dorn

If you want to give them a rough idea of love as Frankie and Johnny demonstrate it—and a very clear idea of how funny an "action comedy" can be—play this one.

MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

"RACKET CHEERS"
with Andy Clyde
Daphne Pallard Marjorie Beebe

"Mack Sennett still rolling 'em off their seats with good old fashioned slapstick comedy," says the Hollywood Daily Reporter. "Good stuff to satisfy the customers. Good entertainment for the kids."

"DON'T BITE YOUR DENTIST" with Andy Clyde, Daphne Pallard
Patsy O'Leary, Lincoln Stedman

Don't bite your wife if business is not 100 per cent. Get more laughs in your show and advertise them. "Here's one for real clean fun," says Film Daily. "A corker."

"NO, NO, LADY" with Andy Clyde
Frank Eastman
Dorothy Christy
Cyril Chadwick

A new and funnier slant on the amateur "drawma"; a comedy done in the best modern manner, with plenty of the good old belly laughs.

ANNOUNCEMENT

QUIGLEY PUBLISHING COMPANY, publishers of Exhibitors Herald-World, Better Theatres and the Motion Picture Almanac, issues the following announcement:

The consolidation of Motion Picture News and Exhibitors Herald-World has been arranged. The first consolidated issue of the two national motion picture trade publications will be published under date of January 3, 1931. The consolidated publications will be issued under the title—Motion Picture Herald.

Exhibitors Daily Review and Motion Pictures Today, the vigorous and alert daily newspaper of the motion picture business, founded and edited by Mr. Arthur James, has been acquired. This publication will be renamed Motion Picture Daily, and will be published shortly under the auspices of the Quigley Publishing Company.

Announcement also is made that a daily trade newspaper will shortly be established in Hollywood.

Staffs for these several publications, comprising the most capable and experienced persons in motion picture trade journalism, have been assembled. Plans and arrangements have been made for the strengthening and developing of each of these publications to the end of providing for the motion picture industry in all of its branches a trade press organized and geared to meet every requirement of service, present and future, and to discharge its highest responsibilities.

This announcement comes as a culmination of an effort commenced in Chicago in 1915 when the writer of this announcement founded Exhibitors Herald. Exhibitors Herald, first a territorial trade paper, confined to the five Central States, eventually branched out into the national field. Motography, also published in Chicago, was combined with Exhibitors Herald. Then in 1928 Moving Picture World, long hailed as "The Exhibitor's Bible," founded in 1907, was combined with Exhibitors Herald, creating Exhibitors Herald-World. Now, Motion Picture News, developed by Mr. William A. Johnston, a publication which has gallantly carried the banner of enterprise and progress for more than seventeen years, joins with Exhibitors Herald-World in a consolidation of publishing resources which insure a reorganized publication of a vastly greater scope and calibre than has yet been placed at the service of the motion picture and the industry.

Throughout the period since 1915 as a publisher and editor in the motion picture trade the writer of these lines has been the beneficiary of a very generous amount of encouragement and support.

Now, upon the occasion of this development which will place at his disposal vastly greater publishing resources and facilities, he offers hearty assurances that these resources and facilities shall be used to reciprocate, in some small measure at least, for the encouragement and support which have been so generously extended during the past fifteen and one-half years.

IT'S GOING TO BE MIGHTY TOUGH UNLESS—

INSIDE the business this:

Theatre grosses that insist on nosediving week in and week out, to the consternation and mystification of chain operators in New York and out.

As complex a foreign problem as has beset this complex industry since first it started on its hectic way.

Ineffectual production—or bad pictures, if you like—filtering through the studio sieve while the costs to make them pile up at a rate that has industry leaders worried beyond calculation.

Economic Blue and Chain Red

TOPPING this triumvirate of woes is the widespread economic depression which has tobogganned general business clear into the dumps. And off on the sidelines, raising the devil and a few other things, are bankers whose resources make the celluloid institution go 'round. They are disturbed because intake doesn't match outgo and want to know why.

Then producer operation of small theatres has demonstrated itself to be a complete, or near-complete, bust and the travail prevailing over that five-year-old discovery is plenty. Also ironic.

The Legislatures Gird for Battle

OUTSIDE the business this:

January around the corner and forty-three state legislatures ready to turn Big Berthas and popguns on the picture business. Dazzled by press agents who throw millions around carelessly, and don't obey instructions because their bosses don't want them to, law makers are massing for an attack on the "fabulous" wealth of the industry.

They figure in war the aggressor is entitled to the spoils and are fully determined to get their share, via the tax route.

Sexy Advertising Another Wooing

YOU also have the reform groups reaping hay while the sun shines. Sexy advertising, sponsored and, in many cases, encouraged by chain operators whose frenzy for dollars at the box-office is halted by nothing, is supplying the ammunition dumps of the enemy with the big explosives that win battles.

If the conflict rages any hotter than it does today, the responsibility for the outcome is something producers themselves won't be able to explain away.

The Dust Cloth on the Round Table

AND so, it's going to be tough unless the round table is dusted off and some substantial, rational thinkers ordered to plant their feet under it.

This is the time, more vital than any other in film history that this writer, at least, can recall, for get-togethers that spell the burial of political ambitions in favor of a thought on behalf of the industry.

It's a crying need. If something isn't done about it, the need will continue to exist, but the crying will be wet and plentiful.

Value of Film Boards to Industry Seen Forcing Continuance of Hays Adjuncts

Capone Goes Hollywood

Hollywood—Al Capone, the midwestern beer baron, has been about the village for the past few weeks, according to those in the "know." The notorious gang chief is planning to settle here and reorganize the liquor business, which he claims is in sad need of reconstruction. For the past several weeks Al has been looking over real estate holdings in the Southland and is expected to choose the site of his California homestead shortly.

'Gambling' George Cohan's First for Par; Gets $100,000

"Gambling," which had a four months' run on Broadway and served as the road vehicle for George M. Cohan during the 1929-30 season, will be the producer-star's initial picture for Paramount. It will be made at the New York studio early in spring.

When Cohan and the Paramount executives reached an agreement to film his last Broadway success the understanding was that "shooting" would begin in November and that the first talker would be released early in 1931. These plans were altered under a mutual agreement to permit Cohan to make his tour in "The Tavern."

About a year ago Cohan reached an agreement with Joseph M. Schenck to produce pictures in Hollywood under the United Artists banner. It was a verbal agreement and when the details were worked out and committeed to paper, the document which resulted presented such a formidable proposal and tied the producer-actor-author down so rigidly he called all bets off. He wants to be footloose so that if he gets his hands on a good play or musical,—or turns one out himself—he will not be bound legally to confine his working moments to studio.

While the financial arrangement between Cohan and Paramount is not made public, from sources believed reliable the information comes that Cohan is to be paid $100,000 for the "Gambling" story, a salary for being its star while in the making, and a good share of the net profits.

Yates-Saland Suit to Trial on January 26

Suit of H. J. Yates' Consolidated Film-Cinema Patents against Nat Saland's Craft Film Lab has been set for trial at Wilmington on January 26. Yates is suing on alleged infringement of Gaumont developer patents. Revolutionary changes are understood to be in store for the lab field if Yates wins the suit.

Vote on Reduction in Budget Slated for April; Dun Proposal Considered

Film boards of Trade, fate of which was up for discussion at last week's meeting of the Hays organization, have nothing to worry about as to their future status. The Hays association placed the boards on trial until April, when vote on the proposed budget for the new fiscal year will be registered, but regardless of this, the organization has no intention of abandoning the boards.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars of annual savings are credited to film boards through their various functions. Serving as a clearing house for distributor problems, the boards justify their existence many times over during the course of a year, the Hays group feels.

The vote in April will be on the reduced budget, which is being cut between $20,000 and $25,000. The 1930 budget was $260,000. At last week's meeting, the status of the boards was discussed and decision made to permit them to carry on "as is" until April, when their future would be determined. Meanwhile, distributors have under consideration a proposal by the R. G. Dun Co. to set up machinery to take over film Boards' functions.

Pantages, Sure Of Victory, May Produce Abroad

Los Angeles—Alexander Pantages already is laying plans for his future, predicated on the belief that he will beat the rap in the assault case in which he was convicted and sentenced to San Quentin.

The veteran theatre magnate plans production of talkers abroad and in the near future his two sons, Rodney and Lloyd, will go to Europe to survey the situation and consider studio proposals. Talkers are to be made in the country best suited to the individual story's requirements.

Detroit Excited About Whispers

Detroit—There is plenty of whispering going on here these days following statement that a group of well known former Detroit men are planning to build up a chain of local theatres. This town has been splashing red ink so long it's nobody's business, but it is figured that an aggressive independent group can do more than get by.

Plenty of money is available for the new group and some tough competition is in prospect. Activities of the new chain will get under way soon after New Year's.

Sex and Santa

Chicago.—One of the prize "boners" of the year was pulled by a circuit neighborhood house which has been making a feature of a Santa Claus with "gifts for the kiddies" for the past two weeks. This week, with the Santa still waiting for the kids, "A Lady Surrenders," which is playing to "adults only" was booked into the theatre.

Supervision of F. & M. Shows in East to Loew's

Supervision and routing of Fox stage shows in the East early in the new year will be taken from Fanchon & Marco and vested in the Loew booking office, it is understood. Plans now being formulated are said to call for a complete reorganization of stage policy of all Fox and Loew houses east of the Mississippi. Many theatres now showing vaudeville will switch to presentation shows, with the latter succeeding vaudeville at numerous other stands.

Capitol presentation shows, a regular Loew unit, will be routed into Fox's Academy of Music in New York, and the routing time increased from about 12 weeks as at present to 35 weeks. Regular vaudeville will continue through the Loew office.

Although Fanchon & Marco will continue to have a voice in production of their presentation shows, actual supervision and routing will be done by Loew.

"Too wild to even dignify with a denial," was the manner in which Bert Adler, Eastern representative of Fanchon & Marco, scouted the above yarn crediting Loew with acquiring supervision over Eastern booking and routing of F. & M. stage units.

Sinemas Splash Some Sinful Stuff

Chicago—More sex was current at Loop theatres this week than is ordinarily found in the local Court of Domestic Relations. The result was that the art and morality seekers turned to the burlesque houses for something refreshing. The Loop line-up included the following pictures: "Madonna of the Streets," "Shame of Mary Boyle" (adults only), "Passion Flower," "Paid" (adults only), "Hell's Angels," "Min and Bill," "A Lady's Morals," "Her Man" and "Her Wedding Night."

There was a golden opportunity waiting for a house that could advertise some such title as "The Life of the Grasshopper."

The Insiders' Outlook

CONSIDERABLE interest is being evidenced by those in the know over Harley Clarke's suggestion that negative costs be limited to $400,000 top per picture.

Bringing to the business his knowledge of financing and public utility management, Clarke is understood to be a firm believer of control of manufacturing cost in proportion to earning power—a sound business idea, of course. It is his idea that $400,000 negatives represent a fair running average for any picture, balancing the costs of sales, exploitation and prints against average potential return from theatres under percentage bookings.

Looking at it another way:

Why, so Clarke's conclusions are understood to run, invest huge sums of money ranging from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, or even more, when the potential profit, in view of the cost, becomes an exceedingly dubious factor? There appears to be no good reason against this argument.

Whether the leaders of the industry will go for it, remains to be seen. If the plan is to become operative, it obviously means a more rigid control of studio purse-strings than has prevailed in the industry until now. It means further that the ideas of production responsibles in Hollywood must undergo a change which may prove difficult for them to masticate when you realize the almost uncontrolled freedom in operation which has been theirs for many years.

Another factor:

The difficulty of reconciling divergent points of view, always a dominant and usually a troublesome factor in production, is something which has to be taken into account. One individual may envision a story on a scale that might easily transcend the $400,000 limitation, for instance, and sincerely believe that an additional $300,000 or $400,000 investment will reflect itself in profit. After all, the chances that he may prove to be correct are just as pronounced as any others that may be offered.

These are some of the points which have developed since the Clarke idea was first advanced.

Ten Minutes to Go

Nestling among the starling's cottages at Malibu Beach, where the mountains kiss the waters of the Pacific, is the beach house of James R. Grainger—sales manager, not film lead. His is probably the only non-professional house in the colony. When Jimmy isn't on the Coast, Edmund, pride of the Grainger clan, keeps the family standard aloft.

The other morning Ed awoke to a terrific hammering on the door. "Give me ten more minutes of sleep," he yelled. But he didn't get the period of grace—fortunately for him. The hurry call came from his Fillipino house boy and the rush revolved around the fire that already was creeping up on the Grainger homestead. The minutes were exactly ten, but consequences might have been far worse for Grainger had he won his point.

Storm Clouds

On the surface, everything is lovely. On the inside, the pot is about to boil over. The front that presents itself to the trade looks rosy. But the truth is that this unnamed organization is having anything but a nice, quiet pre-Christmas time of it.

Politics, that industry disturber, is responsible. When the president, for instance, confers, it happens peculiarly enough the general manager is always present, whether he belongs or not. When the general manager functions—that sometimes happens—he fills his office with minions on all sides. That's because the president drops in so often, finds the G. M. apparently frantic with work and comes to the inevitable conclusion that his assistant is one great fellow.

The truth of the situation, as you might suspect, has percolated throughout the entire company. Everybody seems to know it but the head of the firm. Ergo: dissatisfaction, unrest and, finally, near chaos.

Impending

THE closing year will witness a number of changes in the executive line-up of at least one uppity-up organization in the business.

The switch, in the case of one individual, is being precipitated by politics. The circumstances are placing on the spot an important executive against whose account are being charged business errors for which he is no wise responsible, the orders having been issued by a man higher up on the rungs of the ladder.

But, like that much quoted observation, this is merely another case of preservation and the first law of nature. The bigger fellow is removing the smaller fellow to save his own skin.

The other changes, in an entirely different department of the same company, are about to develop because the bankers have expressed their dissatisfaction over the business regime of the about-to-get-the-axe official.

It's going to be a surprise when it happens—and that won't be long now.

Stocks and Socks

Plenty of the boys in the film business took it on the chin in the Bank of United States crash. One of the comparatively recent newcomers in the trade was taken for one hundred grand, 'tis said. The tap was doubly tough for the party in question, so the story goes, because about the same time he went for a 50 grand ride in a gambling game at a certain New Jersey resort.

Irish and Scotch

Both Paramount and Educational planned to enter the talking reporter field with their newsreels some time ago. Floyd Gibbons, veteran reporter who formerly starred on the radio in the Literary Digest hour, was sought by both firms at the time. After the proposed Educational deal fell through, Paramount bid for Gibbons. The figure offered the veteran war correspondent is understood to have been $5,000 weekly, but Gibbons held out for $10,000.

If you suspect the deal flopped, the honors are yours.

Ingenuity

His many friends who are cheering the success of Fox Movietone News realize that the ingenuity of Truman Talley is to a large extent responsible for the forward strides made by the newsreel. In this respect is recalled the great scoop Truman scored at the Versailles peace conference following the war.

The various diplomats attending the sessions were given for admittance a red card on which was inscribed a coat of arms and other fancy gold lettering. In order to crash the gate, Truman took the top off a box of Pall Mall cigarettes, with which he crashed the gate and scooped the world on the celluloid story.

What Price Invectives?

One of the most amusing and colorful battles in the industry rages between silent and sound news cameramen. The silent boys find that the prevalence of microphones is cramping their style and are properly resentful of the fact.

Accordingly, when there is an event of importance they make every effort to prevent the mikes from interfering with

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE

Effective January 3, 1931, Motion Picture News will be consolidated with Exhibitors Herald-World. Both publications, on that date, will make their joint appearance in a new format as MOTION PICTURE HERALD under ownership of the Quigley Publishing Company + +

TO the readers of Motion Picture News, it is important to stress this point:

The publishing characteristics which have captured for this trade journal its position of prestige and respect in the international motion picture field will be retained.

Combined with its present facilities now will be added the resources of the Quigley Publishing Company and the features which have placed Exhibitors Herald-World in the front rank of the trade papers serving this industry.

For the man who would know his business better, the new publication which is to emerge from this important consolidation bids fair to offer at once a concentration of publishing ability, devoted to a common purpose, such as has never before been presented to the industry for its approval and support.

Motion Picture Herald, its publishing sponsors promise, will be a weekly paper in every way representative of the business which it will serve. Its debut on January 3rd is recommended to you as an event to be watched with keenest interest.

Erpi to Eliminate Extraneous Noises By Overhauling Sound Installations

Dough in Socks

Hollywood—Since the closing of the Bank of Hollywood and the Guaranty Bldg. and Loan Co., Hollywoodites have been cautious as to where they put their money. Some are putting it away in the family sock and others are drawing it out and putting it in postal savings. Others get traveler's checks and money orders in exchange for the hard earned dough.

General upinion is that the Bank of Hollywood will open up shortly after undergoing a complete reorganization, but the Guaranty company is expected to settle for about 50 cents on the dollar.

Censor Dave Is Follies Manager; Will He Blush?

Seattle—Maybe it's just a coincidence, but Dave Himelhoch has just been appointed manager of the Follies Theatre in this city. To make the story more intelligible, however, let it be explained that Dave is chairman of Seattle's very much publicized Board of Theatre Censors, and (here's the laugh) the Follies is the home of Will King's musical comedy troupe, featuring "blackouts" and musical specialties that are, to say the least, "slightly blue" in tone. Local residents are waiting to see whether the Follies shows take on more of the angelic attitude of the censor board with Dave's advent, or whether the board's perspective changes to correspond to the chairman's presentations.

Publix Ready to Book All Product

Scranton—Publix does not discriminate against any film producer, and at all times stands ready to book the product of any company if it is suitable, George C. Walsh, division head, declared in commenting on the invasion of Scranton by Warners.

The Warner firm has leased the Gaiety, former burlesque house, which is being remodeled as a first-run house. Several other locations are under consideration, it is stated.

M. E. Comerford, who sold his circuit to Warners, holds the majority stock in the Gaiety enterprise. The house is just a few doors away from the Capitol, one of the first string Publix houses. Terms of the lease, closed by Joe Hebrew of Warners, call for a monthly rental between $800 and $900, with option to buy the property for about $85,000.

Job Will Be Done on Every Erpi Device in the Country— No New Attachments

Overhauling of every Western Electric installation in the country will be undertaken by Erpi immediately. The job will be done to silence sound projection mechanism, in line with the company's new production device which is said to eliminate all surface noises.

There will be no additional cost to theatre owners, except where worn-out parts must be replaced to allow for complete silencing of the machine. These parts purchases are not being forced upon exhibitors unnecessarily, according to an Erpi official who told a Motion Picture News reporter that replacement orders will be kept at a minimum, and will be made only where required. New attachments for silencing will not be necessary.

Eight hours will be required to tone down the extraneous noises of the machine, with exhibitors being asked to co-operate by eliminating the noise emanating from devices in the booth other than sound units. When completed, the booth will be practically "sealed" to outside noise interference.

Theatres which have booked pictures made under the new "silent sound" process will be treated first. The initial production, Paramount's "Right to Love," with Ruth Chatterton, is a test of the new process. Others will not be ready until early in February.

Immediately after completion of the silencing job in the U. S., which is expected to take three months and cost Erpi $250,000, servicing of foreign installations will commence.

A demonstration of the Paramount vehicle, in which Erpi engineers assisted in production, revealed elimination of studio surface noises and complete absence of hum. With this accomplished, proper reproduction is impossible unless the many machine noises in the booth are eliminated. Heretofore, studio surface noises "drowned out" extraneous noises in the booth. Both combined to make incidental sound and parts of dialogue sound unnatural and "tinny."

Shapiro to East, Allvine West Under Fox Split-up

Hollywood—Victor M. Shapiro, publicity generalissimo at the Fox studios, leaves for New York early in January to take charge of the home office publicity and advertising departments.

Glendon Allvine, director of publicity and advertising for Fox, sails for Hollywood on the S.S. Virginia January 17 to remain at the studio until the annual sales convention, probably in May.

This schedule will give him about five days to confab with Shapiro in New York on operating problems. The switch is the first step in an interchange of duties under a new plan devised at Fox which will alternate the Eastern and Western department heads in the future.

Santa's Option Out

Hollywood—The retrenchment policies of the various studios have dealt a serious blow to the film chatter writers. They will receive no Christmas presents from the publicity departments. In the past the press chiefs have been very kind and have given the local scribes a break, but this year there will be no Santa Claus. Last Christmas one enterprising clock salesman sold the publicity heads of three studios electric clocks to give as presents. Imagine the dismay that greeted the arrival of three time pieces to various writers—and all of them alike.

Finkelstein Over Crisis; New Chain To Take Impetus

St. Paul—With M. L. Finkelstein, senior member of the former firm of Finkelstein & Ruben, convalescing from a stroke suffered a few weeks ago, plans are under way by his sons, Harold and Danny, for continued expansion of their new chain in Iowa. Danny has resigned from Warner Theatres to become active in the new chain. When his father was stricken, Danny came here by airplane from Atlantic City where he was city manager for Warners.

The Finkelsteins already have invaded two Iowa towns, Spencer and Carroll, in which five houses were acquired. No effort is being made to compete with either Publix or A. H. Blank. Ten million dollars is available for the new circuit's expansion, which is to be in Iowa and Nebraska.

Tap Dancers Ruin Torrid Dialogue

Seattle—While John Gilbert and Greta Garbo performed on the screen of the Madison, local neighborhood playhouse, tap dancing students on the floor above drove the theatre's patrons away because the emotional scenes could not be heard above the din of the second floor feet. So claims F. M. Farrow, former lessee of the theatre, who is asking damages of $10,000 in Superior Judge Robert S. MacFarland's court.

Defendants in the action are Mr. and Mrs. George Storok, lessors, who are charged by Farrow with driving him out of business by allowing the dancing school to operate directly above the theatre during show hours at night. The storoks, on a cross-complaint, ask foreclosure of a $5,000 mortgage on Farrow's equipment, and deny the tap dancing accusation.

Hoover No Fan

Washington—While the Hays association stands ready at all times to furnish any and all film programs which may strike the fancy of President Hoover, few requests for shows for the Chief Executive are made. The President recently viewed "Lightnin'," marking return of Will Rogers to presidential favor. Rogers' wisecracks alienated him from White House receptions and other affairs during the Harding administration.

It's Machine Age; Plan to Operate MechanicalHouses

Courtland Smith is getting ready to launch his chain of automatic picture theatres. According to present plans, the proposition will be launched in the Lefcourt Building, 49th Street and Broadway, New York. The shows will be put on by Trans Lux Corp., which Smith heads.

Trans Lux is planning a national chain of store shows featuring automatic pictures. Western Electric sound heads now are being made for the purpose. Jack Connolly is to be managing director of the proposed chain. Only two employes are required to operate the proposed "turnstile" theatres.

Rembusch Calls Cohorts Together

Indianapolis—Call for a meeting Jan. 7 of Unaffiliated Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America has been sounded by Frank J. Rembusch, its secretary, in a message to members of Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana. Rembusch, who has continued the unaffiliated association upon his own initiative ever since the Trade Practice Conference, has drafted a resolution praising the Department of Justice for the credit and arbitration decrees and panning distributors and M. P. T. O. A. and Allied leaders, block booking and a few other of his pet aversions.

Malice Charged in Fox Deal with Former Head

"Malicious reports" circulated about Fox Film, which were climaxed by a story that William Fox was to regain control of the company for a reputed $10,000,000 this week, were spiked by W. C. Michel, vice-president and treasurer of the company. Fox sold control of the firm last April for a reported $20,000,000, following lengthy court fight over control of the company.

Other Companies Expected to Follow Lead of Lichtman, Ending Curtailment

That the industry is turning the corner in its swing back to prosperity is the opinion of a number of executives, who feel that the extended curtailment period is about over. This view was emphasized by Al Lichtman, when at a sales meeting at Chicago he announced that around the first of the year United Artists would rescind its 10 per cent reduction in salaries, put into effect several weeks ago.

In making this statement, which the sales force regarded as a real Christmas present, Lichtman commended the field men for the job they have been doing. Lichtman recently received a substantial salary increase, signing a new contract to continue as head of the firm's distribution, after rejecting an offer from Warners.

Other companies which have cut down on personnel are understood to be planning reinstatements, convinced that such a step will improve morale and efficiency.

"City Lights," to Get Broadway Premiere Feb. 1

Silent vs. talker is the battle to be staged on Broadway starting Feb. 1, when Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights," synchronized, opens for a run at the George M. Cohan. The picture has been in the making for more than two years and its negative cost is reported at $1,400,000.

Chaplin has stated that the film will be offered to the highest bidder in various situations and regardless of affiliations.

To Double License Tax

Scranton—City Solicitor C. B. Little has been asked by the city council to draft a new ordinance covering the license fees exacted by the city from all theatres. The solons instructed Little to fix the license fee at approximately twenty cents per seat. This move is expected to bring in additional revenue to the city of about $2,100. A tax of twenty cents per seat would be an increase of more than fifty per cent over the present sum.

Exclusive

Hollywood—One of the largest hotels on the Boulevard is finding business plenty tough. The other night the ballroom had a total of 16 paying customers dancing to the tune of an 18-piece orchestra. Besides that, 42 employes waited to serve the guests.

The Wild Pest

Hollywood—Gary Cooper may be found astride a horse when on the screen, but for buzzing up and down the boulevard the lanky star has just purchased a $16,000 Dusenberg that makes the film populace look twice when it sails down the street. Cooper was once rated as champion gear jammer when driving buses in Yellowstone Park. He still shoves a mean throttle, as the Hollywood cops will testify—usually rating about three speed tickets per mile.

Memphis Gathers In 3,000 Shekels To Aid Jobless

Memphis—More than $3,000 was added to the unemployment relief fund here through the four major downtown theatres. Nearly 6,000 people crowded into the four houses, RKO Orpheum, Loew's State, Loew's Palace and Warner theatres, to see the Sunday shows, which were given free by exchanges, theatres and employes.

Approximately $1,500 worth of the latest films were donated by the Memphis-Little Rock Film Board of Trade to be used in the four downtown theatres and the neighborhood houses.

The pictures were picked by a committee of three, composed of Frank R. Ahlgren, news editor of the Commercial Appeal; C. A. McElravey, managing director of the Memphis Auditorium, and Allan Fisher of the D. A. Fisher Insurance Co.

Sunday shows will prevail in Memphis four consecutive weeks for the benefit of the unemployed.

An admission fee of at least 50 cents is charged each person entering the theatre. The Sunday show movement has the endorsement of the entire city government and is part of the program of Mayor Watkins Overton to assist the hundreds of unemployed in Memphis.

Paramount's New Color Process Out of Lab Stage

Paramount's new color process, details of which have been guarded closley over a two-year period, is understood to be ready for studio use. The method is said to use a new type color-cap over a regular camera lens.

Another Patent Suit

Strengthened by the decision of the U. S. District Court in Michigan, which in another section held the two patents valid, Western Electric has sued for an accounting and injunction against the Amplion Corp. of America and two of its officers, charging patent infringement.

Sexy Advertising Out in Washington Suburbs; Exhibitors Refusing Film

Hind Views

Hollywood—One of the independent neighborhood houses, of the 35c-at-all-times brand, advertised a studio feature preview the other night. Film chatterers who are hot on the preview stuff attended en masse and found the "preview" to be "Anybody's Woman," released locally in many theatres here several months ago. The night following another "preview" was booked in and ran for three consecutive nights, heavily plugged. "Preview" was a quickie western that had been on the exchange shelf for about a year.

British Urged To Break Into Talker Market

Toronto—Concerted action on the part of British producers to fill the needs of the talker market is urged in the annual report of the Ontario censors. The report rebukes the prevalence of underworld pictures in the current market.

"With the advent of the talking films," says the report, "English-speaking countries form the greatest market. The British Empire appears to be the only unorganized portion of that market, with British production practically confined to Great Britain.

"But the mother country, as well as the Dominions, receives her main supply from the United States, which is the organized and most compact portion of the English-speaking market. If British production and distribution are ever to be anything more than an ideal, concerted action on the part of the British nations is necessary."

During the fiscal 12 months, only 17 British-made pictures were submitted to the board out of a total of 2,022 film subjects. Of this total, the board rejected 65 outright and approved 486 others after deletions or revision had been made. Pictures classified as "universal" or for family patronage numbered only 208, while only 194 were silent subjects out of the total of 2,022.

Basket Ball for Relief Fund

A triple-header basketball game and dance for the benefit of the Film Daily Relief Fund will be held Friday night under auspices of the M. P. Athletic Association. Warners will play RKO; Pathe and Columbia have been matched, and also Fox vs. M-G-M. The party is to be held aboard the U. S. S. Illinois, training ship stationed at 98th St. and the North River.

14 Radio Directors

Hollywood—Radio Pictures has 14 directors under contract with signing of Richard Boleslavsky, Russian legit director.

If Lurid Adjectives Are Used, Theatres Tell Exchanges They Can't Park Films

Washington—Neighborhood houses, chain-managed, have notified local exchanges that pictures advertised as sensationally sexy will not be booked for suburban release.

Several of the downtown first run houses have followed a policy of advertising in lurid adjectives whenever a red hot theme permits. The tag "Adults Only" has been stuck on where possible.

Neighborhood house managers report that where this practice has been followed, parents spot the sexy exploitation and refuse to permit their children to attend these pictures when they arrive for second runs.

The notification, not exactly an ultimatum, but received with plenty of respect by exchange managers, is believed to have been inspired by the Hays office in Washington which is reported in mortal dread of drastic action on Capitol Hill.

"Hell's Angels" Crashes Tampa's Week Schedule

Tampa—At last a picture has held the boards a full week at the Tampa. "Hell's Angels" turned the trick. Since the Tampa was built a policy of two changes in the week has been maintained, but this fall Manager Paul Short decided to try out a full week's run. "All Quiet on the Western Front" showed up fine on its four days' run and Short decided to hold it over for the remaining three, but the people were not used to the full week and the fifth day was a flop, so it was pulled and another picture substituted for the remaining two days. A second attempt was made with "Feet First," which was billed for the entire week, but it failed to make the grade and was pulled at the end of four days. Then Short decided to give it a third try and billed "Hell's Angels" for the full week, and it did the trick, playing the full week to excellent business.

Both Sides Confident With Patent Writ Near

Philadelphia—With both sides confident of victory, decision is scheduled soon on appeal of Erpi from the U. S. District Court's decision that its reproducer infringes the Reis patent. However, regardless of the way the case goes, immediate appeal will be made by the loser to the Supreme Court.

Paramount Answer Due Dec. 31 in "Trust" Suit

Boston—Answer of Paramount in the "trust" suit brought against the company by the Strand Amusement Co. of Portland, asking damages of $2,000,000, must be filed by Dec. 31. Motion for dismissal was denied in U. S. District Court here.

Beauty in Wide Film

One of the most picturesque short subjects ever to grace the screen of a Broadway theatre is on the current bill at the RKO Mayfair in New York.

Made with the Spoor-Berggren wide film process, the producers have picked Niagara Falls, an ideal locale, as the subject of one of the first short releases with this "natural vision" device. It's a photographic gem and certainly justifies the use of wide film and screen for scenic material. The symphonic musical accompaniment is on an equally high rating with the depth and beauty of this photographic masterpiece.

CUNNINGHAM.

Educ'al, Victor, Pathe Readying 16mm Projector

Following in the footsteps of the big electrics, the picture field is turning toward the home movie as a potential contributor of added revenue. Having been almost totally neglected because of a concentration of effort on sound development, the home field now is considered ripe for a wholesale invasion, and, within the next six months, at least five important producer-distributors will have launched a definite program for the production of 16mm subjects in sound, and, possibly, subsidiary units to manufacture portable projectors.

Educational and Pathe, both of which were important non-theatrical factors prior to the advent of sound, are understood to be secretly dickering with RCA-Photophone or RCA-Victor for licenses to manufacture portable sound-on-film machines for the 16mm market, while RCA-Victor is said to have finally developed a machine, to sell at $400, and including radio, victrola and projector.

Universal may tie up with another equipment manufacturer, supplying 16mm sound-on-disc and film versions for home use.

The current trend points toward almost exclusive use of sound-on-film subjects, which would mean that disc portables now on the market will have to be revamped.

It was a small town. Business was lousy. The manager of the "opery" sulked in his auditorium. Enter a film salesman and a magician, each trying to book a date.

The manager told them his tale of woe. The fillum man produced a bottle. When this was empty the magician offered to buy, so the manager introduced them to the local bootlegger, who sold them a bottle of "Poison Ivy" and the seance continued.

R. E. Atkins One Busy Guy; Has Job Monopoly

Busy? Nothing else but, this fellow R. E. Atkins, who operates the New Lyric at Elkeville. For, aside from his show shop, Atkins has an undertaking business, photograph studio, is in the electric and public service company business and tries his hand at politics on the side. His many occupations are outlined by Atkins in the following to a local electric firm, which had sent him a collection letter. Following is the letter as published by Editor and Publisher:

Dear Sir:

Replying hurriedly to your note regarding amounts due the firm, will say that I am aware of same, but I think there is some mistake in the books, but I cannot be sure until I check over my invoices. I am snowed under with work and have not had time to go over them just now. I also carry the undertaking business here, and I have been rushed day and night. I also operate above show and I have been so busy and worn out at nights that I neglected to take care of my film business, as I have a helper and he has bawled up my bookings.

I also have the photo studio and I have three weeks' work of pictures laying unfinished. I also am the Republican nominee for Supervisor of this Township on the County board, and with these many, many things to put my mind on and all different, I beg you to give me a little time to check over carefully my bills and then remit you. I am also carrying the exclusive electrical business here and have charge of the local public service company.

Business is good in every line I have, as our local mines are running steady. I shall give your letter my personal attention within the next few days. I buried two bodies yesterday, one for today and one for tomorrow. This business requires all my attention.

Thanking you in advence, I am

Yours very truly,

R. E. Atkins.

Proposal Seen as Harmful to Productions with Big B. O. Potentialities

Hollywood—Tough sledding for any attempt to set a hard and fast rule on production costs is forecast by studio workers. Under a plan, which has been progressing rapidly, a top of $400,000 would be set, and studios would be ordered to keep within that figure. However, the flexible nature of production budgets, and the tendency to "shoot the works" on stories with potentialities, make sound studio forces feel that any set maximum figure can't be maintained.

The plan is credited to Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox, who has pointed out to other producers the alarming situation caused by the proportionate cost of films and the amount of revenue they can command. Production nut has been much too high, and drastic steps are being ordered to meet the situation.

In carrying out such a plan, studio workers feel that producers may be riding into a jam, pointing out that in view of present conditions, entertainment values must be increased if pictures are to get the dough at the box office. They agree that waste must be eliminated, but feel that the maximum figure idea just won't work.

150 Unemployed Sell RKO Ducats In Washington

Washington—One hundred and fifty men and women started door to door sales of R-K-O theatre tickets last Monday morning. The solicitors receive 25 percent of their sales. Tickets are 50 cents, exchangeable at the box-office for admissions.

Those hired were obliged to show three letters of recommendation from some individual or agency known to the theatre. In addition, R-K-O is protected by a blanket bond written in New York covering all theatres from losses due to defaulting salesmen.

After the first two days the R-K-O office reported that the plan was fairly successful. It is a gesture to relieve unemployment and help the R-K-O box office at the same-time. War veterans are being given a preferential status in passing out these commission jobs.

Crass Critics

Chicago—The Castle theatre played host to the eight surviving fire-fighters of the Chicago blaze of 1871 at a matinee performance of "The Third Alarm." After viewing the film, the boys opined that they did things much better in the old days.

No Man's Land

Chicago—A 15-year-old boy who told detectives he wanted to be what they were when he was discovered in the Woods theatre many hours after closing got nothing but dirty looks from them. They thought the kid was implying that they were a bunch of burglars. The lad was discovered by a night watchman about 3 o'clock in the morning. He was tip-toeing down the stairway from the balcony where he had hidden after the last performance; thus revealing an intimate knowledge of local show business. He knew the balconies were as deserted as a country churchyard on New Year's Eve. He was armed with a gun and a star, and had removed his shoes and was carrying them in his hand. When discovered, he said he had fallen asleep during a performance.

Emelka Passes From Reich to French Bankers

Berlin—Climaxing two years of hectic financial wrangling, the German government has relinquished control of Emelka, one of the largest producing-distributing units in this industry. French financiers, headed by Albert Kohan, are the new owners, making the purchase through the local Kraus group.

Kohan was instrumental in bringing together the merger of French Gaumont-Franco-Film Albert and it is expected Emelka will join this amalgamation, acting as an outlet in Germany for French product and producing German talkers for distribution in France.

Emelka ran into difficulties, it was charged, because of its slowness in switching to sound, and passed to the Reich government in order to insure a German ownership of the company, which would guaranty a political influence in the weekly newsreel.

American and British interests are understood to have bid for Emelka.

Lehman Closes with Nat'l For Theatrephone Device

2 Weeks for "Today"

Boston—"Today" is rounding out a two weeks' run at the Park, which changed precedent to hold over the film, which Hollywood Films is distributing in this territory.

Ruling to Prove Death Blow for All Blue Laws?

Chicago—An opinion rendered by Circuit Court Judge Phillip Sullivan in the hearings of the Evanston Sunday movie case, if sustained, may be the death-blow to all blue laws, numerous Chicago attorneys believe. Judge Sullivan's opinion brands all blue laws as unconstitutional because of religious discrimination against sects which do not recognize Sunday as a religious holiday. It is his belief that all such legislation is in violation of that part of the constitution which guarantees religious liberty, and as such is unenforceable.

The present hearings in the Evanston case involve an appeal by theatre interests in the Chicago suburb for an injunction restraining Evanston police from enforcing the Sunday closing law. A ruling on the injunction is expected within the next few days.

Philly Fathers Still Feel Blue

Philadelphia—The anti-blue law campaign received a severe set-back when the city council committee, drafted to consider modification of the Act of 1794, rejected a resolution to open films and baseball games on Sunday by a three-to-two vote.

Action of the committee came in the nature of a surprise, as it was generally expected that it would present to the council a strong resolution against the Sunday laws in as much as Councilman "Bill" Roper, former Princeton football coach and a determined opponent of the blue laws, was chairman of a group apparently in accord with open-Sunday views.

Opposition to Roper became apparent when he introduced a plan whereby the Act of 1794 would be repealed and local option in favor of open Sunday be submitted at referendum throughout the state. His open Sunday plan would permit amusements to function between the hours of 2 P. M. and 11 P. M. on Sundays.

French Features Hit in Montreal

Montreal — French features are having quite a vogue in Montreal. At the Palace Manager George Rotsky used "Toute Sa Vie" for a special midnight pre-view performance on Dec. 12 when patrons of the final performance of "Morocco" were invited to wait over for the extra show without additional charge.

Manager Charles Lalumiere of the Roxy presented the Paramount French version of "The Doctor's Secret" as a regular first run attraction during the week starting Dec. 13. In recent weeks the Roxy has presented English, German, French and United States productions with fair success.

To protect their shots, they usually frame a lot of cussing directly into the mike, so that the objectionable recording outfit will be removed. ## Buffalo Houses Face New Fire Hazard Drive

Buffalo—Concerted drive to halt operation of all film theatres here not strictly fire resistive in construction has been started by the advisory committee of the juvenile protection department of the Children's Aid Society. This group quotes a survey to the effect that two of every five local theatres are conforming to all legal restrictions, but still constitute a fire hazard from their construction. At the same time, Fire Commissioner George W. Hadden has given all theatres now operating a clean bill of health, although some of the neighborhood and suburban houses which have been closed do not come in that category.

Personal Appearances Used by K. C. House

Kansas City—Louis Charninsky, manager of the Pantages here, is endeavoring to boost his box-office receipts with personal appearances of film stars. Charninsky, who now is in Los Angeles, has secured Belle Bennett and Mickey McGuire, star of Larry Darmour's juvenile shorts, as the forerunners of the new policy. Belle Bennett appeared on the Pantages stage last week. McGuire is booked for an early engagement.

Minneapolis Pantages Dark After Brief Try

Minneapolis—Considerable mystery surrounds closing of the Pantages, which went dark after a few weeks of low grosses. The house had reopened in November.

Huffman Houses Plan Big Stunts For Denver Poor

Denver—All five of Harry Huffman's houses here will contribute to the unemployed and needy at Christmas time. The Tabor will have a food matinee and for admission will accept a sack of potatoes, sugar, coffee or canned goods. These will be turned over to a mission. The America will give half the gross for one day from 11 to 6 to the Salvation Army for its unemployment fund and Army officials will be in charge of the house during this matinee. The Bluebird will have its annual toy matinee at which a toy in good condition or a book will admit. These will be used at the Motor Club party for children at the city auditorium on Christmas morning. At the Bide-a-Wee the entire receipts for one evening will be turned over to a committee of women for use among the poor in that section of the city. At the Aladdin Huffman will repeat his annual custom of entertaining over 1,500 inmates of orphanages and other institutions during Christmas week. Huffman also bought the second Salvation Army-Philco radio set sold here and will present this to some institution for Christmas.

$500,000 House For San Francisco

San Francisco—Plans for the first unit in a theatre building and expansion program were outlined at a luncheon given by San Francisco Theatres, Inc., of which Samuel H. Levin is president. Guests were newspaper men and officials of the Levin organization. The theatre to be built, a 2,000-seater costing $500,000, will be on Ocean Ave., occupying an entire square block between Fairfax and Fairfield. It will be completed about Aug. 1.

Those at the luncheon at the Palace Hotel were Samuel H. Levin, J. C. McCann, Timothy Pfluger, the architect, William Nasser, Alec E. Levin, Don Krull, Fred Johnson, Pat Casey, Harry Johannessen, Harold Wilson, Templeton Peck, Eric Coster, Leonard J. Williams, Homer E. Wall and Walter Barusch.

This was the announcement made here this week by Frank Whitbeck, director of advertising and publicity for the circuit, who has been conferring here with Robert Bender, division manager for the Fox organization, and Vic Gauntlett, Pacific Northwest publicity head.

There'll Be a First National Franchise In Chicago for the Next Five Years

A Real Bet

Hollywood—Joan Crawford's latest picture, "Dance, Fool, Dance," is a potential box-office smash with all the elements of real screen entertainment, coupled with great action. It has fine direction and a swell story, so it should make box-office history. William Bakewell, Lester Vail and Cliff Edwards give fine portrayals, but Miss Crawford, as usual, takes top acting honors. Harry Beaumont directed this.

Dunas, Weinberg Fill New Sales Jobs at Columbia

New sales system of Columbia has swung into operation under Joe Goldberg, general sales manager of the company. Under the new plan, the nation is divided into two territories, with Phil Dunas in charge of the western and Lou Weinberg in charge of the eastern divisions. Weinberg formerly was in charge of short subject sales, while Dunas was district manager at Chicago. Under the plan, shorts as well as features will be handled by both division heads in their respective zones.

Phil Dunas

Dunas will have supervision over the following offices: Chicago, Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis and Butte.

Lou Weinberg

Exchanges under Weinberg's jurisdiction are: Albany, Atlanta, Boston, Buffalo, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Memphis, New Haven, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington.

Alexander Successor?

Chicago—Branch Manager Roy Alexander is regarded as in line for Phil Dunas' post as district head for Columbia. In event Alexander gets the post, Harry Phillips, salesman, is expected to get the branch.

H. J. Merle Hangs Onto Pact And Gets Fine Break Over His Competitor

Warners are rapidly cleaning up outstanding First National sub-franchises, which are virtually extinct throughout the nation. One of the few remaining is that of the Irving, Chicago suburban, owned by H. J. Merle, who purchased the house originally as a family plaything. Several years ago the number of sub-franchises sold was in excess of 5,000.

Most of them were for short terms and expired during recent years, but a lot were turned back to First National because of reported dissatisfaction over the clause which required country exhibitors to road-showshow at advanced prices any picture which played New York and Chicago first runs at advanced prices. Warners, anxious to clear up the whole thing, accepted such cancellations without protest and even bought up several unexpired franchises. An offer was made to Merle for the franchise he holds, but he refused it because he "had had it a long time; wasn't sure about what its advantages were at the time the offer was made, and didn't have time to look it up."

One of the advantages it gives him is priority with First National product over eight theatres which compete with the Irving in the northwest side neighborhood. According to Chicago's release system, if it were not for the franchise, the Irving would be obliged to follow four of those theatres—two of them are now Warner houses—and could do no better than play day and date with the other four.

Merle is not actively engaged in the management of the Irving. His principal interests are a north side hotel and the Andrews Chair Co., downtown. That explains why he knew so little about the last-but-one First National franchise which he holds. It has five more years to run.

Charity Shows Given Break at Gouverneur

Gouverneur, N. Y.—This village has approved benefit Sunday shows. James P. Papayanokos, owner of the Graylin, is responsible. He was up before the village board last week and said that he had been asked to give a benefit performance for the village hospital, and that he was perfectly willing to give not only one but two shows on Sunday and turn over the proceeds to the hospital. This the board decided to allow. A Sunday film issue was lost in Gouverneur last summer by a few votes.

Ruby Moves Plant and Office

Ruby Camera Exchange, headed by Irving ("Ruby") Rubinstein, has moved headquarters to the second floor at 727 7th Ave., New York, where he now has the entire floor. The portable sound projector factory at Long Island City has also been switched to the new quarters.

Page Tennyson

The printer who was doing Sono Art-World Wide's heralds for "Jaws of Hell," which is a picturization of "The Charge of the Light Brigade," called up the ad department to apologize for leaving the author's name off the front page. With this apology came a note asking, "Do you think the author will be sore?"

PhotophoneSound Ad Projector Is Put on Market

A novel automatic advertising projector, designed to accommodate standard-sized sound film, has been perfected by RCA Photophone in collaboration with the Auto Cinema Corp., which has had a silent motion picture advertising projector on the market for several months. The announcement was made by Sydney E. Abel, Photophone general sales manager. The machine itself, a compact piece of engineering workmanship, operates within a neatly modeled metal housing occupying a space less than two feet square. The projector is motor-driven with power supplied from an ordinary lamp socket. Projector, amplifier, motor and six-inch speaker are within a cabinet, similar in appearance to a radio console, which stands about five feet, six inches high. The picture is thrown upon a transparent screen, 18 by 22 inches in dimension, near the top of the cabinet. The entire equipment, including cabinet, weighs less than 100 pounds. When placed in operation, the film is endless self-rewinding, permitting repetition of the subject indefinitely. The sound amplification can be controlled to any desired volume.

Secretary Robbed

Portland—Miss Nelle Shumate, secretary to Manager Dutton of the Portland branch of the National Theatre Supply Co., was interrupted by a bandit, who at gunpoint stripped three diamond rings from her fingers and escaped with an additional $25 from the till.

Warners Aid T. B. "San"

Hollywood—Harry M. and Jack Warner are donating furnishings and equipment for the Sam and Milton Warner memorial building at the Los Angeles Sanatorium at Duarte. The building was completed some time ago. It will be a free and non-sectarian institution.

N. Y. Critics O K Spoor Process, But Don't Rave

Critics received the Spoor-Berggren wide-film process at its initial New York showing at the Mayfair, with a fairly warm reception, but not one that might be considered a "rave." The Evening World and Morning Telegraph believe it to be the best of wide film processes, while the Graphic and Herald-Tribune let it down coldly.

The concensus pointed toward an accomplishment of third dimensional qualities, and a generally favorable opinion was voiced with regard to outdoor and scenic shots.

A brief summary of opinions of New York critics on the Spoor-Berggren process follows:

AMERICAN—* * * As with competitive devices, this process is most effectively used in panoramic shots. And these are plentifully present. Robbed of "Natural Vision," the film would be an obvious little program attraction. * * *

DAILY MIRROR—There is a genuine three-dimension illusion about this. * * * The wide screen offers magnificent depth to scenery, thrilliog reality to the action. It transforms an average railroad tbriller into an exciting and impressive film. * * *

EVENING WORLD—* * * The impression of third dimensiou really is gained. * * * Characters in the picture take on a sort of embossed appearance like tbose of bas relief. Trees appear rounded, just as in natural life and infinite depth is gained in panoramas. * * * Is a long stride in advance of * * * competitors, for its backgrounds are seldom blurred as they are in other wide-film pbotography * * *.

GRAPHIC—* * * Except in shots of huge engines or panoramic scenes taken outdoors, the greater size does not materially aid the production. Rather, at times, it seemed a detriment to the vocal effects * * *.

HERALD-TRIBUNE—* * * Once the eye is accustomed to the greater scope of the screen, aod, accordiogly, the larger proportions of every object upoo it, the photoplay becomes exactly the same as it would if shown ou a smaller scale * * * except that the scenery is given more sweep and possibly magoificence by looming up several times larger tban ordinary.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—* * * Quite the best of the much-touted large screen processes * * * succeeds to a far greater degree than the other wide-film methods in giving a stereopticon effect that provides an illusion of depth. * * * Wide film serves no particular purpose in itself, and while it may enhance a few outdoor scenes, it adds nothing to the dramatic qualities of any screen story * * *.

TIMES—* * * There is a good deal to admire about tbis new wide film * * *.

Brilliancy Held Constant in Wide Films by Cone

Rochester—Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., pioneer in the projection lens field, has obtained patents on its new condensing system designed to assure constant brilliancy for wide angle films through creation of a larger cone of light by substitution of an oval for round light spot in the rectangular aperture.

The new system, perfected by W. B. Rayton, director of the company's scientific bureau, is composed of a 5½-inch diameter element with sphere cylindrical surfaces and a 6-inch element with sphero paraholic surfaces. A new system of projection lenses, made of special heat resisting glass, also are used with the condenser.

The system is used for 70-millimeter film, but can be used also for standard film.

New Phone Plan in Work

Effective this week, a numeral will be added to each central phone office name in New York City. In dialing the new way, two letters (instead of three as heretofore) should be used, followed by the new line number. For example, the old method of dialing the Hays office was: LEX 5000. The new way is: LE—2—5000.

The new code numbers of central offices where majority of film companies are located follows:

Oldknow to Map Policy of Coast Publix Theatres

Los Angeles—Policies of the six Paramount houses in Coast keys taken over by Fox West Coast Theatres will be determined upon the return here of Oscar Oldknow, executive vice-president of the Fox circuit.

Oscar A. Oldknow

The deal, said to involve $20,000,000, calls for the turning over of three theatres at San Francisco, two at Portland and one at Seattle to Fox West Coast, which also is taking over the Paramount building project at Oakland. It sews up for Fox West Coast the Paramount and First National product in these situations.

Paramount is withdrawing from theatre operation on the Coast, with the exception of the local Paramount. Meanwhile, Warners and United Artists are girding for a theatre battle in Coast keys, while Harold B. Franklin is surveying the situation, preparatory to launching his proposed national chain. Warners, according to M. A. Silver, general manager of the company's Coast chain, will have 35 theatres in operation along the Pacific Seaboard soon after Jan. 1.

Aschmann Appointed Div. Manager for Big Four

Milwaukee—Bill Aschmann was this week appointed division chief for Big 4, supervising Omaha, Minneapolis and Milwaukee at present and later taking over jurisdiction of all midwestern offices.

Aschmann appointed A. B. Seymour as special representative in Nebraska-Iowa, with E. W. Jensen in charge at Minneapolis. Until a new representative is named, Aschmann will handle the Milwaukee office.

Contract Exclusive

Hollywood—Ralph Spence is to write exclusively for Radio Pictures under terms of his contract with William Le Baron.

Stage Shows in Rochester Houses To Battle RKO

Rochester—Stage shows, despite absence of which downtown houses have been able to make money for all of nine months, are due to come back with a bang after Jan. 1 in the two biggest theatres in the city, the Publix Eastman and Loew's Rochester.

Louis K. Sidney, stage show producer at the New York Capitol, was in town to announce that the Rochester will launch a 30-piece concert orchestra, a stage band and Loew unit shows, without any deviation from the film policy the house has been offering. Victor Wagner, former conductor of the Eastman orchestra, has been signed to direct the concert ensemble at the Rochester.

A day later it was announced that the Eastman would stage a gala flesh show New Year's night at the outset of another combined film and stage unit policy. The move is being made with the feeling that the time is here for stage shows, despite the fact that Publix found them useless two years ago and despite its creditable profits on a straight film policy at the Eastman.

The result will be a neck-and-neck fight among the two theatres and the RKO Palace, which has been running vaude and film since its advent two years ago this Christmas.

Washington 1st Runs Provide Benefit Shows

Washington—All three first-run theatres, the Fox, Loew's Palace and the Earle, got together for a midnight benefit performance for Washington orphans.

The show was held under the auspices of the Washington Times and the Fox and Palace sent over acts to supplement the full performance at Warners' Earle.

The Thursday midnight performance was a sell-out and the Washington orphans, 1,000 strong, will meet Santa Claus at the Rialto Theatre on the morning of Dec. 24.

Managing Director Payette for Warners, Michael J. Cullen for Loew's and Hardie Meakin for the Fox made the special show possible.

Gross Wrong

In an article on the theatre situation in Detroit in the Nov. 29 issue of Motion Picture News it was inadvertently stated that unless the Michigan theatre there grosses $84,000 weekly it is understood to be running at a loss. The figure intended was $24,000 weekly.

Aids Relief Program

St. Louis—Fred Wehrenberg, president of the eastern Missouri and southern Illinois unit, has made theatres of local members available as relief depots in campaign of the Star to provide clothes for the needy.

'Angels,' 'Nurse' Gather Portland Coin in Bundles

Portland—"Hell's Angels" came at last to the Fox United Artists theatre and hung up another first night record to the glare of dozens of Kleig lights, and accompanied by eight planes which hovered overhead and dropped down the news to the long waiting lines. Six performances daily were necessary to appease the multitudes and the operators gathered in the Xmas money with overtime, the house rolling up a gross of $16,400.

Widely heralded as the sequel to "The Big Parade," "War Nurse" quickly became a big subject at the Fox Broadway, and the word-of-mouth advertising brought increased business and gross of $14,800.

One Day for "Today"

Philadelphia—"Today" was yanked at the Earle this week after one day's showing. Censors had cut to such an extent that the Stanley-Warner Co. preferred to withdraw it rather than show it in its altered form. Columbia's "Rain or Shine" was substituted at the last minute as the feature for the week.

'Her Man' Cracks Buffalo Record; Grosses $21,500

Buffalo — While "Morocco" bettered "Tom Sawyer's" mark, giving Shea's Buffalo, with the aid of Lillian Roth in person, a gross of $34,400, best of the winter, the big news is still what the Lafayette is doing. "Her Man" gave that house a new record, $21,500.

Management expressed regret that prior bookings prevented holding over the Pathe feature. So many were turned away on one or two nights that extra ad space was taken in newspapers, apologizing for inability of the theatre to accommodate all patrons.

"Just Imagine" was only so-so at the Great Lakes, which has had tough sledding for some time. Loew's vaudeville unit shows are scheduled to be restored Christmas week, when the house will shift to Friday openings.

Jones, born at St. Louis, entered the industry with O. T. Crawford in his home town, later joining Keystone on the Coast where he supervised comedies made by that unit. Switching to Sennett, he became director and supervisor, and then director-general for Roach.

Jones directed Fairbanks in "The Gaucho" and Colman in "Bulldog Drummond," both for United Artists, and three features for Paramount.

Goetz Has New Wrinkle

Charles Goetz, president of States Cinema, has opened headquarters at the New York Chrysler Bldg., where he has launched plans to use extra players for modeling for magazine work, posters, photographers and ad campaigns. Tieups are to be made with Eastern studios whereby the latter, in turn, will find screen talent at the new organization.

It is Goetz' plan to work out a co-operative deal with studios, with the latter submitting lists of players, particularly part-timers, who are eligible for calls from magazine and other commercial artists and photographers in need of models.

"Paid's" $23,000 Is Real Dough in Los Angeles Drop

Los Angeles—Christmas shopping is cutting into night business and grosses are light all over town, although matinees are holding up well. The Criterion, with "Paid," did the best business in months and the picture proved the city's real box-office bet. Considering odds, two-a-day houses held up well. The Orpheum, with "The Boudoir Diplomat," nosedived to $7,000. Hollywood houses took it on the chin due to the Christmas rush.

"Hell's Angels" Grabs $37,000 For Frisco Top

San Francisco—Practical elimination of two Market St. theatres—the Embassy and the Davies, the two houses which had been losing ground steadily—characterized last week. The Embassy, after a prolonged period of losses, went from the hands of W. B. Wagnon to those of D. S. Markowitz, who owned the lease on the property. From Markowitz they passed to Warners direct. The latter immediately closed the theatre with the announcement that it would reopen about Dec. 25. The Davies, still a W. B. Wagnon theatre, embarks on a second run two-a-week policy.

Outstanding in the business of the week was that done by the Warfield, which with "Hell's Angels" led every theatre in the city, grossing $37,000 easily. This is the first week of this super spectacle and there is every indication, despite the depression talk, that the picture will establish a nice long run.

All the other houses indicated comparatively small grosses, the Fox, as usual, leading the rest with $33,000 with "A Lady's Morals." Golden Gate with "See America Thirst" grossed around $17,000, while Paramount, leading Publix house, with "Fast and Loose" rang up but $16,000. The lowest in town was the St. Francis with $5,500, featuring "Extravagance."

Altogether an off-week, which is usually expected just before Christmas.

Toy Xmas Matinee

Tampa—George Peck, manager of the Park, is boosting a "Kiddies' Xmas Toy Matinee," with the provision that all children bringing an old toy to the theatre on Saturday will be admitted free. The toys so collected will be refinished and repaired and then turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution to the poor children of the city on Christmas.

Mike's Big Bull Raid

Mike Edelstein, managing the Mt. Morris in New York, has seen so many gang pictures in recent months that he has acquired a knowledge of the fine points of gangland, as proved when some one phoned his home and told him that his projection booth was ablaze.

Mike called a restaurant near the theatre and found there was no foundation for the "tip." Thinking fast, Mike called the police, who found a couple of yeggs in the theatre waiting for the manager to oblige them with the safe's combination.

"Hell's Angels" Clicks $12,750 Worth at Omaha

Omaha—"Hell's Angels" zoomed into town for the biggest week at the Paramount in several months. Picture did $12,750 and is slated for a second run downton, probably at the State.

The picture was exploited from every angle. Even to an "aviation night" at local hotel supper dance which cost the theatre not a dime. Magnascope screen added plenty of thrills to the air battle.

Business sagged at the other houses, but not alarmingly. At the World, "Derelict" brought $9,900. Walter Hiers, topping the stage bill, didn't help much. Bancroft is still a winner here.

For the first time in several weeks the Orpheum dropped slightly under par with "The Bad Man," grossing $14,725. Mild stage bill with Joseph E. Howard. "Up the River," first half at the State, made money at $2,475. Flop of the week was "Only Saps Work," last four days at the same house. Only $2,125.

'Morocco,' 'Hell's Angels' Divide Seattle Honors

Seattle—"Morocco" at the Paramount and "Hell's Angels" in its first local engagement at regular prices at Hamrick's Music Box were among the lead films of the last week. The former, widely publicized in advance, succeeded in getting about $13,500 for the run. Howard Hughes' "mighty epic of the air" took about $9,000 at the Music Box, for a big week. It will go another seven days as a result.

"The Big Trail" at the Fox in its second week played to pleasing business, getting about $9,500, which is satisfactory for a follow-up engagement. The Fifth Avenue, with "Oh, for a Man," was rated weak as far as the film attraction went, but Rube Wolf and Fanchon & Marco's current act were plugged heavily and the house took about $14,000. "Big Money" at the Blue Mouse was just another picture.

Hot Stuff Puts Damper on B. O. At Des Moines

Des Moines—Programs bordering on the risque, while appealing to a large proportion of the adult population, resulted in a paucity of kid attendance and a drop in grosses. Stage show attractions for the week were below grade, and Christmas shopping also made a dent in receipts. "Hell's Angels" took in $25,000 for 13 days, which is quite an achievement.

Despite the fact that newspapers insist upon reporters getting the correct names of persons and organizations, the press seems to be in ignorance of what organization Will Hays is the head. # "Blue Angel" Is Only Big Dough Getter in N. Y.

Giving the boys on the main stem only a slight idea of what's in store in the way of holiday slump, grosses on Broadway assumed a sickening hue. # "Tol'able David" And Vaude Garner $29,800 Chi Top

Chicago—Loop business maintained a normal average for the most part, with three houses bettering that pace. Daytime business is in good volume with holiday shoppers taking time off from department store counters to rest their dogs under theatre seats. Night business, in most houses, shows a decided falling off. Neighborhood houses appear to be the only ones actually feeling the seasonal slump expected in December.

The Palace was one of the Loop's three bright spots during the past week. "Tol'able David," earning plug reviews, headed a nice vaude-film bill which gave the house its second consecutive $30,000 week. McVickers crashed the prosperity group with $41,500 for ten days of "Min and Bill." The third money house was the United Artists, which collected a decent $24,700 for the third week of "Hell's Angels," with the picture holding over for another week.

Realife didn't mean a thing to either critics or public, so the Oriental had to content itself with a poor $34,100. "A Lady's Morals" was also mediocre in its first five days at the Roosevelt at $13,400. Other houses were average.

Estimated takings:

"SHAME OF MARY BOYLE" (B. I.)

CASTLE—(299), 60c, first 4 days. Other attractions: News. Picture played two weeks as "Juno and the Paycock" at the Punch & Judy during November. This title and better location of theatre is doubling the earlier business. Gross: $2,800. Final 7 days, "Third Alarm" (Tiffany) collected $3,900.

"JUST IMAGINE" (Fox)

CHICAGO—(3,940), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, orchestra, comedy, news, novelty short. B. & K. gave the picture some additional advance advertising, but it didn't help much. Gross: $40,200.

"BILLY, THE KID" (M-G-M)

ORIENTAL—(3,900), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, organ, news, comedy, musical short. Realife meant nothing to either critics or customers, and house finished the week only two grand above the red line. Gross: $34,100.

"MIN AND BILL" (M-G-M)

McVICKERS—(2,284), 35c-85c, first 10 days. Other attractions: Comedy, news, musical short. Exceptionally nice first week trade, tapering off slightly in second. Gross: $41,500.

"THE GORILLA" (F. N.)

ORPHEUM—(665), 40c-50c, 7 days. Other attractions: News, 2 Vitaphone acts. Average pace, but a setback from recent weeks. Gross: $5,200.

"TOL'ABLE DAVID" (Columbia)

PALACE—(2,509), 35c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, headed by Tom Patricola, orchestra, news, comedy, cartoon. With $3,200 less overhead, this bill grossed the same as the preceding week's with Moran & Mack on stage. Nice reviews and picture credited with the draw, as Patricola name doesn't mean much here. Gross: $29,800.

"A LADY'S MORALS" (M-G-M)

ROOSEVELT—(1,591),35c-85c, first 5 days. Other attractions: News, comedy, song short. Modest business despite plug reviews in Hearst papers and lavish additional display space in the same sheets. Gross: $13,400. Final of three weeks, "Life of the Party" (W. B.): $15,100.

"HER MAN" (Pathe)

STATE-LAKE—(2,776), 35c-75c, first 4 days. Other attractions: Cartoon, musical short, news. Good exploitation helping this one set a nice pace. Gross: About $16,000. Final 6 days, "Sin Takes a Holiday" (Pathe): $14,700.

"HELL'S ANGELS" (Caddo-U. A.)

UNITED ARTISTS—(1,700), 35c-85c, third week. Other attractions: News, comedy, musical short. Good at this figure, but only a few grand above the normal average for the house. Looks like two more weeks will finish it. Gross: $26,700.

"ATLANTIC" (B. I.)

WOODS—(1,166), 35c-75c, first 3 days. Other attractions: News, cartoon. Swell reviews and a nice start. Gross: About $6,600. Final 7 days, "Today" (Majestic): $11,100.

"White Hell" at Mpls. Shows B. O. Drawing Strength

Minneapolis—"Morocco" did good business at the Minnesota and Marlene Dietrich registered a hit, but the business would have been much better had not the mothers of the high school flappers got the idea that it was a little too devilish for them.

It went against two holdovers—"Hell's Angels" at the Century and "Sin Takes a Holiday" at the Seventh Street, which moved over from the RKO Orpheum. There was nothing else much on the week's program that caused any excitement except "White Hell of Pitz Palu," which opened to almost capacity business at the Uptown, which has not for some time been on the first-run list.

"White Hell" goes downtown now for the second half of the week at the Grand, a split-week house, and the rest of the week's bill is a complete change in all the first-run houses.

"Morocco" may have done a little better than normal at the Minnesota. "Big Money" at the RKO Orpheum hardly reached the average for that house. "Derelict" took no more than normal at the State. "Hell's Angels" at the Century got its share and perhaps a little more. "Sin Takes a Holiday" took only about a third of what it had done the week before at the Orpheum. Pantages fell off slightly with "Extravagance," although it has been doing well with the Tiffany list. Lyric and Aster did about the usual business with "Fast and Loose" and "Devil with Women," respectively.

Coupon Car Tickets

Dayton, O.—Local houses expect to profit by a plan put into effect by the retail merchants, who are sponsoring free rides on the city street cars from any part of the city to the heart of the downtown business district each Saturday between 9 and 11 A. M. The only requirement necessary to obtain the free transportation is for the passenger to present a coupon clipped from local dailies.

The "H——" Of It

In the current cinema census "Hell" seems to be copping the dough. "Hell's Angels," "Hell's Harbor," "Hell's Heroes" and "The Doorway To Hell" are big money makers. And now Ronald Colman's forthcoming film blossoms out as "The Devil to Pay," while Warner Brothers keep the brimstone brewing by announcing that Frank Fay will be starred in "The Devil Is Sick"—and so are we of titles like that.—*The Pathfinder.

Marlene Panics "Philly" Taking $22,900 to Lead

Philadelphia — Marlene Dietrich took Philadelphia by storm, herding droves into Keith's at every performance and helping "Morocco" to a gross of $22,900, the biggest week done by the house since its opening as the Paramount flagship a few months ago. It beat "Animal Crackers," the inaugural attraction, by $1,000 on the week and topped "Feet First," the second high, by a two thousand gross. It is being retained for a second week.

The next excitement of the week was the $15,000, reached by "Min and Bill" at the Stanton after its record-breaking $56,000 week at the Mastbaum. Yanked out of the latter house by the weekly change policy, it took a figure that was 50 per cent better than the average week at the Stanton. It is staying a second week, and may last a third.

The rest of the business slumped off to normal or worse. The Mastbaum took a fair $40,000 with "The Cat Creeps"; the Fox landed $26,500, a fair figure with "Just Imagine," and the Earle got an average $18,000 with "Man to Man."

The Stanley took a second "licking" in a row with a poor $13,000 for "Du Barry," while the rest of the downtown houses were "off."

$23,200 Is Smash Gross for "Min & Bill" at "Cincy"

Cincinnati—"Min and Bill" at the RKO Lyric came within shouting distance of an all-time record this week, piling up the remarkable gross of $23,200, which is only $700 below the 17-year house record recently established by "The Big House." Although these two pictures, which, coincidentally, co-star Wallace Beery, have registered the two highest grosses in the history of this house, the record of "Min and Bill" is the more unusual from a standpoint of actual achievement, because it was "on its own," whereas "The Big House" had the advantage of state-wide advertising accruing from the Ohio censors having held the picture up for virtually half a year. The engagement of "Min and Bill" was extended another week.

RKO Albee, vaudefilm, with "The Cat Creeps" on the screen and Jack Pearl topping the flesh talent, showed an improvement over the intake for the previous week. "Hell's Angels," which was roadshown at the Shubert here earlier in the season at $2 top, but which folded after three weeks of an original four weeks' booking, did an even $20,000 at RKO Palace, down about two grand from the previous seven days. The other houses were either slightly up or broke about even with the preceding reports.

Shenandoah, Iowa—Harry Leffert, manager of the Mayfair, has resigned to join the Nebraska Theatres Corp., operating a chain of neighborhood houses in Omaha. He was formerly with the State-Zenith Theatres here.

Xmas Shopping Fails to Harm Denver Grosses

Denver—Grosses were average or better in spite of Christmas shopping. "Half Shot at Sunrise" brought the Rialto back from a bad week and put it above the average. With little or no exploitation the take, $4,000, is very good.

"Min and Bill," coupled with a good stage show, turned in figures better than the previous week, but not what was expected. The Denver patrons, at least a large part of them, go to this house to see Ted Mack and the stage show each week. The Denver Grand orchestra, led by Fred Schmidt, is also an important factor in the grosses here. "The Dancers" let the Tabor down a grand from the former week.

"Sin Takes a Holiday" boosted the gross at the Aladdin to $7,000, which is not a bad figure for this house as it does not open until 2 P. M.

With a winning exploitation campaign, "Morocco" put the gross at the Paramount a grand over the previous. Jackie and Jean put on an unusually good organ presentation.

"SIN TAKES A HOLIDAY" (Pathe)

RKO-Pathe Deal May Eliminate English PDC

London—RKO's deal for Pathe, scheduled for radification by the latter's stockholders early in January, will give the combined organizations two distributing units in England. Radio distributes through its own company here, newly formed, and Pathe via P.D.C.

While no word has seeped through from New York regarding the future, it is generally anticipated that the parent company will dominate, which means that P.D.C. either will be absorbed or scrapped by Radio.

Bowman Succeeds Heiner

Oklahoma City—J. D. Bowman, formerly associated with Warners' Missouri in St. Louis, has taken over duties as manager of the Warner Liberty here. He succeeds R. Heiner, who has been transferred back to St. Louis.

Marlene's Rudi

Marlene Dietrich, who dabbles with makeup and histrionics over at the Paramount studios, is kept busy starring in "Dishonored" and telling the press she and Director Josef von Sternberg certainly are not engaged to be married.

Marlene has a husband in Berlin, if you've got to know! And a report which came from Germany yesterday says that Rudi Sieber, husband of the new Paramount star, has filed an action against a certain Fred Rotter, who is said to have slandered Marlene's fair name.

So, you see, while Marlene makes movies in Hollywood, Rudi fights for her in Germany.—N. Y. Daily News.

$8,500 for "Tom Sawyer" High At Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City—"Morocco" proved a popular hit with a gross of $8,000 at the Capitol, but "Tom Sawyer," with Mitzi Green and Jackie Coogan, was good for the high with $8,500 at the Criterion, a Publix house. "Just Imagine" came in for $8,200 at the Mid-West and "Devil with Women" with RKO vaudeville was good for nearly $7,000 at the Warners' Liberty.

The gross on "Tom Sawyer" was cut down materially due to the fact that Pat McGee, district manager for Publix, entertained more than 3,000 children at the Criterion and Capitol free of charge for this film. Each kid bringing a toy for the poor of the city was admitted to a Saturday morning show free.

Estimated takings:

Changes Boston House Name

Boston — The Keith-Albee, RKO house, has been renamed the Keith-Boston in order to perpetuate the name of the old Boston theatre although the present Keith Memorial is located on the site of the old Boston. A change in policy to four shows daily instead of three has been made.

Brese Gets Assignment

Scranton—William Brese, graduate of the Paramount school in New York, has been summoned to headquarters of Comerford-Paramount-Publix and assigned to manage the Gem, South Scranton. The house has a capacity of 600. Brese succeeds Joseph Rosar.

"Min and Bill" Shatter Albany Record for Year

Albany—"Min and Bill" established a new box-office record for the year at Harmanus-Bleecker Hall, filling the tills to the extent of a little better than $14,000, which is mighty good money for a house which up until a year or two ago, when Chris Buckley took it over, was regarded as a white elephant. "Min and Bill" had them coming from the time the door of the theatre was first opened, ticket selling being stopped on two or three nights when the big house simply bulged. Undoubtedly the picture will be brought back later to the downtown Leland, also owned by Buckley.

Clara Bow in "Her Wedding Night" failed to come across to the extent expected at the Leland. "Sunny," at the Strand, ran to better than normal business, although probably not to the extent expected. "Sin Takes a Holiday," running for the first three days of the week at Proctor's Grand, went over well. The picture might well have been held for the entire week, except for the policy of the house in changing every three days. Christmas business has not made any appreciable cut into the theatres of Albany as yet.

'3 French Girls' And Dorsay Take Montreal Dough

Montreal—The Capitol, with a Frenchy film and stage bill, enjoyed the lion's share of the business in Montreal during the week, but the lion was rather meek at that. The Capitol featured "Those Three French Girls" and one of the girls, Fifi Dorsay, formerly of Montreal, was also on the stage with a Publix unit, "Enchanted Forest." The result was $18,000 and this was way ahead of the rest.

Next in line was the Palace with "Morocco." Although Gary Cooper has always been a draw here, the week wound up with only $14,000. "Up the River" put the Princess into a slump with $8,500, which might be considered terrible.

The Roxy tried a German picture called "Spaventa," but the crowd would not spend the cash to see it even though it was coupled with a Chaplin re-issue. The Roxy drifted into the red column with $1,800. Loew's felt the Christmas shopping in a drop to $11,500 with "Squealer."

Municipal Ticket Tax Opposed at St. Louis

St. Louis—The Central Trades and Labor Union has gone on record as opposed to the proposed 10 per cent city tax on amusement admissions and restaurant checks. The legislation committee of the body was urged to vigorously oppose the proposed tax. Several speakers expressed the belief that if the board of aldermen would take fewer junketing trips at public expense and otherwise watch city funds more closely there would be no need for the suggested tax.

Top Ottawa Spot To Shorts Billed With "Laughter"

Ottawa—The worst night that any Ottawa exhibitor can remember—at least for some years back—was experienced Thursdays. It was stormy and there was a professional hockey game as well, resulting in averages tumbling despite fair business generally for the rest of the week. House parties are off until Christmas and those craving amusement turn to theatres, as stores in Ottawa are required to close at 6. P. M. daily—excepting three days before Christmas. This leaves the field open to the cinemas.

"Fast and Loose" and "Up a Tree" at Keith's were both slashed by the censors and the bill drew $2,700 for the three days, the lowest in weeks. "Laughter" registered $3,400 at the Regent for six days, but at least half of this can be credited to the shorts, "Racket Cheers" and "The Shindig," which got more lip advertisement than the Nancy Carroll vehicle. The Imperial was off to $2,100 with "The Dancers," even though the locale of the story is supposed to be in Canada.

Champion, Gauntlett Swap Jobs in N. W.

Seattle—William (Ted) Champion, for the last two years affiliated with Fox West Coast Theatres in this territory, and for the last six months director of advertising and publicity for local Fox houses, this week will assume a similar position with John Hamrick, as supervisor of publicity and advertising for the five Hamrick theatres in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. He succeeds Vic Gauntlett, who held that position in the Hamrock organization for the last nine years.

Champion and Gauntlett, in fact, have practically exchanged positions, for Gauntlett resigned from the Hamrick chain two weeks ago to become Northwest director of advertising and publicity for the Fox group, under the direction of Robert Bender, new division manager.

Xmas Shopping Socks Toronto B. O. Grosses

Toronto—Practically the same story can be written around every feature at Toronto theatres. Too much Christmas shopping; too much hockey; too much snow; too much unemployment and too little money—and not one picture looked head and shoulders above the rest. The Imperial did not have a screen star on the stage for a change and the Publix stage unit, "Putt Putt," might have gone across big six months ago, but meant nothing now with all the miniature courses folded for the winter. "Life of the Party" headed the screen bill of fare and the revenue from the party was only $15,000. Loew's dropped to $14,500 with "Remote Control" and "Big Boy" at Shea's was low boy with $11,000. The Uptown was gloomy with "Sunny" with only $11,000 coming and the Tivoli was almost intolerable with $10,500 for "Tol'able David." The exhibitors are glad the week is over but there's still another week before Christmas.

Mt. Gilead, Ohio—The Kaypee, said to be the smallest first-run house in the state equipped with sound, has been taken over by the Skirboll interests under a long term lease. The house, which has been under management of Cliff Granger, is owned by the Pythian Castle Co., a holding organization.

Fox, Warshauer Transferred

Eddie Cantor and "Brothers" Gross $26,500 at Cleve.

Cleveland—The Christmas jinx slowed down business at all theatres excepting the RKO Palace, where Eddie Cantor in person drew crowded houses daily, chalking up a gross of $26,500. Big attractions, all favorably reviewed by local critics, failed to pull the crowds. Another reason for the drop in attendance was the heavy competition. Lawrence Tibbett appeared for a single concert to a capacity audience. George M. Cohan himself appeared in "The Tavern," playing a week's engagement at the Ohio. "Artists and Models" drew well at the Hanna, and 11,000 attended a boxing bout sponsored by The News, all net profits of which were turned over to its Christmas fund. There was no kick on the weather, but that was the only thing about which there wasn't a kick.

"Sea Legs" Aided By Stage Show to $19,100 at Balto.

Baltimore—The pre-holiday slump is being felt and patronage appears to be off. Also, the coming Sunday benefit performances at all theatres may have held back patronage until that day, when receipts went to aid the unemployed.

High grosses for the week went to Loew's Century and the Stanley. At the former the gross was figured at $19,100 for "Sea Legs" and the stage unit "Tangled Traffic," rating a very good week, while at the Stanley "The Bat Whispers," with extra advertising space taken, grossed $16,500, also very good.

"Madonna of the Streets" proved an excellent pulling attraction at the Rivoli, doing a 100 per cent business and grossing about $8,000.

"Min and Bill" proved an excellent puller, being shown simultaneously at the Valencia and Parkway after a week at the Valencia and one at the Stanley. The gross at the Valencia came to about $3,100 and the gross at the Parkway, uptown, shot up to $4,300.

Scandal Sheet

(Paramount)

Great Audience Stuff

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

THERE isn't a newspaperman in the country who will give this latest Bancroft opus a hand. It is the cub reporter's dream of the news game and a perfect picture of the popular conception of what constitutes "yellow journalism." However, it is great audience stuff and will get plenty money.

"Scandal Sheet" does not stoop to attempted glorification of the faithful reporter. Rather does it hold to the slogan "Print it if it's news, whether it's fit to print or no."

George Bancroft is introduced as the managing editor of the great metropolitan Bulletin (presumably New York). He is a driver, commanding fear and respect of his staff. In the first few minutes we know him, he fires a photographer for bum facial likeness in page one art, engineers a sensational suicide "scoop," plans a publicity-getting funeral for a leg man killed in an accident while out on a story and refuses to stop publication on a page one banner line yarn which will ruin a friend of the publisher.

This latter episode is a little hard to take. The publisher requests suppression of the story on justifiable grounds. It isn't so all important as to call for the threatened resignation of Bancroft. The managing editor merely states it is news and should be published regardless of whom it helps or hurts. His threat to walk out taking the story with him brings a shrug of the publisher's shoulders and concession of the point. Where is the newspaper mugg who would so defy "the old man"?

The incident serves its purpose in establishing Bancroft's character to the lay public. Bancroft has, however, a softer side. His wife, Kay Francis, is the apple of his eye who in turn has her eye on the figure of a wealthy banker, Clive Brook. They are not carrying on a philandering affair behind Bancroft's back if for no other reason than Kay's respect for her husband.

Brook gives her twenty-four hours to make up her mind about deserting Bancroft for him. Meanwhile a financial crisis arises in the bank's issuing a security in overdraft. Bancroft hears of the overissue and calls to confirm the story. To him "it's news" and, seeing the banker's baggage packed, jumps to the conclusion Brook is trying to make a get-away.

The extra breaks just as Kay is calling upon her lover to tell him she cannot bring herself to break Bancroft by desertion. With Brook she goes to the apartment window to hear what extra the boys are shouting. The two framed in the window offer a perfect subject for a snooping photographer assigned to the bank story by Bancroft. Moreover, he gets an excellent likeness.

The shock of his wife's apparent infidelity nearly floors Bancroft. Yet it's still news. He calls upon Kay to confirm the yarn, but more in the role of an inquiring reporter than a husband.

Returning to the office a broken man, he, himself, dictates the lead on the newest discovery of a "love nest." Then he recalls that a newspaperman's own story is seldom front page stuff. Dictation is held while he goes out again. When he again returns, he has real page one material. A prominent banker has been murdered.

The picture could well end there. Apparently it was thought best, however, to add a less tragic ending. We find Bancroft editing the prison newspaper. His policy is the same and a succession of incidents similar to those which opened the picture establish the fact he will always continue to publish "news regardless of whom it helps or hurts."

Many real newspapermen will resent "Scandal Sheet." The inclusion of several far-fetched delusions of the game comes under the general head of dramatic license. There may have been such managing editors as Bancroft depicts, but they were of the past and have gone into limbo.

Bancroft gives his usual strong performance and his vehicle is a splendid fit. Kay Francis does an admirable job of the wife, while Clive Brook is a perfect "other man." Regis Toomey stands out in the minor assignment of a reporter who—praise be to Allah—is not a glorious drunk. Notable in other roles are Lucien Littlefield, Gilbert Emery and Harry Beresford, who plays the man ruined by Bancroft's lust for news.

Direction of John Cromwell stacks up to his previously-set high mark and the production is all it should be. "Scandal Sheet" will do good business in any house.

Reaching for the Moon

(United Artists)

Fairbanks Scores

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

AUDIENCES have been waiting for a modern Fairbanks talker and no one will be disappointed with the result. The title may be confusing, suggesting as it does colorful romance. Fairbanks has, however, temporarily abandoned costume plays to return to the type of characterization which first made him famous. He plays an up-to-date young financial wizard of Wall Street.

The hands of many—perhaps too many—cooks are in evidence. The picture is a hodgepodge of Irving Berlin songs, sets in the modern manner, comedy and hokum. The story, however full of loose ends, succeeded nonetheless in pleasing the preview audience. It has many elements of popular appeal. Setting a fast tempo for itself at the start, it moves swiftly throughout.

Bebe Daniels, co-starred, does the best she can with a stereotyped ingenue lead. The comedy of Edward Everett Horton is inimitable as always and Claud Allister is a close second. Stunning gowns by Howard Greer will cause considerable feminine comment.

Fairbanks is introduced in a farcial stock broker's office with forty telephones on his desk. His interest in business has left him no time to engage in affairs of the heart. Bebe Daniels wagers she can make him fall in love with her and then stands him up on a date. Fairbanks, now in earnest, is not to be denied and hops the liner that is to take Bebe to Europe.

The rest of the action takes place on the ship, which, as a result of glass shots and William Cameron Menzies' sets, assumes the size of a football stadium. There is some absurd fantasy having to do with drugged cocktails and the ship passengers turning into a dancing chorus. The picture, you know, was first planned as a straight filmusical.

Bebe realizes she is really in love with Fairbanks just as he receives a cablegram from New York telling him he has lost all his money in the stock crash. Now that he is penniless, he stifles a declaration of love. Bebe learns of his trouble, however, and, professing her faith in his ability, does the proposing herself.

Fairbanks' portrayal is in all ways excellent. He again proves his abilities as a top-notch farceur. His strongly characterized scenes, such as the wedding to which he arrives breathless and half-dressed and wisecracks with the minister, are typically Fairbanks.

Word of mouth should be enthusiastic. In spite of loose construction, the combination of Fairbanks' name and the picture's entertainment values makes it sure-fire at the box-office.

Command Performance

(Tiffany)

Mildly Entertaining

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

NOTHING heavyweight about this polite little comedy, nor does it make any pretensions at being other than what it is. The appeal is definitely for a sophisticated audience willing to indulge in a flight of fancy. Several lines and situations have a tinge of spice.

In the early reels promise is given that the film may resolve into a delightful satire upon the mythical kingdom theme. But as the romantic interest is built, the plot slows down and begins to take itself seriously. This was a fault of the original stage version and was not corrected in transcribing it to films.

In the main the adaptation conforms more to stage technique than to screen. For example, the fight, in which an actor defends his leading woman from several stage door johnnies, is told about instead of shown.

One of the men whom the actor attacks is the dissolute crown prince of our mythical kingdom. The actor's arrest is ordered and he is held for assault and battery. Called before the queen for sentence, his remarkable resemblance to the crown prince is discovered.

The actor is offered freedom if he will first substitute for the prince in winning the hand of the princess of a neighboring kingdom with which an alliance is desirable. Impersonating the worthless royal son is in the nature of a "Command Performance."

Acting the princely role, he succeeds in his mission, but finds his professed love has become real. He is about to be deported on the eve of the wedding when the rightful crown prince seeks exile in preference to marriage and the actor is called upon to continue the impersonation.

The dual role is adeptly handled by Neil Hamilton. He achieves a distinct shading of the two characters without resorting to obvious make-up. Una Merkel is quite unsuited for the part of the princess. In character comedy she is superb, but high romantic comedy is not her forte.

Superlative work is contributed in the fine characterizations of Lawrence Grant, Helen Ware, Albert Gran and Vera Lewis. With their usual deftness, Miss Ware and Grant carry much of the burden of the plot development. More colorful is the assignment Gran has and he plays it broadly to good effect. Walter Lang's direction is noteworthy.

"The Command Performance" holds promise of being well received in localities where drawing room comedies are a draw. It should

Sleeping Partners

(British International)

Without a Spark of Life

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

UNBEARABLY slow movement stifles whatever entertainment value was contained in Sascha Guitry's French comedy. Regardless of whether or not this development is to be attributed to the usually slow-moving humorous vein of our British brethren is a matter of speculation, but the fact remains it exists in this talker.

Seymour Hicks' presence in all important phases of production, including adaptation, supervision, direction, and in the lead makes it pretty much of a one-man show, despite the fact that Hicks acquits himself admirably as a player.

Photography and settings, too, are confined to mere necessary coverage, only one inside set being used throughout. Here and there an amusing bit is offered, but never does it reach impressive proportions.

The yarn is one of those things where domestic tangles are depended upon for story material. Edna Best and Lyn Harding are passable in the support.

Should be booked on a double feature bill.

Rango

(Paramount)

Jungle Thriller

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

ERNEST SCHOEDSACK, who with Meriam Cooper gave screen fans such entertaining film fare as "Chang," "Grass" and "Four Feathers," has emerged from the wilds of Sumatra with a picture that is even more impressive than the others. From a standpoint of production value and considering the ground covered, "Rango" is not comparable with the other films. However, it has been made into an intimate type of entertainment and its value as interesting screen fare is more than equal to other like films.

Schoedsack has taken four characters, two apes and two humans, and with them has woven a parallel story telling of the lives of each. The apes are Tua, the father, and the little son, Rango. The humans are Ali, the father, and the son, Bin. The simple little story concerns the struggles which confront both of the families. It tells how Ali hunts and traps wild tigers and other animals. It shows how Tua seeks food for himself and the tiny Rango. The simplicity of it all is the astounding part of the picture story and the way Schoedsack has brought in the various incidents in the lives of these creatures by using other inhabitants of the jungle is nothing short of sensational. Sumatra is infested with thousands of monkeys and these tiny animals are used again and again to help express the various emotions of the jungle occupants.

The antics of little Rango alone put to shame the comedy efforts of humans. Time after time his actions brought gales of laughter from the preview audience. They were not the actions of a trained animal, but the natural happenings, caught only after much patience upon the part of Schoedsack and his few assistants.

Into this simple story Schoedsack has woven many thrilling sequences showing the killing of tigers, panthers and other wild animals of the killer type. For a climax he used the old fashioned chase sequence of a man-eating tiger chasing and killing little Rango and then taking after the boy. The family beast of burden, a water buffalo, intervenes here, however, and in a most thrilling and fascinating battle it kills the tiger.

Considering the conditions Schoedsack was forced to work under, he has turned out a masterful bit of screen material. Never losing sight of the story interest and always balancing his comedy with drama which at times was exciting, pathetic and terrifying in turn, Schoedsack deserves unlimited praise for his efforts.

A short talking prologue opens the piece with Claude King and little Douglas Scott making way for what is to follow. A musical background fits into the film throughout and at times dialogue is used to explain the various situations. This arrangement makes the picture ideal for foreign trade, as very few changes will have to be made.

Exploitation value lies in the fact the picture is decidedly a novelty. Exploitation of the title "Rango" will aid in selling the part-talker, while the Schoedsack name also has some box office value.

Any type shorts but adventure and travel stuff will fit here.

Produced by Ernest G. Schoedsack. Distributed by Paramount Publix. Direction, story, photography and editing by Ernest G. Schoedsack. Running time (preview), 76 minutes. Length, 6,840 feet. Release date not set.

Fighting Thru

(Tiffany)

Strong Western

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

SNAPPY Western action, as plausible as any of its type and incorporating all the elements which go to make up popular outdoor fanfare. It packs a fast wallop, boasting of a proper mixture of gunplay, thrilling horsemanship and the usual villain-hero-girl combination. Nothing more is needed. The kiddies will just eat it up, while adult followers of Western stories will find much to appease their hunger for adventure and action.

The story, as usual, is built entirely around Ken Maynard, who makes a fine appearance and convincing performance as the hard-riding, shoot-'em-up cowpuncher in search of gold in them thar hills of California. Maynard, with his pal, breaks up a big poker game when the pair realize that the political saloonkeeper and his tough aides-de-camp are attempting to secure a half interest in the mine through crooked card plays.

Maynard is placed in a tough spot with the sister of his pard when the latter is shot, and blame points toward Ken. Of course, the love interest develops between our hero and the girl, who finally is convinced that Maynard is not the murderer of her brother.

Ken's horse, Tarzan, is again a big factor in support of the star, while Jeanette Loff, Wallace MacDonald, Carmelita Geraghty, William L. Thorne and Charles L. King all commit themselves admirably as the principals.

Photography is superb, particular where the camera was concentrated on Western scenic shots. Whilliam Nigh, the director, shows intelligence in handling.

Finger Prints

(Universal-Serial)

A Money Maker

COMPARATIVELY few serials in the past have had such elaborate production treatment as that accorded "Finger Prints," made by Adventure Pictures and released on the current Universal program.

The initial three episodes reveal a story of "class" racketeers. No doubt, the prevailing crime wave which is reported to have engulfed the nation had considerable influence in selecting the type of material injected into the story.

With but one exception, and that of Edna Murphy, the cast is uniformly capable. Miss Murphy just doesn't click, although the usual sappy dialogue and forced story situations found here as in every serial might have been too severe an obstacle for her to hurdle.

It has everything needed in a serial, the barking of guns and many thrilling chases. One sequence features an unusually convincing automobile chase and wreck; another has the old speed boat and motorcycle dash; fights galore appear in every episode.

From the box-office standpoint, there is little to be desired. Neighborhood stands should benefit a lot, bringing the kiddies back every week during the run. Average running time, 20 minutes.

Sea Goin' Sheiks

(Pathe-Rainbow)

So-So Comedy

THERE'S little to write home about in this Rainbow comedy, with practically all gags and situations creating but mild laughter. Emerson Treacy and Ray Cooke as a pair of gobs on leave somewhere in the Far East come in contact with the sultan's harem. Their escapades in rescuing two "bimbos" provide what few laughs are offered. Running time, 18 minutes.

A Wide Film Marvel

FULL justification for the use of wide film for scenics can be found in this two-reel camera study of Niagara Falls and the surrounding countryside. Never before have we seen that old scenic wonder presented on celluloid so impressively, and they have been turning out camera records of Niagara since George Eastman first emerged from his laboratory with the first strip of film.

The Spoor-Berggren "natural vision" process is used, which means that only houses equipped with wide screens will benefit. The depth and beauty go hand in hand with splendid musical accompaniment to make this one of the most picturesque subjects of the season. Running time, 18 minutes.

Alaska

(Universal-Cartoon)

Average

SNAPPY music and characteristic action of Oswald cartoons lend strength to entertainment value of this one. Musical gags, as usual, are depended upon for laughs. From the standpoint of production, it hits average. Running time, 7 minutes.

Hello, Russia!

(Universal)

Bowls 'Em Over

CONTINUING the same high level of humor set by Slim Summerville in others of this doughboy series, Stanley Bergerman, producer, is to be complimented again for a sure-fire laugh getter. Slim and Eddie Gribbon, as usual, share honors, with Slim through his "unconscious" sense of humor spilling a laugh every minute. One highly entertaining angle is the burlesque of "spicy" bits, although majority of the sequences in this mirth provoker are unusually funny. The ending, however, is as flat as near-beer. Splendid for any type house. Running time, 19 minutes.

Drifting Along

(Paramount-Bruce)

Picturesque

A THING of scenic beauty, rich in colorful backgrounds, is contained in this short reel produced for Paramount by Robert Bruce. The production set-up is almost identical with previous reels in the current series, that is descriptive dialogue cleverly adapted to locale of the scenic subject. In this case, Bruce's camera absorbs the stillness and soft beauty of a tropical river, and in other sequences catches the high spots of picturesque lakes, mountains and waterfalls. The voice of a pleasing baritone can be heard rendering the title song. Its richness makes it eligible for any audience which is appreciative of the outdoors. Running time, 9 minutes.

Monarchs of the Field

(Pathe-Grantland Rice)

Excellent

ALWAYS carrying wide appeal, bird dogs, pointers and setters search a Southern woods in quest of game birds. The result is one of those rare photographic gems set in a forest background. Adults and youngsters alike will find much of interest in the manner in which the dogs search the woods for game and after "pointing" remain absolutely motionless until the shot is made. Rates high in Grantland Rice's "Sportlights" series. Running time, 9 minutes.

Audio Review No. 49

(Pathe)

Splendid

EFFECTIVE scenic material predominates in this release and does much to enhance the entertainment value of Terry Ramsaye's latest effort. A marvelous camera study of the Labrador coastline provides an interesting spectacle, with a huge mass of rock set against a picturesque background of sea and sky. Supporting this sequence is a unit showing development of the modern playing card, tracing its peculiarities from the early centuries. Running time, 9 minutes.

Screen Snapshots—No. 3

Has Its Moments

ONLY the fact that the average theatregoer is interested in intimate glimpses of his favorite screen "idol" redeems the newest release in the Screen Snapshots series. Otherwise, the material is pretty flat, offering little in entertainment aside from snatches of studio folk at work. Eddie Cantor closes the reel with a bang. Running time, 11 minutes.

Vaudeville Returning To Milwaukee House

Milwaukee—L. K. Brin, operator of the Garden and Majestic, will reinstate vaudeville at the Majestic beginning Christmas Day. Erected about 22 years ago as a vaudeville theatre, the Majestic discontinued this brand of entertainment about two and one-half years ago when Brin obtained the theatre from the Orpheum circuit and installed talking pictures. A stage and pit orchestra under the direction of Buddy Fischer, Chicago band leader, has been engaged.

Earl Crabb to Join Franklin, Is Report

Seattle—Earl L. Crabb, former division manager for Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc., in the Pacific Northwest territory, has opened executive offices in the Skinner Building, just a few doors from his former office under the Fox banner. Although definite announcements are not yet forthcoming, it is widely rumored that Crabb will soon again be directing a theatre group in this territory, and his name is frequently linked with Harold B. Franklin's coming chain. Closely connected with Crabb is Dave Himelhoch, former manage of Fox's Coliseum under the Crabb regime, and chairman of the Seattle Board of Theatre Censors.

Whitbeck Conferring With N. W. Colleagues

Seattle—Frank Whitbeck, director of advertising and publicity for Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Los Angeles, spent a day here this week conferring with Robert Bender and Vic Gauntlett, division manager and division publicity director, respectively. H. A. Gillespie, West Coast director of the Yakima territory, and Herb Sobottka, head of the Wenatchee territory, were also in town for the meetings. From here Mr. Whitbeck proceeded to Portland for a brief session with Oregon territory heads.

Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

THE half wave rectifier illustrated in lesson is not the only type of B eliminator in use. A similar system consists of an arrangement wherein current output is secured during both halves of the cycle. Whereas the rectifier tube in the half wave system is at rest during one alternation, the full wave rectifier system operates upon both halves of the cycle. This means the use of two half wave rectifier tubes or the use of a single tube with two anodes and filaments or a common filament.

At the same time, the full wave rectifier system necessitates a transformer which will supply voltage to the plates or anodes of the rectifier or rectifiers as the case may be. Obviously, the ordinary transformer with a single winding is not suitable. A variation of the conventional transformer is necessary and this takes the form of the split or centre tapped winding. In other words, the plate winding is really two windings with a common centre tap junction or a single winding capable of supplying twice the voltage required for either anode and a tap at the midpoint. Thus the polarity of the voltage is positive for one tube or anode during one alternation and positive for the other tube or anode during the other alternation. This can be appreciated by reference to figure 107.

During the moment that the primary current is as indicated by the arrow, the polarity of the voltage in the plate winding is such as to make the tube plate P1 positive with respect to the filament. Current flows through the external circuit as indicated by the double arrows. During the next alternation when the direction of the current through the primary has reversed, the direction of the current through the plate winding is as shown by the dotted arrows. During this time the tube plate P2 is positive with respect to the filament and the plate current flows as indicated by the double arrows. The direction of the current through the filament winding is inconsequential because the heating effect of the current is independent of the direction of flow and the tube filament serves as an electron emitter irrespective of the direction of the filament current.

Now it should be understood that the operation of the anodes P1 and P2 is alternate. During the period that P1 is operative because the applied voltage makes it positive with respect to the filament, P2 is negative and therefore inoperative. And during the time that P2 is positive, P1 is negative. Thus the complete wave is rectified.

An illustration of the action is shown in figure 108A, 108B, 108C, and 108D. The first depicts the sine wave of input voltage. The second shows the output voltage applied to the tube plates and P1 positive and P2 negative. The third shows the voltage applied to the tube plates so that P2 is positive and P1 is negative. The final curve shows the rectifier current.

Now in contrast to the current output in a half wave rectifier, we find two pulsations of current during every cycle in a full wave rectifier. This is illustrated in figure 108D. If we consider the condenser connected across the resistance R shown in figure 107 and consider the voltage applied across the condenser and finally compare the charge of this condenser as illustrated in figure 109, with that shown in figure 106 (dot-dash lines) we find that the condenser in figure 107 is charged twice during each cycle, whereas the equivalent condenser in a half wave system is charged but once during each cycle.

The time elapsing between the charging moments of the condenser represents a variation in voltage equivalent to an alternating emf or a ripple voltage. This ripple voltage is the "hum" in the eliminator. In the half wave system, the major hum frequency is that of the line supply. In the full wave system, the major hum frequency is equal to twice the frequency of the line supply. Thus if two eliminators, a half wave and a full wave system are fed from a 60 cycle line, the major hum frequency in the former will be 60 cycles and in the latter, 120 cycles.

At this stage one is apt to ask, "What is the advantage of the full wave system?" Obviously it must have some advantage if it is used despite the fact that it requires more tubes and a change in the transformer, this change being such as to make the unit more expensive. The advantages are many. In the first place the period elapsing between moments of charge is less in the full wave than in the half wave system, consequently, for a constant imput voltage to the tube, the voltage output of the complete system is greater in the full wave than in the half wave systems. In the second place, the steady plate current in a half wave system is equal to the mean of the current during a complete cycle. With unit peak current, the mean current is .318x1. In the full wave system, the steady plate current is the mean current of the half wave rectifier multiplied by 2 and with unit peak current, the steady current is .636x1. Thus the use of the full wave system increases the rectified plate current to twice that of the half wave system. If we consider the voltage and current output of such a rectifier system as being equal to a certain amount of power, the wattage at any one value of voltage is approximately four times as great

Function of the Filter

The function of the filter highlights discussions in Lesson 27 of the "Projectionists' Round Table," edited by John F. Rider, who further discusses full-wave rectification, the tungar rectifier, voltage regulation and current and voltage limitations, as these factors affect engineering in the field of projection.

Another highly important projection factor in the current article is a detailed summary of the advantages of full wave rectifiers as to frequency, hum, current output and ease of filtering.

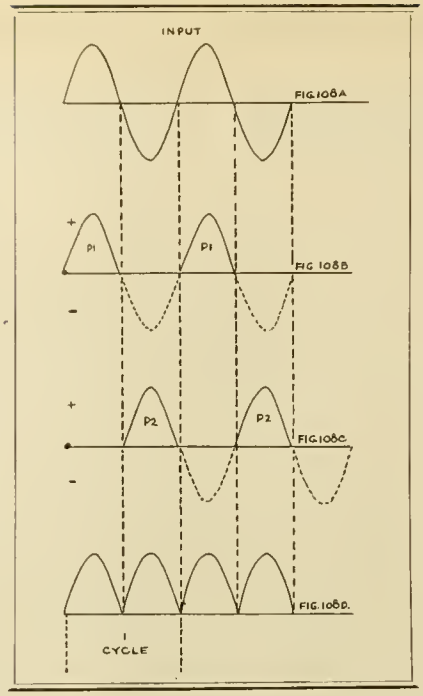
This is Lesson 28 in The Rider Series on Sound Projection with the full wave as with the half wave system.



The third advantage is found in the case of separating the A.C. and D.C. components in the pulsating output of the rectifier system. While we are not yet prepared to discuss the filtering action, it is not a difficult matter to correlate the action of a condenser and a choke upon alternating current with the action taking place in the filter. Consider as the primary arrangement, the condenser across the circuit and a choke in series with the D.C. circuit. The choke will tend to allow the flow of the major portion of the alternating current around itself, whereas the choke in series with the D.C. circuit will tend to limit or retard the flow of alternating current.

Since the frequency of the full wave system is twice that of the half wave, the condenser will tend to more readily allow the flow of current, whereas the choke will retard the flow of current to an extent equal to twice that possible in a half wave system. Supplementary to the above is the fact that the amplitude of the voltage fluctuation between moments of charge in the full wave system is about half of that found in the half wave system, so that considering all matters, the full wave arrangement enables filtering four times more easily than the half wave system, a very definite advantage.

TUBES FOR FULL WAVE AND HALF WAVE RECTIFIERS. . . . The type of tube used for half wave rectification has been mentioned. As far as full wave rectification is concerned, the plates P1 and P2 may be contained within one evacuated chamber with a single filament common to both or with separate filaments, connected in such fashion that a single voltage source supplies the excitation voltage. Such a tube is typified by the 380 rectifying tube.

Thus far no mention has been made of the magnitude of the currents and voltages present in such systems. This is entirely a matter of design, although the types of tubes mentioned would seem to indicate that the systems were of the high voltage low current type. By high voltage we mean about 1000 volts and about 100 to 200 milliamperes of current. This does not mean that the systems of rectification outlined are limited to such values of current and voltage. The same system is applicable to the use of low voltage and high current rectifiers. The high voltage and low current system is used to supply plate and grid voltages, in some cases filament voltages as well, whereas the low voltage and high current system are used to supply filament voltages.

As far as the actual process of rectification is concerned the systems employing the Tungar type of tube perform in like manner. There is one difference. This exists within the tube itself. In the high voltage low current type of rectifiers such as the 380 and the 381, the filament is the sole source of electrons. In the filament type of low voltage high current rectifiers, the filament is the primary source of electrons. The remainder, and actually the greater portion of the current carriers are supplied by the inert gas which is placed within the tube at the time of manufacture. With respect to operation of the tube, the excitation of the filament causes the emission of electrons. These charges during their transit to the plate which is placed at a positive potential with respect to the filament, collide with the molecules of gas and disrupt the structure of the atoms by knocking off an electron, thus creating another current carrier. This continual state of agitation results in ionization of the molecules and in a very short time, the entire space between the plate and the filament is filled with positive and negative carriers and the tube is in a conducting state.

VOLTAGE REGULATION: We made mention of the need for some means of separating the A.C. and D.C. components present in the output of the rectifier system, so that the output of the eliminator would be the required D.C. with minimum A.C. ripple. Such is the function of the filter. Now in connection with filter systems, it is necessary to set forth a certain characteristic of the rectifying systems outlined thus far. If we consider any one value of output voltage and any one value of corresponding current, the system provides constant voltage and constant current. In other words there is, generally speaking, no momentary fluctuation of voltage or current. Yet we cannot speak of the complete system as being a constant voltage or constant current device. One of the reasons for this is the variable impedance of the rectifier tube. Another reason is the D.C. resistance present within the filter system. The cumulative effect of these two points of voltage drop is that the voltage and current output are related and vary in opposite directions. In other words, the current output is a variable, with a maximum limit, and dependent upon the voltage output. In turn the voltage output is also a variable, with a maximum limit and dependent upon the current load. With any one value selected as the reference value, the voltage decreases as the current load increases and the voltage increases as the current load decreases. The maximum voltage is naturally limited by the voltage applied to the tube plate, the drop within the tube and the minimum drop across the resistance present in the filter system not yet described. This minimum is the drop due to the minimum current flow through the filter system.

In turn the maximum current is also limited by the voltage applied to the tube and the design of the rectifier, primarily the design of the filament, because the filament is called upon to carry the rectified current as well as the excitation current. Of course, the plate within the rectifier tube also limits the maximum current by virtue of the limited heat dissipation of the electrode. The higher the current the greater the heat developed. If the current reaches sufficient proportions, the heat developed causes the emission of occluded gases from the plate and volatilization of the plate. The former, by virtue of ionization of the gas, increases the current through the tube and therefore the current through the filament, resulting in burnout of the filament.

Thus, the rectifier form of power supply must be operated within certain prescribed limits, or should we say, that the rectifier form of power supply finds application within certain prescribed limits.

Now in connection with the variation of voltage and current, there is a definite state in which best performance is secure. Since the voltage output decreases with each increment of current load, it is decidedly advantageous to secure a variation which is minimum. That is to say, as long as there

Theatre Men Win Allies in Fight On Chi Subways

Chicago—Active opposition to the State Street subway plans, as forecast in Motion Picture News last week, was taken by property owners who are now circulating a legal petition which, if signed by a majority of owners, will tie up actual construction work on the bore for one year and will probably result in a change of the present plans. Though the opposition was not fostered by local theatre interests, it is understood that at least two theatre offices affected will sign the petition.

Theatre opposition to the subway plans is centered on the underground pedestrian thoroughfare, on which shops and store entrances will be permitted, which will line both sides of the underground transportation system. It is feared that this arrangement will have a serious effect on "drop in" trade at the State Street theatres; particularly during inclement weather. At such times, the "drop in" trade here reaches its peak.

A peculiar situation confronts the theatre men in their opposition to the subway plans now being considered. They oppose any diversion of pedestrians from the present street levels; whereas other State Street property owners approve the idea of an underground pedestrian thoroughfare, and are merely in opposition to details of the present plans for its construction. Thus, the theatres are hesitant about alligning themselves with an opposition that is only half in accord with the theatre viewpoint. The theatres which will sign the petition, however, will do so in the hope of obtaining a delay which will give them additional time in which to marshal their opposition.

Stresses Sex Angle; Public Falls for It

Chicago—There may be a moral in this: The British International picture, "Juno and the Paycock," played two weeks at the Punch & Judy Theatre, swank 350-seat house which closed recently. The two weeks' gross was slightly better than $5,000. Last week, the Castle Theatre, 299-seat den at State and Madison Streets, took the B. I. picture and was half-way to the $5,000 mark on the fourth day. At the Castle, however, the picture is known as "The Shame of Mary Boyle," and much ado is made in the theatre's ads over the "adults only" tag it bears, a point that the now defunct Punch & Judy failed to stress.

CHICAGO.

MAX ASCHER has taken over the lease on the Punch & Judy Theatre and will reopen the swank house within the next few days. Initial policy will provide for the playing of the best available independent product and whatever second runs are considered to have a chance. It is also rumored that the Aschers have considered the likelihood of making the spot a newsreel house, but fear its location is against it under such a policy. Rental is said to be on a percentage basis.

Fox is considering plans for rebuilding the Portage Pork Theatre, which will make it o de luxe spot if carried out. Tough competitive situation in that locality makes some sort of move advisable, we are told.

Give-aways have abandoned their first love, Radio, and are now swinging to refrigerators. Explanation is that so many people have been given radios in the last couple of years that they are now offering to give them back to the theatres in lieu of cash admissions. The tremendous popularity of the ice cube is said to make the refrigerator give-away a popular one, but a few far-sighted managers are wary about it. Looking into the future they see the time when today's customers will be tomorrow's kitchen gin drinkers, happily gathered about their refrigerators, indifferent to the fact that Garbo is generating heat for a flock of empty seats at the neighborhood theatre.

Current depression has solved all labor troubles here. The boys with jobs are plenty satisfied to stay that way, with the result that no new demands or old kicks are on call at union meetings these days.

*Theatre acoustics cases continued till January 7. They might have been settled at the last hearing save for the fact that the prosecuting attorney reached in his brief case for the evidence and found it had decayed with age. # Chicago Theatre Imitating Old Bar Free Lunch

Chicago—R-K-O Palace Theatre here is going other "hand-out" theatres one better. Instead of the customary coffee and cigaret, with an occasional cookie that is included by the more profligate houses, the Palace is putting out a complete lunch. Service includes several varieties of sandwiches, cakes, coffee or tea, mints and smokes. A special invitation is made to women holiday shoppers to top off a morning's haggling with clerks by luncheon at the Palace and show afterward. Most of the "acceptances" to date, however, have more of the characteristics of the unemployed than of the shoppers.

Loop hamburger joints and one-arm restaurants are a little sensitive about the thing and a few threaten to bring their complaints to the R-K-O home office.

Nick, Sue Buck Notre Dame Team

Chicago — Sue Carol and hubby, Nick Stuart, were pleasantly surprised when they arrived in town and found the La Salle station jammed with welcoming thousands, an assortment of bands and town dignitaries. They had forgotten, momentarily, that the Notre Dame football team, returned from the Southern California spectacle, was aboard the same train.

In spite of the football ballyhoo at the station and in local papers, Bill Brumberg and Frank Young, R-K-O Chicago vigilantes, succeeded in sidetracking enough photographers and reporters to get the Stuart family a nice break in print. Sue and Nick were en route to New York, but planned to return here, they said, to spend the holidays with Sue's parents.

To the Pure——

Chicago—Catch-line and key of the R-K-O State-Lake's advertisements on "Her Man" was, "He was 'Her Man' but he done her wrong." The sanctimonious Daily Tribune turned thumbs down on the phrase, with the result that the line appeared in that paper as, "He was 'Her Man' but he failed her." All other papers consented to the "wrongdoing."

must be a variation of output voltage and since the current load for any one condition has a definite minimum, best performance is such if the voltage regulation is such as to cause the minimum change in plate voltage for a unit change in current. This variation "because of the character of the plate impedance of the tube" is by no means a linear function. Expressed in another manner, if a rectifier system is designed to supply a maximum of 600 volts at 120 milliamperes and the initial current load adjustment is such that the current load is 10 milliamperes, the available voltage may be as high as 850 volts. Increasing the load to 15 milliamperes may cause a reduction in voltage of 30 to 35 volts, whereas another increase of 5 milliamperes of load current will cause a change of but 3.5 or 4 volts per milliampere. As the load current approaches the maximum limit, the operating axis approaches the flat portion of the plate impedance characteristic and the minimum variation voltage takes place for a unit variation of load current.

An idea of voltage regulation can be gleaned by reference to figures 110 and 111. The formor shows the voltage regulation across the output of a full wave rectifier employing the 380 tube with the voltages specified. The latter illustration shows the voltage regulation characteristic across the output of the rectifiers in a half wave system employing one 381 tube. The voltages associated with the separate curves are the voltages (r.m.s.) applied to the plates of the rectifiers. Figure 112 can he used as the equivalent of the full wave 380 system with the voltage measured across the two points X and XI and figure 113 can be used as the equivalent of the half wave rectifier employing the 381 tube with the voltage measured across the points X and XI.

Preaching?

IN this publication business, once an issue is off to press, we are so busy working on the next issue that we generally pay no attention to the old ones. But finding a few spare moments the other day we went through the Club section in the last Showman edition and read it through carefully.

Now we are wondering whether any of the crowd are beginning to think that we were preaching. That's what a lot of those articles might sound like to one who would not look deeper than just the cold print.

We cautioned you about untidy offices, neglecting the boiler room, watching the staff's uniforms, inspecting the theatre's equipment, avoiding roof leaks, seats, etc., etc. Altogether it sounded very much like a teacher taking advantage of a room full of pupils and making 'em sit through an endless amount of preaching.

But honestly, f e l l o w s, the thought never entered our heads. What we had to say in print constitutes exactly what we might discuss in the course of a friendly visit between any member and your chairman.

After all, there are so many angles to theatre management, it is pardonable if we overlook a little something here and there, but by putting the most important items before you from time to time, and furthermore, suggesting ways and means of avoiding trouble from such sources, we feel that we are merely rendering a service directly in line with the ideals of our organization.

Try to keep that thought in mind whenever you happen across something we have to say on the Club pages which may sound like preaching. Remember, it's not that at all. We are simply covering a lot of territory through our many followers.

Don't think for one moment that we are immune from criticism, on the contrary, most of the things we discuss from week to week are based upon the reaction and comment from our members and readers. Very often they take exception to what we say and show us where our point of view may be wrong.

That's great. Exactly what we like. It guides us along the proper path when we start to stray. And it convinces the boys all over the world that their problems are ours. Maybe that is the reason why the mail bag is getting heavier all the time.

Never, in the history of show business, has there been a medium to compare with the Club pages, whereby our members can meet on a common ground and talk things over. Thereby helping each other and helping themselves.

Serial Plugging Was Profitable Kiddie Business Booster

Determined to boost kiddie business at Proctor's Theatre in New Rochelle, N. Y., to a new high and establish a record for juvenile attendance, Bert Lowe, manager of the house, turned out a complete and effective campaign for the opening installment of his recently booked serial, "The Indians Are Coming," Universal's thriller, starring Colonel Tim McCoy.

On the day before the picture opened, the local paper carried an ad plugging it. The ad was larger than the regular insertion used to plug the feature picture. We are showing this ad here in order that you may see its make-up, and pass along any comment, derogatory or complimentary, on Loew's showmanship. Take a look at its sterling copy. Note its heading directed to the kids. Look at the box announcing that free admission would be given any kiddies joining the special Indian parade, conceived by Lowe, about which we will say more in a moment. Does he know his stuff? You be the judge.

Other activities, along the advance plug line, included 2,000 heralds of circus flyer type and imprinted on both sides, which were distributed at schools the day before the opening; special letters sent to the principals of nine schools asking them to inform the kids of the picture's educational value; phone messages inviting the faculties of the schools to attend the opening installment of the film, and special publicity stories in the newspaper.

As a lobby display, an Indian tepee, constructed of muslin and bamboo, and carrying painted signs in the Indian tongue, was used. Arrangements were made for this display to be placed, at a later date, in the window of a local archery school. A tie-up was made with the archery school whereby any of the school's patrons hitting the heart of a painted Indian—used as a target—would be given a free ticket to the theatre. The Indian carried a plug on the serial.

The kiddie parade on the opening day caused quite a stir about the town. The first 350 kiddies joining the procession were given Indian hats and admitted free to the theatre. It was originally planned, and advertised, to grant free admission to only 200 kids, but the record turn-out caused Lowe to rescind the limited order and boost it up an additional 150. Several kiddies in the parade, which was headed by a drum corps and police escort, carried signs. Two ballyhoo men, dressed as Indians, carried the accessory banner plugging the picture.

At the matinee, 500 buttons plugging the serial, playdates, and theatre, printed in red on a white background, were handed out to the kids. As an additional plug, three Indian blankets were awarded to those persons in the audience holding check numbers corresponding to ones called off from the stage.

As has been stated, the campaign was complete and effective, so much so that Lowe accomplished his objective—crowding more kids into the house than had before been seen. So long as showmanship of this type continues to be displayed, in that measure will the kiddie business continue. We'd like to hear from Lowe again and we hope he will let us know how the kid business is holding up. And if any of our members have any slants on the subject, we're ready to present them. The more the merrier. Send them in.

Oscar's Campaign Went Over Big and Boosted Business

We had been wondering what sort of business Earl Oscar was having at the Ritz Theatre in Athens, Alabama, and began to figure that he was pretty busy. You see, he has not appeared on the Club pages in some time. So we were sort of wondering. But, Earle came to the rescue, and here's the latest of his activities.

When he played the "King of Jazz," he informs us that one of his best selling draws was a shadow box in front of the theatre. It was a unique arrangement. A three-sheet shadow box was first constructed. The two one-sheet boxes. The one-sheet shadow boxes were placed atop the three, and two hundred watt bulb placed in the center for illumination. The bulb had the display looking like a Broadway sign. The shadow box display was lighted when the house started the first evening show and continued through until the box-office closed. It was used a day in advance of playdates and attracted plenty of comment. So much for that.

On his campaign for "The Cuckoos," Earle turned out some fine work. This campaign was a winner from the time he started. Many novel gags were used. In keeping with the tone of the picture, the exploitation was cuckoo. Novel heralds carrying many funny catchlines were used, Earle taking advantage of some back issues of the Club pages to secure copy. Two boys were dressed up in comical fashion and despatched about the street. One of the boys was dressed in feminine costume, and wore a beard. A special cuckoo herald was turned out on Election Day, as the day happened to fall during the playdates Another novel stunt was the placing of jumbled letters on sticks The letters were placed all over the town and served as an excellent teaser plug. Still another good gag was the placing of a couple of jugs on a barrel. The jugs were labeled "Laugh Tonic" and were purported to be given to anyone who didn't laugh while seeing the cuckoos.

We are showing a photo of the front of the Ritz Theatre to give you an idea of how Earle carried out the cuckoo tone. A bunch of letters of assorted sizes were hung about the marquee. They spelled out the title of the picture and the stars. They looked so out of place that the attention of persons passing the theatre was drawn to them, and the publicity resulting helped to sell the show. Earle tells us that what he thinks was one of the finest stunts of his campaign consisted of a tie-up with a furniture store, whereby the store agreed to place a bed in one of their spacious windows. A dummy figure of a girl was placed in the bed. A large card in the window announced that the girl was resting up to see "The Cuckoos" at the Ritz.

We are very glad to note that Earle is continuing his live-wire activity at the Ritz and we hope that he will keep it up and let us in on whatever else he is doing to sell shows. What do you say, Earle?

Give These Boys A Hand For This One; They've Earned It!

When a group of ushers get together and work for a worthy cause, they certainly deserve a word of praise. And it is just for that reason we are writing this little story about the service staff of the Olympia Theatre—the house managed by George Laby—in Boston, Mass.

The staff has a club tagged "The Olympia Service Club." By their recent action they more than proved it to be a "service club." Each boy on the staff brought edibles from home, or bought them with his own money, and distributed them to needy families throughout the city. Fifteen baskets were given out. The names were secured from one of the Boston papers, and the editor of the sheet was so pleased with the boys' generous move that he granted them a three-column picture in the paper.

A short time ago we passed along some info on what these young men are doing at the house. Those of you who follow our pages regularly will recall that they are very active fellows, having a house organ of their own, a club room, president, etc. And now we are showing a picture of them. Look them over. One never knows. But one thing we do know; there's 12 darn fine Americans in the photo! Do you agree?

Have You Ever Used A Street Ballyhoo Such as Hadden's?

A street ballyhoo that packed a wallop was the one used recently by J. S. Hadden, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Joplin, Mo., when he was selling "Feet First."

Hadden secured the services of a boy in answer to a classified ad and dressed him in a yellow slicker, glassless goggles—with a large sign on his back reading, "Guess the size of my shoes and win a free ticket to see Harold Lloyd in 'Feet First' —Paramount—Sunday." The boy paraded the streets for two days in advance of playdates. And in view of the sign on his back, he had many admirers, especially those who were intent upon correctly estimating the size of his shoes. Many persons stopped the boy as he walked about the town. To those guessing the correct size, a ticket was given, and it is interesting to note that though many stopped him, but few of them were given tickets, the shoes being of so deceptive a nature as to puzzle even a shoe salesman.

Another feature of Hadden's campaign was a co-operative tie-up that resulted in much publicity for the picture was a herald tie-up with four merchants. These merchants took space on the heralds with a mat of Harold Lloyd's head cut in four parts being placed in each ad space. Copy at the bottom stated that the first fifteen customers to correctly assemble the Lloyd head would receive guest tickets to see the picture. The merchants paid the entire cost of printing and distributing 6,000 heralds.

George A. Curtis of Springfield, Ohio, Is An Active Showman

"Maybe It's Love" was the title of the picture that was being plugged by George A. Curtis, manager of the State Theatre in Springfield, Ohio, but according to Curtis, who refuses to take the business depression seriously, it might be called "Maybe It's Business." And to show you what he means by the statement we'll have to call your attention to the photograph appearing with this story.

In the photo you can note the crowd of people waiting for the house to open. The film went over big in the town, its success in a large measure being due to the clever work that Curtis turned out on it. As the picture has a college football theme, a great many advantageous tie-ups were made about town. Football teams were contacted, sporting goods stores loaned window space for the plugging of the picture, the street ballyhoos were good, and the newspaper gave the film publicity.

We would like to point out to you the novel banner underneath the marquee of the theatre. In the banner's construction, you will note that it is composed of beaverboard, studded with electric lights. This is a very inexpensive means of plugging your pictures and it is one that might also be of value in your town. Look it over, and if you think you can use it, set to work on construction. We want to thank Mr. A. J. Metz, Jr., for taking enough interest in the Club to pass this along to us. We'd like to hear some more from him. And also the live-wires of the Regent, Majestic and Fairbanks Theatres. And, oh yes! We'd like you to meet Mr. Curtis, who is seen standing in front of the crowd. The arrow points him out.

WHAT IS EXPLOITATION?

By FRED S. MEYER, General Manager, Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.
President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, Inc.

QUI BONO?

QUI BONO? Or, to use its English equivalent—for whose benefit?

SO MUCH has been said and published about exploitation and its value that it appears high time to ask: "for whose benefit?" In the words of Will Rogers, "All I know is what I read in the papers," and according to this source of information, the first exploiteer of record was Nero. Anybody can stand around and help extinguish a fire, but Nero furnished musical accompaniment while the flames raised havoc with Rome, thus he established for himself the reputation as exploiteer number one, even ante-dating Harry Reichenbach. The only difference is the latter undoubtedly would have furnished Paul Whiteman's band and served tea, but Nero, being just a young fellow trying to get along, couldn't possibly think of everything in this, his first exploitation campaign.

FROM Nero's time on, there descended upon this more or less arid mundane sphere three separate and distinct types of exploiteers. (I hope before I finish this I'll be able to think of a different name for the species.) Number one started right in where Nero left off. To him everything was justifiable, all means legitimate so long as it meant publicity. In this class there came in the course of time, P. T. Barnum, and still later, Teddy Roosevelt, whose slogan was, "I don't care what people say about me as long as they keep talking about me. So long as my name is mentioned I will never be a nonentity." And—strange as it may seem—an adherence to this policy is still pursued by many and not always without success: Tying up with an automobile dealer simply because Lizzy Dimples poses in a Mack truck will not necessarily require police reserves to handle the crowds but the tie-up will and does excite interest and at least publicize what you have to sell in a channel away from the beaten path.

DESCENDANCY number two has but one thought in mind; namely to obtain personal publicity. With all due respect to many branch office exploitation representatives for whom I have the highest regard and most profound admiration, I believe I can count on one hand those who brought along a single worth-while idea. To the majority of class two members everything is good exploitation that gets publicity, and those who can't CREATE have no scruples whatever about pilfering the house manager's ideas and then claiming it as their own. I think it was Rabbi Ben Akeeba who said, "There is nothing new under the sun," and this certainly applies to the general run of exploitation. And it most assuredly goes for the officers and members of category number two.

THE third degree of the tribe of Nero descendants is in the majority. With a certain knowledge of advertising and publicity comes the greatest teacher of all: experience. And experience teaches that exploitation whether IN the theatre, reflected via newspaper ads or by ballyhoo must be backed up by a certain sense of showmanship. I am not in a position to contradict a statement often made, that no exploiteer ever made a good manager, but I have never heard anybody say that a successful theatre operator does not know every angle of showmanship. The definition of a showman is as ambiguous as that of an exploiteer. Horwitz of Texas is a showman, isn't he?

If experience teaches but one thing, it is the realization that today is the tomorrow you worried about yesterday. In this business of ours no two attractions can be sold alike. Every day brings something new but always the query: "What's it going to mean at the box-office?" A few weeks ago I was asked, "Do you use 24 sheets every week?" and I said "only on outstanding pictures," to which my friend replied, "Maybe that's what makes them outstanding." That gives me an idea to get out a letter on this subject . . ." Well, write your own caption; no need of discussing it here. Whether you are a branch manager, an independent theatre owner in the average sized city, or the head of a circuit, the underlying principles are fundamentally the same. If it brings money to your box-office and reflects creditably to your theatre, it's worth-while publicity and exploitation, no matter what the formula may have been.

BY far and large, not every campaign brings the results anticipated. I recall opening with a picture "cold," without the aid of anything but an average ad in the newspapers. This happened since talking pictures came into being, and the picture I refer to was NOT a talking picture; it didn't even have dialogue sequences (all of which was made quite clear in our ads) and—lo and behold, business was outstanding. Then, on the other hand, many times we got back of a picture and gave it "everything but the kitchen sink" and business was just so, sometimes not even that good. Why? There can be but one answer. It's the show business. If public reaction could be measured in advance with any degree of accuracy, there'd be no need of managers, let alone exploiteers.

Fred S. Meyer is one of the best known showmen in the middle west by virtue of his affiliation with the M. P. T. O. of Wisconsin, of which he is president, and as a wide-awake exhibitor who understands theatre management and exploitation. This article represents his views on the much discussed topic of how to sell pictures to the public. We are certain that it will be read with much interest everywhere. If you have an angle of your own, or want to say something about this particular article, or any of the others which have appeared in this series, just send them along and we'll do the rest.

HERE'S something I would like to have somebody explain to me. While operating a number of theatres for a chain some years ago, I happened to have lunch with the general manager of another competitive circuit, also chain controlled. Said he: "Why do you let your managers spend so much money on advertising and exploitation? Outstanding pictures don't need it and on ordinary product it's wasted anyhow." That day I went back to my office and did a great deal of thinking. Was he right? And, if he was, why did he concentrate on the product produced by his company to the detriment of good pictures released by others? The more I pondered over our conversation, the less I found myself able to subscribe to it with the result that I instructed all my managers once again to "treat each picture as a separate entity. Not every attraction is outstanding by any means. Let your conscience be your guide and handle the publicity campaign as you would if you were spending your own money." Maybe I'm wrong, but that's the way I have always operated. I care not who maketh the picture; if it has possibilities, give it all you can.

HERE'S another example of showmanship exemplified by a certain chain. No matter how outstanding the attraction, theatres operated by this particular company are not permitted to use any but silent trailers!

ISN'T it a fact that subsequent runs profit materially as the result of the exploitation accorded a picture during its first run showing? And does this not also apply to theatres in the territory? Producers may say that a "natural" is sure-fire box office in Squeedunk or Oshkosh, but that's not true. Most assuredly not. I'll grant that good pictures are box-office bets everywhere but I most emphatically challenge the statement that subsequent and nearby territorial runs are not greatly bettered and box-office receipts fattened as the result of a thorough first-run (key city) exploitation campaign.

IT'S a wise exhibitor who does not resort to a penny wise and pound foolish economy policy by trying to save on accessories. Unless you get up some better material of your own, my suggestion is "use accessories" and use them liberally. And—stereotyped and oft-times meaningless as talking trailers have been—USE THEM. One good trailer offsets a half dozen poor ones, especially on so-called run pictures.

I DID not write the book on showmanship; neither do I claim originality on anything we do. There's no doubt but that someone, somewhere, has executed the same idea and undoubtedly better than we.

THERE'S nothing theoretical about our campaigns. Everything is considered from a common sense viewpoint, a showmanship angle, if that's the way to put it. Here are a few of the DO's we endeavor to follow:

1. Concentrate on "getting an opening." If that has failed, nothing much matters thereafter. A thorough campaign is solely dependent upon word of mouth advertising.

2. Bring the attraction to the attention of the greatest possible number of people so they know it's in town.

Brock Plugged Coast Screen Mag In The Lobby Of Theatre

Within three hours after he had received his initial allotment of "Screen Mirror," the ace movie magazine from Hollywood, published out on the Coast by Frank Whitbeck and his crew of live-wires, W. F. Brock, manager of the Kingsbridge Theatre, in the Bronx, New York City, sold them out completely and was forced to place a renewal order on the first night.

In view of the fact that he had called his showmanship into play, and constructed a stand that more than packed a selling wallop, setting the magazines off to good advantage, his success was not surprising, though he was a bit astonished. The stand was constructed of beaverboard against the large mirrors in the lobby. Tinseled strips, of various colors, formed a border. The sign plugging the book was attractively painted, the colors blending perfectly. The words "Screen Mirror" and the price were in cut-out letters, sprinkled with metallics. The books were placed on the counter and around the borders of the stand. An attractive usherette stood near by, attending to the sale of the magazines.

This is the first time, incidentally, that we have presented Mr. Brock's picture on the Club pages. As we recounted his history in a past issue of the Club pages, we will not publish it again at this time, but we'd like you to know that he has 10 years' show experience behind him, and has yet to record a losing house. Take it from us, that's going some. And Brock further says that he hopes to keep the record untarnished.

Houston Exhibs Did Their Part to Make Celebration Winner

Some corking showmanship was on display recently at Houston, Texas, when it became known to W. V. Taylor, manager of the local Loew's State Theatre, and the circuit's executives in the city that the new Navy cruiser Houston, named after the Port City, would pay a visit to the Texas city. And was Houston pleased? Here, in part, is what the Houston Post-Dispatch thought of it.

Bundle Checking!

A most important angle and one that shouldn't be slipped up on during the Christmas Shopping Season is a free checking service for bundles. If you haven't a check room in your theatre, make one for holiday use. Plug the angle by means of trailer, house organ, and newspaper ads. In fact, plug it in all advertising.

"The hosts of Houston," says the account, "Saturday will pay tribute to an illustrious namesake when the battle cruiser Houston—majestic monarch of the ocean's blue—steams up the Ship Channel and docks in a man-made harbor 50 miles from the sea.

"Gaily caparisoned in holiday attire and with streets and buildings decorated in artistic and patriotic fashion, Houston stands ready to welcome to this city the master battle cruiser which the naval department saw fit to name after the Port City.

"During the past month every effort possible has been made to make the visit of the cruiser one of magnificent proportions and no stone has been left unturned in preparing for a celebration such as this city has never witnessed before.

"A delegation of city officials, public spirited citizens and community leaders will meet the vessel at the docks on her landing, and welcome, with impressive ceremonies, the first visit of the navy ship that has been named in honor of Houston."

How did the theatre figure in on this mammoth celebration? Plenty! Mr. Taylor and Homer McCallon, publicity manager of the house, turned out a special Loew's State Section that was a corker. Twelve pages chock full of newsy bits about coming attractions, pages of ads, pages of pictures, were contained in this section. And, to top off his contribution to the festivities, Taylor presented a nautical picture, Gilbert in "Way For a Sailor," his latest starring vehicle. What more could be asked? He spent plenty of time in helping the various committees, but it was well worth the trouble. The theatre received loads of publicity and a whale of a lot of good-will. And, after all, they count an awful lot toward boosting business. They boosted it, too. We want to thank Homer McCallon for passing this account along to us, and we hope that he will keep us posted on the future doings at the State. What do you say, Homer?

3. Cover at least one phase of the campaign so that "he who runs may read."
4. Consider carefully all possible re-action. Don't OVERDO it.
5. Be honest with your patrons. Write a message based on facts only—truth always. Better by far to have patrons stay away entirely than to leave the theatre DISAPPOINTED.
6. If the merchant gives you his window, live up to what you promised in return. Store windows are valuable or you would not fight for them.
7. TAKE ADVANTAGE OF EVERY LOCAL, STATE OR NATIONAL EVENT. If possible, tie it up with your campaign in some form or other.

THE foregoing are, of course, only a few of the DO's, written here at random. There are many others equally or even more important. And now for a few DON'T's that we religiously strive to guard against:

1. Don't try to kid the newspaper. Even if you get away with it once, you'll be the loser in the long run.
2. Don't approach the same source of co-operation repeatedly. You only wear out your welcome.
3. Don't worry about your competitors. If they get away with something you overlooked, rejoice that they established a precedent. Don't put a damper on their work which might become a boomerang for you later on.
4. Don't do as New York does, but rather as it says. Gotham's ideas may be great but that doesn't mean that Main Street will subscribe to the same principles as Broadway.
5. Don't be afraid to handle your campaign as a family affair. Many a brilliant suggestion has come from an usher and a stage employee. Give credit where it is due and remember there's no monopoly on brains and ideas.
6. NEVER ENDORSE A PICTURE UNLESS YOU REALLY MEAN EVERYTHING YOU SAY. The smaller the community, the larger your circle of friends and acquaintances. Make them believe in you!

WHEN you put a limit on what you are going to do, haven't you automatically put a limit on what you can do? No showman, worthy of the name, will think, let alone say, that EVERY picture can be exploited or that OUTSTANDING LARGE ads spell the difference between large and small returns at the box-office. A "key town" had a concrete example of such folly recently. A certain picture (I understand it was quite good; at least eastern and coast reviews all waxed eloquently about its merits) was booked for two weeks. Big ads; first picture to carry the management's personal endorsement, etc. The picture did one of the biggest nose-dives imaginable; so much so in fact that it was "pulled" at the end of the 6th day. That doesn't make the picture bad; neither does it prove that it's not a box-office bet. I remember ten years ago—"Red Lantern" (Nazimova-Metro) was considered a national flop; for me it was one of the biggest clean-ups in Hamilton, Ohio.

TO sum it all up—exploitation, if backed by a common sense showmanship angle, is as essential as alcohol in the radiator of a car these days. Whenever a campaign goes haywire, I take time out to think it over. Somehow I always find solace in George S. Kaufman's analysis of an actor striving to become a star, which I like to apply to exploitation. With due apologies to the author, here's the ad lib adaptation: "You spend many long hours thinking and scheming and planning. The memorable hour arrives. You get your name in the headlines (trade papers, etc.) Your name appears in the electric light (report to and from the Home Office). Then, all of a sudden a fuse blows out (the campaign has flivved)—and WHERE ARE YOU?

AUSTRALIAN ACTIVITIES!

Foreign Showmen Pass Along Latest Selling Activities

Along comes Australia with a bunch of knockout stunts used in the show-selling by showmen of the Antipodes; and, showmen, just to start this blurb off with an optimistic note, we are going to tell you about a corking piece of showmanship engineered by R. T. Palmer, manager of the Grand Theatre in Perth.

Stuart Doyle, head of one of the largest theatre chains in Australia, recently inaugurated an Optimists Club among the managers of his circuit. The purpose of the Club was to imbue a spirit of optimism in all the managers on the chain, in that way helping chase away any thoughts of business depression and competition. The idea was to look happy, be happy and feel happy, spreading it not only about the theatre but also outside. Palmer did. The twenty-four sheet board that we are showing proves it. This board was placed in a prominent part of his town, and you can be sure that it attracted plenty of comment from everyone looking at it.

This man Palmer is a pretty active showman. It seems that he had a couple of other stunts that also went over very well. These were on "Laughing Lady" and "Evidence." For the former, he secured a lady to swing on a flower decorated rope strung from the marquee. A man in frock coat pushed the swing back and forth. The lady laughed as she swung up and down. The latter picture's ballyhoo—and one that caused comment—consisted of the placing of a prisoner's docket in front of the theatre. A lady, supposedly on trial, was quizzed by a man dressed in the robes of a lawyer. He asked the prisoner different questions relating to the picture. The crowds of curious persons gathering around the display were sold on the film. Good work, Palmer.

And now we are showing a cut of the coloring contest engineered by C. J. Smith of Wollongong to sell "The Vagabond King." The local schools were tied-up and the students entered into the spirit of the thing with a zest that was amazing. Many illustrations were submitted, the best of which were mounted on boards and placed in the lobby. They did much to attract attention to the picture. The final result was seen in the excellent business that the theatre enjoyed during the run of the film. This coloring angle is often used in America, and from the looks of things, Australia is finding it just as valuable.

When "All Quiet" played the Theatre Royal in Newcastle, the showmen handling the house wanted to give it a good break. The result was a forty-eight sheet board, which carried nothing but the title of the picture and a catchline: "The Censored Book Now Lives on the Talking Screen." The gag was arranged by Bill Cornell, assisted by Eddie West and Gordon Cooper. The trio turned out a corking campaign on the film, but it was later found that the monster billboard was one of the most effective mediums used.

In America when a showman gets an opportunity to invite a celebrity to his theatre he hastens to do it. The same holds good in Australia. Give an Australian showman an opportunity to publicize his house in this manner and he won't let the chance slip by. This was proven by F. E. Chivers of West's Olympia Theatre in Adelaide, who scooped the show district when he secured Amy Johnson, noted British flier, to make a personal appearance at his theatre. Look at the photo of the packed house on the night the aviatrix was slated to appear. It tells the story better than we can. Chivers certainly is to be congratulated on his showmanship. It is also interesting to note that Mel Lawton, our Australian Chairman, tried to land the girl for his house in Sydney, but found that "thumbs down" was placed on the proposition. Mel hands Chivers a compliment when he states: "The best work . . . for some considerable time."

At the Winter Garden Theatre in Brisbane, Ernie Pelling continues to turn out corking showmanship. We are showing a cut of a recent activity. This stunt was used in conjunction with his showing of "Paris" and consisted of having dancing girls cavort about cut-out letters plugging the title of the film. Interest aplenty was rife on this stunt and the crowds that lined the streets to look at it was evidence enough to Ernie that he was going to enjoy a very successful run of the picture; which he did.

At the Prince Edward Theatre in Sydney, things are humming just as ace high as usual. The high-powered showmanship that Mel Lawton is capable of displaying continues to stand out in the town. At an innovation, Mel stepped out and did some corking exploiting for "Paramount on Parade." He decided to introduce the Paramount stars to the patrons of the theatre, and because it was a pretty tough job, he had to step even more lively than usual. But he succeeded. The photos we are showing will cover a couple of phases of the many angles that made up the campaign. We are showing a photo of the birthday cake placed on display in the lobby. The opening night of the picture, small morsels of cake were presented in dainty cartons, to the patrons. The ladies were also presented with a sepia photograph of a Paramount star. The cake was promoted from a local baker in return for lobby publicity. The other photo we are showing depicts the front of the theatre where a 20 by 40-foot sign was painted on the concrete wall of the house.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

This sign had them talking, especially as it was a deviation from the regular art work. The space, though, is used weekly.

Other highlights on Lawton's campaign for the picture included a front and lobby done in party atmosphere, ushers dressed in fancy costume, an "Impersonation of Paramount Stars Contest," run in conjunction with a newspaper, the final selections being made from the stage of the theatre before a packed house. Posters were plastered all about town. Every possible angle was covered by Lawton and his assistants, with the result that the Prince Edward enjoyed a week of sensational business that also served to boost the good-will stock of the theatre. No one can say that these Australian showmen don't know their stuff. The campaign was as fine a one as we have come across in some time. Congrats, Mel.

Credit for the unique window display that we are now showing must be withheld until we learn the name of the showman responsible. The display served as a plug for a series of shorts known as "Horoscope Short Features," playing at the Majestic Theatre in Melbourne. The window display consisted of a painted cut-out of two Hindus salaaming in Eastern fashion, both figures bending low over a lettered blackboard on which was printed the following: "What Month were you born in? See the April Horoscope at the Majestic and learn of the future. Look to the future by having your clothes cleaned and pressed here." The display was shown in the window of one of the largest clothes cleaning and pressing establishments in the town. It would be well for a bunch of our showmen to look this copy over, and if a spot can be found, to use it. If you can't use it now, file it away. It is sure to come in handy.

We think that this corking river ballyhoo that we are showing here was created by Roy Nelson, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Melbourne. Unfortunately we received it without any credit line being attached. However, we are sure that if Roy wasn't responsible for it, he will give full credit where it belongs. Right, Roy? The display was run on the river from ten in the morning until ten at night. A great deal of river traffic is to be found in Melbourne, so the angle was a corker as a business getter. Two six-foot cut-outs were placed on the boat. The cut-outs and the sign were illuminated at night. After using the stunt for a week before playdate, Nelson was compelled to take it off, due to a protest made by the Board of Works. But, anyway, he managed to get in the desired plug.

Some of our members may also recall that C. J. Latta, of New Haven, Conn., in the U. S. A., used the same stunt last summer, hiring a boat to cruise about the various beaches plugging the picture. We are also showing one of the "live" window displays that Nelson used on "Sally." A girl demonstrated an electric iron in the window of an electrical appliance shop. The display drew a number of persons to it, and the cards and cut-out plugging the picture were seen by all, the result being that many of the observers were sold on the Marilyn Miller picture.

The Tivoli Theatre in Brisbane, the house managed by Mr. Lane, is reported as being wide-awake, and right on tap when chances are on hand for picture plugs. The street ballyhoo that Lane doped out for "Street of Chance" helped him turn in a knockout business for playdates. A man, as the photo shows, dressed in evening clothes, topped by a high hat, carried a lamp post about the town. The post carried a street sign "Street of Chance." The man would stop on the main boulevards and busy street intersections of Brisbane and rest against the pole. Persons approaching him would be given a sales talk on the picture. This slant is one that can be adopted by American showmen too, as it seems to us it should fit in with some part of a campaign. Look it over.

Marking a new trend in novel newspaper layouts, this newspaper ad that we are presenting is a corker. We cannot give credit for it, as we don't know to whom it belongs, but we have a hunch it is another Roy Nelson stunt. It is certainly a fitting item with which to close this account of Australia's activities. The ad is a full-page one and appeared in the leading papers. Captions—which cannot be seen in the photo—were placed under each scene in the strip of film. The ad certainly had the town buzzing, and it is small wonder that the picture did a landslide business.

Here's an angle that it will pay you to use now, or file away for future reference. Give it some consideration, as it more than deserves it. The right picture in the photo showing Arliss' head was a break that the showman obtained from one of the leading publications. It seems that on the other side of the big pond, newspaper and publishing houses turn out "contents bills" similar to our magazine title pages—which are placed on every newsstand as a sales plug for the paper or periodical. Arliss' picture was landed on one of these "contents bills" and placed on prominent display on every newsstand in the town. This, too, helped sell "Disraeli."

Before closing this article, we'd like to state to our many showmen friends in Australia that it was well nigh impossible for us to present the vast amount of material which was forwarded to us direct, and from our Regional Chairman. To those showmen, and to the showmen whose work we are presenting, we'd like to offer our thanks for the interest they are taking in the affairs of the Managers' Round Table Club.

Thanx!

We want to convey our appreciation, to our Australian members for the interest they are showing in the Club's activities. We are sure that the rest of their fellow showmen who weekly peruse the pages of Empee News join us in our expressions. We hope that we will be able to present more of these accounts in the near future, because we know they are read with interest throughout the industry.

Shun Sesquipedalian Words When Writing Copy

(From B. M. T. Advertiser)

Sesquipedalian means "measuring a foot and a half" and is humorously applied to long words. Many writers, unfortunately, have a habit of punctuating their copy with words of this type. For some unknown reason they believe that sonorous-sounding words and hybrid sentences make their work look scholarly, dignified, and impressive.

Perhaps they are correct in this belief, but what do they gain by such a practice?

Advertising, as we see it, consists in getting the writer's thoughts about the goods adopted by the reader's mind and the skilled advertising man will see that there is a minimum of difficulty on the part of the reader to interpret his thoughts.

Instead of wondering if his copy is too plain, a writer should wonder if it is plain enough. There are millions whose minds cannot readily grasp thoughts expressed in big words. On the other hand, no matter how highly educated a reader may be he will never object to simplicity in writing.

Daniel Defoe, in Robinson Crusoe, used short, simple words, and the work to this day stands as the acme of clear writing.

If any writer doubts the fashionableness of simple expression, let him witness this paragraph from a help wanted advertisement inserted in an advertising journal by a leading agency: "We do not want a flowery copy man noted for high-sounding, theoretical copy, 'full of sound and fury and signifying nothing.'"

Read — And Avoid Trouble!

Recently the St. Louis Safety Council issued an unusually fine inspection form for use in theatres as well as other establishments. ## Teddy McDonald of Universal City Is Passing One Along

From the Hollywood sector, Teddy McDonald, attached to the publicity forces of Universal Pictures, at Universal City, Calif., drops us a line or two concerning his doings out in the great West, which we are passing along in the event that any of his fellow Club members might like to use the idea he gives us.

We are showing a couple of photos of two men who made a cross-country trip in an Austin (or perhaps, since the car's an Austin, we should say "hop"). The men started from New York and landed in Hollywood with no delays except a flat tire. Upon their arrival at the studio they were shown around by McDonald.

It is Teddy's contention that showmen can cash in on a lot of publicity by ascertaining the itineraries of men or women who make cross-country trips in autos, on bicycles or by foot, and when they arrive in your town to give them a special greeting, have them meet the Mayor, have a dinner for them, invite them to a show and then promote lodging for them from the local hotel, where they can remain over night as guests of the theatre or town. Teddy bases his contention on the fact that a picture is pretty certain to break in the local papers, and in order to prove this, he sends us a clipping from the Los Angeles Examiner which shows a picture of the men starting out on the home hop.

One of the photos accompanying this story shows Teddy greeting the men; the other shows the men being sent off from scratch by Kane Richmond, star of the "Leather Pushers" series. Figure the stunt out. There may be an angle or two in it that will help your campaign somewhat.

Here's the Way a Cleveland Showman Used Potato Stunt

One of the first showmen to swing into action on our recent box on the value of running potato matinees at Thanksgiving and Christmas times is Paul Apple, of the Ambassador Amusement Company in Cleveland, Ohio, who gives us a little dope on the way he used the suggestion in his neighborhood houses.

Mr. Apple tells us that he ran two slides on his screen. One slide was directed to the patrons. The copy read:

Potato Nites

Every Mon-Tues-Friday

We Want Potatoes!

We will accept one potato as FIVE CENTS toward the purchase price of an admission ticket.

These Potatoes Are to Be Given to the Poor and Needy of This Naborhood

DON'T BE BASHFUL, FOLKS—BRING 'EM IN

In many instances it was found that persons would bring in bags of potatoes. They liked the five cent discount idea.

The other slide carried an appeal direct to the merchants. It speaks for itself.

We Want Potatoes

for the Poor and Needy in This Naborhood

Merchants:

Bring one bushel of potatoes and we will run your ad on our screen for

ONE WEEK

You need the Advertising - - -

- - - We want the Potatoes

HOW ABOUT IT?

A great many merchants took advantage of this generous offer. Apple tells us that it has been his custom to turn over the potatoes received to two or three churches in the neighborhood. He cautions us on one angle, namely, a cosmopolitan neighborhood.

"If you are located in a cosmopolitan neighborhood," he says, "take care in your distribution to see that all of the local institutions are given a break."

We want to thank Mr. Apple for passing along this account of his fine activity. We are sure that many of our members will follow suit. We hope to hear from you again, Mr. Apple, regarding your showselling in Cleveland. Let's make it soon.

"All For One And One For All"

Do Little Things Count?

Those of us who still believe that the little touches and the little details when piled together create a mighty mountain, might give a thought to the question of a welcome trailer, as well as a good night trailer for the opening and closing of the house.

Recently we sat in a theatre watching the performance, and when the show broke, about eleven o'clock, it ended with a very interesting and entertaining "good night" trailer which finished by wishing all of the patrons "good night and happy dreams."

These little touches have often sent patrons home in just the right frame of mind, which means that they were tickled with the evening's entertainment and would, no doubt, look forward to the next time they could visit the theatre.

While we have only singled out the opening and closing trailers, there are so many other little intimate touches which find a welcome reception from the patrons that we are still wondering whether these little details are not worth watching very carefully.

What are you slants on this situation, and what suggestions have you to offer that might benefit your brother members and showmen the world over?

Miss Clara Schmitt Had Party That Boosted Receipts

Representing the showmen, Miss Clara Schmitt, who handles the managerial reins at the Yazoo Theatre in Yazoo City, Miss., tells us that she featured a Hallowe'en party that went over very well in her town.

Publicity stories were run in the local paper to the effect that the theatre was going to have a party. Residents of the town were invited to take part. Prizes were given for the most novel costumes, for the tallest and smallest persons entered, for the thinnest and fatest, and many other unique ideas. The prizes were promoted by Miss Schmitt from the local merchants.

The party was a riot from start to finish. Laughs galore were heard all over the house. The theatre was jammed with spectators, and every one voted that it was the best party held in a long time. We understand that Miss Schmitt is doing some good work out in her town. We'd like to hear from her again very soon, and we hope she will favor us with a photograph and an account of her career in the show game. What do you say, Miss Schmitt?

Murray Lafayette Is Clicking At Princess In Hartford, Conn.

Now that he has his feet on the ground at the Princess Theatre in Hartford, Conn., we look forward to seeing what Murray Lafayette is going to do to keep them lining up at the box-office of the house.

One of his recent stunts was that of distributing novel heralds about the town as a plug for "A Lady Surrenders." The heralds were handed out at various office buildings. They were imprinted with a message in shorthand. Stenographers were invited to send translations to the theatre, the first fifty being given tickets to see the show. The stunt went over very well in Hartford, especially as that sort of gag had never been used before.

We understand that Lafayette is turning out work of this sort on every new show. He always adds a little more to each campaign. We hope that we will hear from him soon regarding the rest of the work. And, oh yes! before signing off this little story, we'd like to announce that Lafayette has joined the ranks of the benedicts, having become hitched just recently.

Moments

by BRUCE BARTON

This article, reprinted by special permission of Bruce Barton and "Red Book Magazine," seems particularly timely for showbusiness. Those of you who constantly complain that you are wasting your time in your present positions should read it over twice. Why some folks think that promotions are going to spring out at them from behind every ashcan will forever remain a mystery. To get anywhere, whether it be showbusiness or any other business, means long, hard work and the ability to stick to what you are doing, firmly convinced that each day's work adds to your stock in trade. We know all about the stories of the men who were jumped into big executive jobs over night and without any experience, but take our word for it, they are mostly stories, not facts.

"CHICK" LEWIS

A young man who is ambitious complained that he is in a rut.

"For the last two years nothing has happened. I work just as hard, but I can't see that I'm headed anywhere."

It cheered him to be told that every man goes through the same experience.

Even great careers do not present a straight line of steady progress, but rather a jagged fever-chart of rises and dips.

"Take for example the life of Nathaniel Hawthorne," as a writer in the "Century Magazine" said recently. "Even his biographer cannot tell what he was doing for ten years after leaving college. What occupied Tennyson between 1832 and 1840? Or Woodrow Wilson between 1885 and 1900?

"Actually, no man knows that he is destined for immortality or high office; he only knows that he is living from year to year, storing up accumulated energies and experience, waiting and hoping that his chance will come."

In the old book of Joel is this promise: "I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten."

What are the years that the locust hath eaten? The years when men work hard, yet reap no harvest. These years, says Joel, are not lost; they have subsequent value.

All of us have seen that promise fulfilled. I recall a long stretch of months when every single thing went wrong. Poor health, many outside obligations, no chance to do any writing.

A wise friend met me when my mood was rebellious. "You ought to know better than to fret," he said. "No experience is wasted. Everything that happens to you now puts something into you that will be useful later on."

It seemed then that he was just being kind. Today I look back on that tough period as profitable beyond all price. Life consists not of years, or months, or days, but of moments. There are glorious moments of friendship and happiness, to be enjoyed to the utmost. There are moments of disappointment to be endured. The locust is sure to get its share of the moments.

And even THESE are sometimes restored.

Showmen Of Washington Did Plenty To Aid Unemployed

Remember the account of the Washington, D. C. showman who recently handed the town's race horse enthusiasts a big laugh by the introduction of a novel herald? He's at it again. Only this time, instead of pulling a laugh gag, he set out to do his bit towards relieving the unemployment situation in the Capital City.

The group of showmen at Universal's Rialto Theatre in Washington got together and formulated a plan that was a knockout. They got in touch with executive headquarters and a short time later, Carl Laemmle sent a message to President Hoover informing him that everything would be placed at the disposal of Mr. Hoover's newly appointed committee for unemployment relief. The Washington "Times" was next tied in. And the sheet did plenty. Three columns an edition, five editions a day—150 columns of space was garnered by the theatre on this one. Plenty of ads were also used. Every available bit of space in the town was put to some use to plug the monster show that the showmen intended holding. And then came a hitch. It was found that the crowd of people making application to the midnight benefit would necessitate the holding of the performance at another and larger house—the Fox, to be exact.

Displaying showmanship way above the average, the group announced that in view of the fact that the affair was one of the public's, Laemmle would not mind transferring the show to a competitive house. The Universal president's wire to this effect landed on the front page of the newspaper, with a seven-column headline on top of it. From then on, photos were the order of the day. The evening of the benefit found the theatre mobbed, it being necessary to call out cops to hold back the press. Over $3,200 was given into the hands of Mr. Hoover's committee for distribution among the needy. After the benefit, the newspaper printed a vote of thanks to the theatre, expressing its gratitude—and the peoples'—for the splendid way in which the thing was handled. So much for that.

Two or three days after the benefit, our showman friend hit up another slant. He would give some men employment. To see how he accomplished this you need only to look at the cut we are showing. It's not bad, is it? And when you stop to consider that street ballyhoos are taboo in Washington, you can readily appreciate the value of the stunt. We'd like to see some more of this work, and we hope to have some to pass along in the near future. What do you say?

Another Club Booster!

And still they pour into the office! It seems that we started something when Roger Drissel of Washington, D. C., sent us in that ace photo of himself showing that he thinks so much of his membership certificate that he places it in full view of everyone entering the office. The latest showman to give us the low-down on his certificate and the spot that it occupies in his office is Jay H. Guthrie, manager of the State Theatre in Uhrichsville, Ohio.

The certificate occupies a prominent spot at the top of Guthrie's desk. Persons entering the office are certain to see it. We'd also like to point out to you the copy of Empee News right beside Guthrie. The certificate and the News (even if we say it ourself) should symbolize a business getting combination for any live-wire showman. Right, Jay? And, oh yes, we'd like the Club to know that atop of the desk may be found a file of Empee News, which contain a number of well-thumbed copies, thereby offering proof that Guthrie is always on the lookout for ideas and stunts for his picture and special events.

Matt Press Handed Out Whoopee Quills At Hattiesburg Fair

A stunt timed as perfectly as one of Bobby Jones' putts was successfully engineered by Matt Press, manager of the Saenger Theatre in Hattiesburg, Miss., recently as part of his campaign for the selling of "Whoopee."

The local council was running an Industrial Fair. On the last night of the fair, Press brought over 500 feathers of various hues which were to be distributed to the persons attending. The feathers carried witticisms, and the title of the picture, name of theatre and playdates.

Just before the prizes were awarded at the Fair, the man in charge made the announcement that "Whoopee" feathers would be given to those shouting "Whoopee." A din arose almost instantly among the 1,500 persons present—all shouting "Whoopee" and with outstretched arms trying to lay their fingers on one of the feathers.

In addition to providing a lot of excitement at the moment, the feather stunt also caused a lot of comment which undoubtedly helped in publicizing the picture. Seven life cut-outs of follies girls, eight feet tall and hand-painted to look natural, were placed on top of marquee. One letter of the title "Whoopee" was painted on each of the seven girls. These cut-out girls were illuminated at night with 1,000-watt bunch lights.

The marquee display, together with decorations, in the lobby and underneath marquee arrested the attention of practically every person passing within a block of the theatre—and caused much favorable comment. Maybe you'd like to work this gag, too. It offers a novel departure from the regular run of theatre plugs, and, as may be seen, it is adaptable to almost any sort of picture. We want to thank Matt for letting us see this one and we hope that he will keep us posted on the rest of his work. What do you say, Matt?

Spread Holiday Cheer

The week between Christmas and New Year's, is one time, in particular, that the manager should decorate his theatre to create an atmosphere in harmony with the spirit of the season. Lobby displays and marquee effects that radiate Xmas cheer are excellent good-will investments. Patrons are conscious of these little amenities and are quick to note an omission.

Build up these holiday sentiments. From the decorations inside and out, the theatre personnel and staff, the music, the programs—every detail should be carefully attended to. Make your patrons feel the warmth of your "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year's" wish.

Arrange to run a good atmospheric Christmas and New Year's Greeting on your screen. Not often during the year have you such golden opportunities to "glad hand" your patronage. It's an investment that will bring you a more complete satisfaction.

And from the standpoint of good will, there is probably no better way to make them feel the friendliness of your theatre.

Newspaper Check Is Showman Duty; Here Is Creamer's Method

The chart which we are reprinting below is forwarded to Club headquarters through the courtesy of John W. Creamer, manager of the Fox Palace Theatre in Muscatine, Iowa, who originated the chart for use in conjunction with his local advertising. Creamer is of the opinion that many members of the Club have been looking for something like this. We agree. Do you?

Accurate Record of Daily Newspaper Advertising

| "Journal" | Date Nov. | Ad Size | Total Inches | Cost (Col. A) | Inches to date (Col. C) | Cost to date (Col. AB) | Free Space (Col. CB) |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Monday ..... | 25th | 2x10 | 20 | 8.00 | 20 | 8.00 | 4 inch |
| Tuesday ..... | 26th | 3x9 | 27 | 10.80 | 47 | 18.80 | |
| Wednesday .. | 27th | 2x6 | 12 | 4.80 | 59 | 23.60 | 6 inch |
| Thursday ... | 28th | 4x5 | 20 | 8.00 | 79 | 31.60 | 3 inch |
| Friday ..... | 29th | 1x6 | 6 | 2.40 | 85 | 34.00 | |
| Saturday .... | 30th | 3x10 | 30 | 12.00 | 115 | 46.00 | 4 inch |

The record is made up in blank form and filled in each day after the ad appears and is measured.

For example, on Monday, 25th, the ad is 2 column, 10 inches deep, that is marked under "AD SIZE." The total inches 20 is marked the next column. The cost at 40c per inch is $8 and this goes in the next column. The next two columns will be the same for the first ad of the week (but not so thereafter).

Now, on Tuesday the ad is, say, 3 columns 9 inches or a total of 27 inches. The 27 is placed under "TOTAL INCHES." The cost figured and placed under cost. Then, under the next column, "INCHES TO DATE," you add the 27 inches to that used previously, making a total of 47 inches. This is marked in column AB. Then in the next column goes the total cost of the two days, etc.

You will note in this method you have a double check on inches used and money spent. Add up Col. A, on any date, and it must equal the total inches appearing that day in Col. AB.

The same is true of Col. G. Add it up on any day and the sum must equal the entry for that day in Col. CB.

Phelan Cashed in on Good-Will by Having Local Team as Guests

We told you that some dope would soon be forthcoming on Thomas A. (Tommy) Phelan, manager of the Strand Theatre in Long Branch, N. J. Well, here it is, and we think that it contains a slant or two that will help you with future show-selling, when you want to boost business higher.

First, we'll take the Amos 'n' Andy co-operative page that was promoted by Phelan when the colored comics made their screen bow at the Strand in "Check and Double Check." A number of dealers were tied in on it. Each ad contained a notice to the effect that two tickets to the local playhouse would be given to the first 13 purchasers in each store. The gag certainly had them talking. The ad itself was very well made up. It carried scene mats and personality pictures from the film. The heading on the pages stated that "Monday, November 17, is Amos 'n' Andy Day in Long Branch." The merchants reported an increase in business.

As a good-will plug with the local schools, Phelan arranged to run a Gala Football Night at which the Long Branch High School players and coaches were guests of honor at the theatre. The team, preceded by the high school band, marched along the main street of the town to the theatre, there stopping while the orchestra rendered a couple of selections for the entertainment of the vast throng that had collected along the line of march. The boys then went inside the lobby and posed for pictures, one of which we are showing here. The affair went off very well. The boys and girls in the theatre joined in and sang the school songs and shouted the school cheers to the entreaties of frantic cheer leaders working from the stage. Every one had a fine time, and there was no questions but that the theatre had gained considerable good-will as a result of the stunt. And additional business was found to be another of the results. Incidentally, before closing this story, we'd like you to know that the top photo we are showing is that of Tommy Phelan, himself. Thanks for your activity, Tommy, and remember we want to hear from you again real soon. Give our regards to the many Round Table friends in your district.

Personal Appearance Of Kid Star Helped Shewell Grab Space

The personal appearance of Davey Lee at the Strand Theatre in York, Pa., was the signal for George Shewell, manager of the Rialto Theatre and handling publicity for all of the Warner houses in York, to shoot with a full-page ad plugging the child star and the feature film playing the Strand.

Seven of the leading business enterprises in York were tied up on the page. Numbered among them was found a bakery, a toy shop, a music store and a number of other establishments. In every ad a cut of the kid actor was placed. All of the copy was tied in so as to read that Davey Lee endorsed the various products. Even the hotel at which the kid resided while in York was featured on the page. A streamer head, running across the layout, stated that "Davey Lee, Now at the Strand in Person, Endorses These Products." When the page made its appearance in the paper it was met with plenty of interest. And it was the sort of interest that resulted in the reader resolving to purchase a ticket to the house to see the kid.

At the conclusion of playdates, both dealers and theatre were more than satisfied with the results obtained. The small cost that they paid out for their part of the advertising was more than regained in the publicity that followed by word-of-mouth, etc. We want to thank George for letting us see this one, and we hope that we will hear from him again real soon, as the work he turned out in the past more than spoke for itself.

Lamm Sprung Novel Stunt in Lobby as a Thanksgiving Treat

With Thanksgiving Day drawing close upon him, Julius Lamm, manager of the Variety Theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, decided to engineer a lobby stunt that would sell people the film he was featuring on Thanksgiving Day and at the same time keep up the tone of holiday festivity.

The stunt that Julius successfully executed was a corker. A table, all set and ready for the turkey was placed in the lobby. A pretty girl, dressed like a waitress, presided over the table. As persons filed into the lobby on their way to, or from, the show, she distributed menus which were very cleverly worded. Some of our Club members may recall a similar menu pulled by Richard L. Moss in California some time ago, but in this, comedy is the keynote, whereas in Moss' herald a more serious vein was used. We are printing this menu so that you can pick it up and use it for the Christmas holidays if you think that the gag will click in your town.

It is interesting to note that Lamm paid nothing for the heralds, they being donated by local merchants whose ads appeared on the back page. The heralds also announced that a certain dealer was giving poultry away on Thanksgiving Eve. The heralds were printed in black and white on good stock. Think you can use them as a Christmas plug? Thanks, Julius, for passing this along. Let's have some more. And listen, give our regards to our many friends in Cleveland, will you, and tell them that we'd like to hear from them.

Andrew Poulson, Formerly of N. Y. and Now of Cal., Joins

We don't know what necessitates this hegira of New York showmen out to the Pacific Coast, but the fact remains that they go out there to see California and before long they decide to stay and sell shows in the country. If you recall, it was not so long ago that Richard L. Moss hopped from the Loew Circuit in New York to the Coast and took a house. He's still there! And now it's Andrew Poulson!

Poulson is a showman who has been in the game for a good many years. He has worked as an usher, treasurer, operator, assistant manager and manager, during his time. He has always been located in New York, either in the city or the state. The last house he managed was the Variety in Baldwinsville, New York, from which he resigned last May in order to see the Coast. And that finished that.

After he had been on the Coast a short time, he was given a chance to take a position as assistant manager of the Rivoli Theatre in Berkeley, California. He accepted. And now he may be found at the house, working under Mark Keller, the district manager. In addition to working as assistant, he is also handling the house exploitation, which—so it seems to us—is a fortunate break, as Poulson can now pass along some of his stunts and let us see them. What do you say, Andrew?

"Big Sister" Threw A Grand Party To Help Local Needy

An activity of which she most certainly can be proud is the Thanksgiving party that Natalie Tolman, supervisor of juvenile activities at the State Theatre in Stoughton, Mass., engineered. It was a corker! And it certainly clicked!

As a number of our members know, Miss Tolman is the "Big Sister" of the State Theatre Kiddie Klub, operating under the supervision of Paul W. Kunze, manager of the house. The Kiddie Klub has received considerable space in our columns recently, so we feel that we don't have to launch into a detail of what it is. But suffice to know, that its activities have made it one of the most outstanding of the kid organizations in the country. The youngsters think a lot of the "Big Sister" and the club. This fact was attested when the kids were asked to bring food the day before Thanksgiving, which would be donated to the needy of the community. Two truckloads of food were carried away. Look at the photo we are showing and you'll see a small portion of it. Miss Tolman may be seen standing alongside the food.

The local newspaper got behind this stunt with all the force that its columns could carry. Editorials, pictures, ads—all were given the theatre. The townspeople, catching the spirit of the affair, brought food to the theatre. A local dancing school offered the services of its pupils for a special show. Miss Tolman presented the talented members of the club. It is interesting to note that whereas on the last Thanksgiving party, the theatre show had been given free, admission being a potato or two, this show the kids paid the regular dime admission and also brought food. The response was greater than in previous years. Another thing that helped boost the food donations was the delivery to the theatre of all the food collected by the local schools.

One of the most commendable moves ever to be made at the State Theatre was the recent one, at Thanksgiving time, when the employees—those who could afford it—donated ten per cent of their salaries to be used toward the purchase of additional turkeys and chickens to be included in the baskets for the needy. We want to congratulate the members of the theatre staff.

We would like to point out at this time that there is no reason why a stunt of this sort can't be repeated in your town on Christmas. Not having a kiddie klub won't handicap you. There are plenty of other angles on which to concentrate. Think it over and put your plan into action. Thanks, Miss Tolman. Let's hear from you again.

The New Year's Eve Show!

If you can inject enough novel angles to make your New Year's Eve showing different than anything attempted before then you are reasonably certain that your show will be a decided success from the box-office, as well as audience, point of view.

It would be great if we could sit here at Club headquarters and tell you exactly what you should or should not do. But considering the manifold individual problems and situations, this would be a task worthy of the greatest brains in the business. We cannot attempt to make your plans for you, but we can offer some constructive suggestions which can be used as a basis for whatever you ultimately decide to do.

For example: suppose you were to present, in addition to the screen entertainment planned, a series of local dancing school talent. Every town on the map boasts of its share of local talent. Presented without the objectionable amateur angles, you might be able to assemble a darned fine show. The local color will more than make up for whatever may be lacking in finished performance.

Keep in mind, however, that the famous spirit of gaiety may be carried too far by the celebrating audience. In this case you must know your own crowd to be certain of keeping them in control.

Distributing candy, paper hats or other novelties also lends atmosphere to such shows, but noisemakers will give you too much grief, so keep away from them.

A local dance orchestra contest, several good song reels and community singing with the aid of slides, also find receptive audiences for New Year's Eve shows.

The feature picture ought to be something light and with plenty of comedy. Heavy dramas or sexy stuff will burden their minds with too much to carry for the occasion.

After the first of the year we will have plenty of stories to print about how these shows were handled, but then it will be too late, unless you are smart enough to keep a record from year to year for such occasions. So do YOUR own planning now.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Look This Pair Over; They Are Adaptable For Many Pictures

Here's a couple of corking slants, credit for which belongs to J. P. Harrison, manager of the Waco Theatre in Waco, Texas. They formed part of his campaign for Amos 'n' Andy. (In fact, they formed so potent a part that we are passing them along in the event that any of the Club members can find space for them when they play the film.) Or, if you are not playing the picture, remember, they can be used for many other cinemas.

One display that was placed in the lobby in advance and then moved to front of vacant store adjacent to theatre during playdates attracted practically every passerby. This display consisted of a front view of a shack with a shattered window pane in the center. Through the shattered window pane could be seen the figures of Amos 'n' Andy talking through a microphone.

The other display was placed in the lobby facing the people coming out of theatre. This display consisted of two large heads of Amos 'n' Andy and were placed on opposite sides of the lobby and connected by means of a flasher with small bulbs spelling out the words of Amos 'n' Andy. Cut-out letters of Ha! Ha! and laughs galore were placed around the display. A victrola placed in the back of the head of Amos, whose mouth was open, played Amos 'n' Andy records.

Both displays helped immeasurably in letting people know that the popular radio team was in town starring in their first all-talking picture. Good work, "J. P." Let's have some more.

Marpole Gave Away A Radio as Plug on "Feet First" Selling

Our old friend J. D. (Jack) Marpole, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Ogden, Utah, made a corking tie-up recently with a radio manufacturer by which he obtained a whale of a lot of publicity that resulted in the successful selling of "Feet First," Harold Lloyd's latest laugh offering.

The company ran a newspaper contest on the number of words one could make by using the six letters of PHILCO. However, in order to become a contestant and obtain an entry blank, it was first necessary to see "Feet First." Entry blanks were handed out by the cashier to each adult who paid admission. The distributor donated a console radio.

The prizes at stake were of such proportions that everybody wanted to cash in on the contest. That undoubtedly helped to swell the attendance at the theatre to see the Harold Lloyd talker. Philco paid for the two 3 x 15" ads on the contest, sniped Philco "Feet First" 24-sheets and all Philco dealers had co-operative window displays which further helped to sell the picture to the public.

Marpole also broke into a window that has hitherto held aloof from theatre advertising. This window was with a leading men's store where they featured Florsheim shoes. A full window display consisted of shoes, a big head of Lloyd, name, title, and playdates. In return for this concession, the Florsheim trademark was imprinted on the instep of shoes shown on window cards.

Listen, Jack, we'd like to hear from you more often. Keep us posted will you, so that we can pass along these live-wire showmen stunts that you engineer on every attraction?

"Song o' My Heart" Display Boosted Box-Office Business

His patrons at the State Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., take a great deal of interest in the lobby displays that I. Berman, manager of the house turns out on every new change of show, so it can be very easily seen that he has to do some tall stepping to give them nice art work, and at the same time keep within his advertising appropriation.

When he played "Song o' My Heart" recently, he gave the McCormack film a good advance plug by constructing the lobby display that we are showing in the photo. The display was simply constructed. The only material used was compoboard, which served as a background for the excellent layout of the stills from the attraction.

Persons entering the lobby would be sure to see the display, as it was placed alongside the box-office. You will note in the photo the clever way that the playdates are advertised by their placement on a heart made of compoboard. Considering the fact that Berman is rather limited as to his advertising—which must necessarily be so in a neighborhood house—he turns out some excellent work. We'd like to see some more of it too, so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club.

A MAN IS JUDGED BY THE COMPANY HE KEEPS!

SANFORD JORDON, the Assistant Manager of the Capitol Theatre in Salisbury, North Carolina, comes to us recommended rather highly by the manager of the theatre, Paul Phillips. With a tribute such as is given your ability, Sanford, we have an idea that you are doing some good work to help Mr. Phillips keep the house filled. Let's know how you are getting along from time to time so that we can report your progress.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WM. J. TRUESDELL manages the Farragut Theatre in Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., for the Century Circuit. According to reports drifting into Club headquarters, this showman is a live-wire. Such being the case, Bill, how about letting us hear from you real soon, as we'd like to pass some of your work along to your fellow members and showmen.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

BOONE HAYES is the Assistant Manager of the Lyric Theatre, in Jackson, Tenn., and according to the send-off he is given by Mr. McKenna, the manager, he is apt as his work and seems to be headed for a house of his own one of these days. Keep us posted on what you are doing to help sell shows in your territory, Boone, so that we can report your progress.

Photos of Members!

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

THESE NEW MEMBERS THOUGHT SO!

HARRY F. KARASIK manages the Oriental Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. It is at this theatre that some excellent showmanship is being displayed that ranks with any turned out by the Brooklyn showmen, who, incidentally, are certainly turning up some corking work. When you send us in a contribution, Harry, include your photo, will you, so that we can give you a regular introduction?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

SIGMUND STRAUSS is the manager of the Palace Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Strauss is another of the active Loew showmen to hook up with our organization. We think that he, too, like so many of his brother showmen on his chain, will prove to be exceedingly active. Are we right Sigmund?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JAMES RISK manages Loew's Circle Theatre in New York City. The Circle is located in a pretty busy section, so Mr. Risk is afforded an opportunity for displaying some showmanship of an excellent calibre. While we are unaware at present just what methods he used to bring them into the box-office, we are sure that he will let us in on the secret as his next contribution. And listen, James, include your photo, too.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOS. F. LEONARD is the manager of the Melba Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. At this house he has been turning out some good showmanship, and it is of interest to know that he tries to take full advantage of the opportunities offered by a house located in the downtown business section. Though a block or so off the main thoroughfare, Mr. Leonard nevertheless brings them into the house. Keep it up, Joe, and let's hear from you soon.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOSEPH B. HURL manages the State Theatre in Milford, Mass. He is quite well versed in showmanship, therefore he is capable of holding down his present position to a T. Since Milford is in the New England district, Joe, and also in Massachusetts, a frequent representation of showmanship from which State is seen on our pages, we think that you bid fair to become an active member. Are we right?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ERWIN NEWMAN comes to the Round Table Club proposed for membership by Eddie Fain. Mr. Newman is one of that live-wire group of showmen who handle houses in Revere, Mass. Erwin, himself, manages the Revere Theatre in the city of the same name. According to Eddie Fain, he is pretty active. We'd like to see some of your work, Erwin, so that we can pass it along. What do you say?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

RAY KINIRY, the manager of the Opera House in Bellows Falls, Vt., is the second showman to be proposed for membership by Eddie Fain. Though not located in Mass., as are the rest of the men proposed by Eddie, Ray is nevertheless giving his town some fine showmanship (and when we say fine, we mean fine, irrespective of whether it is done in Mass. or Vt.). Hop to it, Ray, and shoot along a bunch of it, so that we can let the rest of the show world see what you are doing.

IRVING DREEBEN is the manager of the Advertising Department of Fox Film Exchange in New York City. It is Dreeben's duty to supply exhibitors with accessories. In proposing Dreeben for membership, Wm. F. Brock of the Kingsbridge Theatre in New York City, declares that this film man is right on the spot with a bunch of ideas. Oke, Irving. We'd like to have some of them, so that we can pass them along. Let's hear from you.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

B. H. POWERS is the Assistant Manager of the El Dorado Theatre in Eldorado, Kansas. He has been with the theatre for about two years, having been promoted to his present position from the doorman's job. If he has paid plenty of attention to business in the two years, we think that he should be ready for a house of his own very soon. Drop us a line and let us know how you're getting along, "B. H."

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOSEPH EPSTEIN is the manager of the Victory Theatre in New York City for Loew's. If we recall aright, it was just a short time ago that Mr. Epstein's work was called to our attention by one of the energetic exploitation men on his circuit. It seems that he is well liked around the neighborhood, and this decided asset has helped him in many ways. Let's have some accounts of yourself and your work, Joe.

Next Week:—Motion Picture Herald

IN accordance with the announcement last week MOTION PICTURE NEWS will, in next week's issue, be consolidated with EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD. The first issue of the consolidated publications under the title, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, will be dated January 3, 1931.

Hence, Motion Picture News, and likewise Exhibitors Herald-World, will as individual publications cease to be issued commencing next week.

In their stead will appear MOTION PICTURE HERALD — a publication which will have assembled within its covers the chief and most important features of both the News and the Herald, together with many innovations and developments which will be made possible by the consolidation of the publishing resources of both institutions.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will be supplied to all subscribers to either the Herald or the News for the unexpired term of their subscriptions. In cases where there are subscriptions to both the News and the Herald a suitable extension of such subscriptions, enabling the subscriber to receive MOTION PICTURE HERALD for a period totalling the terms of the individual subscriptions, will be made.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD has been planned and equipped to take its place in the fore rank of the outstanding business publications of the day. In the organization which will be responsible for the operation of MOTION PICTURE HERALD there will be included the persons of leading experience and accomplishment in motion picture trade journalism. This consolidated publication, representing a merger and continuation of all of the principal weekly publications of the motion picture industry, traces its record back into the earliest days of the motion picture. Its progenitor was "The Magic Lantern Weekly and Moving Picture World" which was founded as the first trade press of an infant business which was just struggling into existence.

The accumulated experience of twenty-three years in motion picture trade journalism stands back of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The publications which have been merged into MOTION PICTURE HERALD have, year by year, since the start of the industry, faithfully chronicled the activities of the business and have brought their support to bear on all matters calculated to advance the motion picture as entertainment and to enhance the prosperity of the industry.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will carry on. Remembering the fine traditions of the weekly trade press, it will seek always to safeguard those interests which have been defended by its predecessors and at the same time it will seek to deal with the new problems which will arise in a manner which will be uniformly constructive to the best interests of the motion picture and the industry which is responsible for it.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will enter upon its career with no entangling alliances whatsoever. It owes no allegiance except to the best interests of the motion picture and the industry. It is committed only to a policy of service to the whole business in all of its branches. It shall not deal in either prejudices or favoritisms. Its course is plain: It shall provide a great organ of the industry and for the industry; it shall deal fairly and equitably with every phase and feature of the business from the smallest cross-road exhibition interest to the greatest theatre circuit; from Poverty Row to the greatest studio; from the single-picture state-righter to the greatest distribution system.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will seek its reward, not in catering to any special interest, but in the satisfaction it shall be able to render to the whole industry.

This, then, is our pledge of performance.

For the performance itself, watch, commencing next week—

Hey, Round Table-ites— Get a Load of This!

YOU'VE probably heard the rumors; well, here is the confirmation: Exhibitors Herald-World and Motion Picture News have merged into MOTION PICTURE HERALD, thereby combining the two outstanding trade publications of the industry into one of those giants with a punch that will make trade paper history.

Where do we fit into this picture?

I'll tell you; we fit in so grand that if you thought the Managers' Round Table Club was good in the past, just imagine what it will be in the future. Where we had the backing and support of one trade publication we now have two. The entire resources, background and influence of Martin Quigley and the Quigley Publishing Company are now ours.

AND now listen to me while I wax sentimental.

When success first crowned my efforts to make the Club an organization that would really mean something in the industry, I dreamed some wild dreams. Fantastic ones I thought they were a few years back. But I clung to the hope that I would some day see those dreams come true.

I pictured every honest-to-God showman a member of the Club. I fancied that these active members, through their contributions to the Club and the Club pages, would secure recognition and promotion which might otherwise be denied them. I built up hopes based on the idea that the show business and the men in it needed something like our organization, not to become a union and fight against overwhelming odds for proper consideration, better salaries and humane working conditions, but to bring to the attention of the industry as a whole the truths about the boys behind the guns so that these much-needed benefits could be secured by reason of the fact that the men proved themselves worthy of them.

The Club grew by leaps and bounds. Where one hundred members once blossomed there are now thousands. Where we used to receive a dozen letters a week we now get hundreds.

These things didn't just happen. All of those showmen already enrolled in the Club could never have made it a success if the organization did not exceed their fondest expectations. It was because they found a friendly spirit. Helpful. Fraternal. Brotherly. Call it what you like. But that certain "something" was there and the gang was with us.

AND now my imagination is running riot once again. I see where this gigantic trade paper backing the Managers' Round Table Club will mean greater possibilities. Larger membership. A greater variety of exploitation and theatre operation ideas. Intercommunication between a larger number of showmen through the Club and the Club pages.

And my own cup of joy is just about flooded. I've had the absolute assurance of Mr. Quigley and the entire combined staffs of the publication that there will be no limit to what we can look forward to in developing the Club into a more far-reaching and powerful medium in the industry.

I'm certain that each and every one of our many members and readers will join me in wishing Motion Picture Herald and Martin Quigley all the success they so well deserve.

Vital Service of Film Boards Demands Retention, Pettijohn Tells Distributors

Here's Where The Dough Goes

American and Canadian railroads get $702,000 yearly from Publix for moving stage shows. Cost of transporting a single unit over the circuit's entire route totals $10,000 in fares and $3,500 in Pullman fees. Fifty-two companies bring this figure above the $700,000 mark.

Each show travels 10,552½ miles, over 21 lines. Tickets furnished to unit members reach 5½ feet, said to be the longest transportation script in the world.

Hughes an Angel? NO! Or a Santa Claus? Two NOS!!

Howard Hughes, apparently, ended his "angeling" days with release of "Hell's Angels," the air opus in which the young oil millionaire poured a reported total of $4,000,000. Because, when Joseph M. Schenck sought to make a touch of from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 for Art Cinema, without giving Hughes the protection of collateral, Howard gave an answer which was plenty negative. This angle, say insiders, differs from a yarn reported several weeks ago when negotiations were called off. At that time it was said Hughes walked out on Schenck when United Artists threw its laboratory business into the lap of H. J. Yates and Consolidated Film Industries instead of giving it to Hughes for the latter's Multicolor plant in Hollywood. As a matter of fact, the Consolidated deal is understood to have been made after Hughes and Schenck failed to agree on terms for Art Cinema financing and was used by United Artists, it is said, as a wedge in attempting to strike a bargain for Hughes' millions.

No In-Between For Managers on Clean Ad Copy

Only strict adherence to the advertising code of ethics formulated by the Hays office will be tolerated in the Fox chain, managers of which were again ordered this week to avoid dirt in theatre copy. "An ad is either moral or immoral," according to the Fox edict, and in-betweens are taboo. "Do not try to get around these rules," the managers were warned.

'Bad Boy' Reports To Succeed the Credit System?

Chicago—Exhibitors here are wondering if the "bad boy" reports being furnished exchanges by the local Film Board is an attempt to supplant the outlawed credit system with a new disciplinary measure.

Under the present plan, reports of all exhibitors who fail to pick up a show are forwarded by the exchanges to the Film Board. These reports are then compiled and returned to member exchanges. Disciplinary action on the basis of these reports may be taken by the exchanges in the future, it was said, if habitual offenders become too numerous. Just what this disciplinary action may be, was not explained.

Pathe Unit and G. B. Firm Merge

London—A new Anglo-American film agreement has been reached with the formation of a joint company to be known as Associated Picture Prod.

The two companies involved are Stoll and Producers' Distributing Co., the latter representing Pathe in Britain.

It is planned to produce three films at the Stoll studios at Cricklewood, and to distribute through the new organization.

Theatres Readying for New Year's Midnite Shows

Despite the current general business and usual holiday slump, key city deluxe runs throughout the country are preparing elaborate midnight shows for New Year's Eve.

Cabaret and night clubs are expected to experience a tough night, because of depressed conditions, with thousands turning toward theatres for the midnight fun.

Savings to Distributors in Chi Alone Sufficient to Maintain All Other Boards

Retention of Film Boards as an "imperative necessity" because of their invaluable service to the industry is urged by C. C. Pettijohn, president of Film Boards of Trade. The boards' activities cover a wide range, maintaining harmony between exhibitors and distributors, Pettijohn pointed out in a memorandum to Hays organization members.

C. C. Pettijohn

At the suggestion of Pettijohn, a meeting recently was held by the Chicago board, members of which petitioned Hays to retain the board. This is part of a national campaign to stress the importance of film boards. Following, in part, is Pettijohn's memorandum:

Film Boards of Trade were in existence and recognized as practical and necessary in 18 exchange centers prior to March, 1922. Eliminating the duties of arbitration and the credit committee work, the remaining duties of Film Boards of Trade can be enumerated as follows:

They are the field organizatioo of the industry; the clearing houses of all matters affecting the industry as a whole. They are the point of contact for the newspapers and various organizations constantly asking for information about the industry. It is to the advantage of the industry that the information so given out be accurate.

Most of the Film Board of Trade secretaries are women. The majority are college graduates. They belong to their local women's organizations; in many instances they are acting either as secretary or chairman of some local motion picture women's club organization.

Film Board of Trade secretaries understand the importance of maintaining peaceable and friendly relations between exhibitors and the members of their Board. Exhibitors daily come to the Film Board offices with their troubles. The secretary almost invariably sends them away satisfied. This service requires a considerable part of their time. They must often visit the exchanges with the exhibitor. Exhibitors' troubles in most instances involve confusion in their bookings or misunderstandings of their contractual obligations. These troublesome situations are usually straightened out without taking up the branch managers' time, thus saving much litigation that would otherwise happen.

All of these secretaries have met and know their local newspaper editors. Through this contact the industry has been enabled many times to contradict untrue rumors and to furnish constructive information about the industry.

Film Boards of Trade have been most useful in avoiding labor troubles and disputes. They are quick to sense in each instance whether or not any labor problem is one in which the distributors should interest themselves, and on many occasions these Boards have, with the use of tact and good judgment avoided situations that would have resulted in increased expense of distribution.

The secretaries in the Film Board of Trade themselves are invaluable in legislative matters. The secretaries are constantly looking for signs of approaching unfair legislation.

Our Public Relations Department has found the Film Board of Trade secretaries of service to them and constantly use them.

THE BAROMETER RISES

ON the threshold of 1931—and still alive; still whole, in fact!

The motion picture industry has survived what, if one were to believe the many rumors tossed from week to week, has been one of the toughest and stormiest years the good ship has had to weather.

Not only survived, but—with ballast adjusted and full sail set—is bowling along at a fairly respectable clip. The worst of the storm is now behind and has been left hull-down on the horizon.

Not in a great many years have the calamity-howlers had so big an inning as has been their portion this past twelvemonth. The picture business, always a fecund breeder of direful rumors and dreadful forebodings, has had more than its share of late. This was natural in a year when "Hard times!" and "Bad business!" were the substitutes for the usual forms of morning greeting and lunch-hour salutation.

The Industry Wins Its Spurs

BUT the motion picture industry has staunchly weathered this, the hardest commercial year the calendar has shown in all the quarter century of the industry's existence.

Let this be set down to the credit of the men in control—the men in the business and executive offices of the companies that cater to this mercurial enterprise of entertainment.

Long enough has it been said that they are not business men; long enough has the outsider scoffed at their methods, jeered at their failings and shrugged at their successes.

IN no boastful vein let it be written once-and-for-all that in this year of grace, 1930, the motion picture business has won its spurs in a fight where business, generally speaking, has taken it on the chin. Closings and bank failures may have blackened with scare-heads the front pages of the dailies; business troubles may have bulked large in the papers' back-sections; but no established motion picture company—in any of the fields of production, distribution or exhibition—has closed its doors or gone to the wall.

Let us be frank.

It was commonly heard: "The bankers have given warning. Trim sail, tighten your belt, cut down your overhead, reduce your expenses, look to your income."

So be it.

The picture business heeded the warning. It had the ability—it had the stability—it had the tenacity—and it had the sheer guts to do just that.

Results of the Acid Test

AS a result, the end of the year finds the larger companies facing the future in better shape than they were at its beginning. Not only is this true inside of the various organizations themselves, but happily it also holds in many quarters as regards mutual relationships between the various companies. Old enmities have been ironed out; misunderstandings have been replaced with mutual agreements; cooperation today is the solid commercial fact between companies where at the beginning of the year that term covered an attitude of polite aloofness.

"Showmen!" "Gamblers!" "Amateurs!" "Rank outsiders in the realm of big business!"

Well, perhaps!

But, by the test of 1930, able, serious, hard-working, unafraid business men who know their job and know how to preserve it.

'Scandal' Scannel, Sue's Sec, Sicced Sue Onto Stuart?

Hollywood — Sue Carol engaged Alice Scannel as a secretary, but Miss Scannell turned out to be another "balance sheet." And, if you don't believe it ask Jimmy Quirk, who's Photoplay fan sheet spills the yarn about the discovery by reporters of Nick Stuart's pajamas in Sue's closet, after which the secretary "advised the couple to announce their secret marriage which had taken place several months earlier."

"Various events had caused things to be whispered around concerning Sue and Nick," the yarn reveals, "when the secretary came to the rescue. 'Announce your marriage,' she begged, 'and save your reputations.' So they did."

Three-Way Projection At Gumbiner Theatre

Los Angeles — The new Los Angeles, costing $2,000,000, will be opened by H. L. Gumbiner, Jan. 1.

Gumbiner, owner of the Tower, will be owner of the new house seating 2,500. Various innovations, such as six seats to a row, a club lounge with a dance floor, a cafe, a cosmetic room with attendants, and children's play rooms and nurseries, will be features.

One of the unusual points will be simultaneous projection in the lounge and children's rooms at the same time that films are being shown on the main theatre screen.

"City Lights," Charlie Chaplin's new film, will open.

S. Charles Lee, architect, was the designer.

Fox Takes Over Coast Publix Houses on Jan. 1

San Francisco—The string of seven Paramount Publix theatres purchased last week by Fox in a reputed $20,000,000 deal will be placed under Fox management on New Year's, when title passes on three in this town, one in Oakland (now building); two at Portland, Ore., and a Seattle house.

Myers Disturbed by Leak on Story About Negotiations For Consolidation

With both sides agreeing that a solid front is needed to combat impending adverse legislation, M.P.T.O.A. and Allied States Association leaders will meet soon after the first of the year to consider proposed amalgamation of the two organizations.

The proposed consolidation of the two organizations followed a series of conferences sponsored by a third party. Considerable progress was made at the sessions, news of which was suppresed at the requet of leader of both parties. With intimation of the sessions printed by a Coast publication, a statement was issued announcing that the meetings were to be resumed in January, after leaders had opportunity to confer with their organizations on the subject.

Under the plan, both affiliated and unaffiliated exhibitors would be invited to join in one national exhibitor association. No details of the proposed set-up have been divulged.

Washington—Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Association, is peeved because of the premature leak on the story concerning negotiations for an amalgamation of the M.P.T.O.A. and Allied.

Stockholders of Pathe Urged to Okay RKO Buy

Boston—The RKO purchase of Pathe is seen as a good deal for the Pathe organization by McNeel's Financial Service, which states in its weekly bulletin:

"Stockholders of the Pathe Corporation should sign and return their proxies authorizing directors to ratify the agreement made with the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation to sell its producing and distributing properties to the latter company.

"This seems to be a good deal for Pathe and under the present conditions the offer by RKO seems liberal."

This advice substantiates the contentions of Joseph P. Kennedy, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in his letter to stockholders "that the transaction will relieve Pathe from its difficult position as an independent producer" and his urgance that all stockholders send in their proxies to aid the consummation of the deal at the meeting on January 5.

Iowa Theatre Darkened By Labor Disagreement

Council Bluffs, Ia.—Failure to arrive at an agreement between theatre owners and the operators' union has caused the Broadway to go dark. Manager Robert K. Fulton has left to take over the management of the Princess at Sioux City.

In a Tough Spot

Known only to a few very close associates, the production chief and vice-president of a certain well known old-line company was recently secretly confined to a sanitorium where little hope is held for his recovery.

In the meantime, his business associates are formulating plans for complete reorganization and now are scouting around for someone to fill the shoes of the sick chief.

Exhibs Would Take Packards From Operators

Chicago—Despite the fact that there is a greater number of complaints and more open rebellion against maintaining two operators in the booth than ever before, the exhibitors' chances of having this situation ameliorated are no better than ever. The stranglehold which Chicago labor organizations maintain on the theatre industry here remains as strong and uncompromising as ever, and it is more than doubtful whether even a united theatre front would be effective in obtaining any relief.

The seasonal depression is being felt in the neighborhoods this year more than ever before. A reflection of it is found in the continual filing of complaints of the two men in the booth situation, which is the first thought of the theatre owner when expense cutting becomes imperative. Exhibitors' associations state that never before have they received so many petitions for a reduction of one operator. As a result, both Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois, and Jack Miller, president of Chicago Exhibitors Association will confer with members of their organizations prior to reopening negotiations with union officials which will seek some relief for the small exhibitor.

Many of the latter contend that they could operate at a profit if they could be spared the expense of the extra operator. These definitely claim that they are barely making the grade under existing conditions. Their particular grievance, however, appears to be that, whereas they themselves have been forced to put away their motors in sore times, and ride the street car to work, their operators continue to drive up to the theatre in Packards and Pierce Arrows.

Akron Puts Special "Bulls" On Trail of Dynamiters

Akron, O. — Ten theatre dynamitings, four in the last three weeks, have resulted in the organization of a special bombing squad at local police headquarters.

An Insider's Outlook

THE physical chacteristics of several of the national circuits are about to undergo some changes which will endow the body with an entirely different face.

The new move, closely held and met with more or less stony stares when you ask about it, appears to revolve around the immediate necessity to decentralize operations, make New York far less important than it has been and, at the same time, shut up the stock of operators in the field.

For, New York has learned to its widespread sorrow that you can't operate theatres three, four and even more hundreds of miles away by a blue print. The homey touch that has spelt success for the individual operator for these many years, it has been discovered, imparts to exhibition something which circuit-controlled managers can't give, burdened down as they are with rules, regulations and restrictions concocted in the home office.

By Way of Evidence

Here's one of a hundred stories to prove it:

The man whose experience this is, operates both as an independent and a circuit partner. In several cities, just overnight from New York as the railroads go, he stands on his own two feet. His opposition includes three of the nationally-operated circuits. But do you think he is worried? Not a bit.

Regularly week in and week out, he is licking the circuits so badly that it's just too bad for New York chain headquarters and the red ink they use so freely these days. This chap has studied his circuit opposition, discovered what they don't do which is plenty and then proceeded to fill in the wide gaps in friendly service which his competitors overlook. That one trick, plus judicious and psychological booking, are the corner-stones of his success.

In a New England town, it so happens this selfsame showman is partner with a big circuit—a big one. One Monday morning, he studied some reports, saw spots before his eyes and hopped on a train. He was determined, you see, to find out why, if he made money in other cities, he couldn't in this one. So he checked and double checked.

A Conversation

Then he came back to New York, visited the head of the producer chain and said:

"There's nothing wrong with that town. If your manager didn't have to spend ninety per cent of his time answering communications from the home office, he might be able to spend some putting his house over. Then you and I both would make some money."

These two stories and the lessons they carry just about explain the current state of affairs. The circuit heads, whether by force of circumstance or weight of newly-found wisdom, have reached the point where they admit there is much to it. That being the case, some upsets may be expected, for they are on the way.

Not only will it be good business as dollars and cents and profits go. It will also be a smart move in view of the legislative tidal wave that bids fair to engulf the industry next year. The manager operating on his home ground and in sympathetic understanding of the public he expects to patronize his theatre, is in a much more strategic spot to work with his own legislators than a manager, or a supervisor, imported from a foreign city.

Drawing Battle Lines

This is a slant which the circuits are now giving attention. The front line trenches against adverse laws will have to be thrown up and quickly, too, in the opinion of those familiar with the activities of legislatures and their methods of doing things. The chain corporation is in disfavor in many states where local tradesmen are protesting the transfer of large sums of money from their own territory to headquarters in either New York or Chicago.

It is obvious to those who do a little analyzing that a localite on a theatre job can do more good and, by his absence more harm, than a starnger in the fold. Particularly is this true in communities where clannishness prevails.

Economy

An interesting commentary on business psychology is offered by Hollywood, which to a sizeable degree has knocked off sending the usual Christmas spiel. A couple of years ago, Coast players and directors outdid each other in efforts to get the flashiest kind of Christmas greeting. The cards, which formerly had been a sentimental expression, became a luxury, which many this year found they could not afford. Accordingly, many of the studio workers sent personal notes instead of Christmas cards, which was a real break for Uncle Sam's postal workers.

Feather in His Cap

Joseph I. Schnitzer's forthcoming stay in New York is to be a short one, the Radio chieftan intending to return to the studio post-haste to take up permanent quarters. Schnitzer's stay on the Coast has been a productive one, and he does not intend to lose the benefits of the economy program he has put into force at the studios.

Radio's production reorganization, 'tis said, is reflected in "Cimarron" by which the company is setting great store. Advance dope indicates that the picture is in, which will be a big feather in the Schnitzer cap.

THE INSIDERS

C-u-r-t-e-s-y

THE laughable extremes to which some theatres go in their bowing-and-scraping instructions to ushers had their counterpart in a leading de luxe house, when an important police officer, taking an evening off and in "civies," visited the theatre.

Noticing that plenty of seats were to be had in the front center of the theatre, the party attempted to pass down the center aisle. A uniformed attendant immediately swung in to head them off, pointed to the next side aisle and said:

"Seats in the next aisle."

The man, without rancor or heat, replied that there were plenty of seats in that section, and furthermore his daughter wanted to sit down front and she was the one to be pleased.

"Seats in the next aisle," was the rather sharp retort from the usher.

"I'm under the impression that I purchased something more than seats when I came in here," answered the officer.

"All you bought was seats and you'll find them in the next aisle," was the curt remark from the underling, who still barred the path.

Speaking of the incident later the officer said:

"The next time I purchase tickets for that house I'll own the place."

All of which is one reason why business at the theatre has been skidding for many weeks, for this is far from the first time such an incident has occurred.

Independent Distributors Want Circuits To Revamp Present Booking Methods

Embarrassing Moments

RKO's Mayfair in New York boasts of the most modern and efficient sound projection installation in the country —BUT, on the very first day that the Spoor-Berggen wide film process made its debut at this house, the show was stopped on four different occasions within 35 minutes because of breakdowns. It is not known, however, whether the breaks were from film or machine trouble.

De Forest Loses Court Battle on W. E. Replacement

An attempt by General Talking Pictures to prevent the replacement of De Forest equipment with Western Electric proved unsuccessful when Judge Gavigan in the New York Supreme Court granted the motion of the Rhinelander Amusement Co., which operates the Monroe Theatre, to dismiss the complaint. A restraining order sought by General had been denied previously by Judge McGolrick.

"Plaintiff seeks on the basis of a covenant never made to prevent loss of business which might be incurred if theatre owners find other equipment better for their purposes," said Judge Gavigan in his opinion. "Such a stipulation will not be implied from language in no way suggesting it. Courts of equity do not enforce doubtful rights by injunction. Here, though, there is not even a doubtful right. Plainly, the right asserted is non-existent."

Claim Deals Made on Product for 1930-31 Puts Them at Disadvantage

Numerous independent producers and distributors, it is learned on good authority, are beginning to feel a financial pinch from shriveled rentals which they claim to be a direct result of booking deals made with the big chain operators at the beginning of the 1930-31 season.

When booking deals were made with the large circuits by complaining companies for this season's product, the long-established guarantee and percentage based on production costs were eliminated completely in a majority of cases it is said, and instead, flat rentals or lower percentage ratings than heretofore were insisted upon.

Only "smash" pictures, which come too few and far between, bring in healthy rentals to the smaller companies, with the average release, the predominating type on all schedules, causing plenty of worry.

A general box-office slump, reported to run from 15% to 25%, caused by the present economic depression sweeping the country, is also making itself felt on the books of these companies which must rely upon percentage rentals.

Two of the "chainless" distributors are known to have talked things over in the past week and to have matched notes with a view to organizing concerted effort to influence the bigs guns to reconsider present booking methods. Others are expected to fall in line shortly, or at least file complaints independently.

'The Birth of a Nation,' which for years has swept the world as an outstanding picture * * * has a mystery added to its long career of events. The secret police of Moscow are making a so-called extensive search for the missing copies of this masterpiece. Undoubtedly it will also result in a death verdict similar to that passed upon the engineers recently accused of conspiracy by the Soviet government." * * ***

Warner Invading Two Publix Spots

Chicago. — Warner theatre expansion plans in this territory are continuing and within sixty days, it is said, construction will begin in two cities which now are exclusively Publix situations—Aurora, Ill., and Michigan City, Ind.

At Aurora, an industrial city of 48,000, a new theatre will be erected at a cost of $500,000. The site will be the former Aurora City Mills property, which Warners have taken for a reported purchase price of $200,000. The only theatre now operating in Aurora is a Publix house. Publix also has under construction in Aurora a new 3,500-seat theatre, scheduled to be completed early next fall.

At Michigan City, also dominated by Publix-Great States, Warners have obtained a site on which a 1,500-seat theatre will be erected at a reported cost of $300,000, early next year.

A. S. Graven, Chicago architect, has plans for both Warner houses under way.

Powers Joins Schine

Color Process to Cut Production Costs in Half?

Chicago.—A fifty per cent reduction in the cost of productions in color will be achieved, it is said, by a new color process which is now in its final stages of development at the Stewart-Warner Corp. laboratories here. C. B. Smith, president of the company, which manufactures automotive accessories, refused to comment on the matter, and it is reported that scientific and legal details remain to be completed before official confirmation is made.

The new color process, according to the reports, will make possible color productions at a cost of four, and possibly three cents per linear foot, as compared with the present cost of eight cents for the leading color process now in use. This cost would parallel, approximately, the present cost of ordinary black and white film development.

The major saving made possible by the Stewart-Warner process is said to be effected by a new chemical immersive in which the negatives are bathed and which sensitize the film for cheap and rapid color reception.

Film Stories In Tab for Nickel

Tabloid novelettes, based on illustrated fictionized film stories, are to be vended at five cents each by the Equitable Publishing Co., New York, in machines developed by Peerless Weighing Co., which is building a special machine for the purpose.

The idea is to divide a feature picture's story into about eight chapters of approximately 150 words, each printed on the back of a still, the stills to run in sequence from chapters one to eight. One card or page is to be a title page, which will carry the film company's credit line as well as the billing of the picture. On the reverse side will be a thumbnail sketch and portrait of the male and female stars. On the tenth card will be a story of the writing and production of the story on one side, and a picture of the full cast on the other. The ten cards will be placed in a box and vended for a nickel.

To try out the idea, ten stories, approximating ten sets, or 10,000 of each, will be used. The deal is to place between 1,500 and 2,000 machines in large and medium-size cities, and if the plan succeeds to carry them to small towns, tying up stories in advance to assure a steady and adequate supply. Companies will be permitted to approve copy.

Pettijohn Pleads for Retention of Film Boards

Now with reference to actual savings in dollars and cents:

A—In the City of Chicago alone we are today saving the exchanges more money than it costs to run Film Boards of Trade in the United States,—more money than is involved in the annual budget.

B—All requests to every branch manager in every exchange center for donations, contributions, advertising space, and programs, church, civic, policemen and firemen affairs, the opening of new theatres, anniversaries of theatres, etc., are referred to secretaries of the various Film Boards of Trade; as are appeals for advertising in special editions of newspapers, in which all Film Companies are asked to advertise. Also the sending of flowers to banquets, marriages, etc. Not only do the Film Boards of Trade save its members at least an amount equal to the annual budget, but in avoiding this needless class of expenditure, they have avoided leaving sore spots and bad taste behind. Film Boards of Trade handle the community chest contributions in many exchange centers, effecting another large saving.

C—One of the greatest savings to the industry is brought about because of the fact that the secretaries and the members of their boards are constantly alert to keep the industry out of politics.

Film Boards of Trade provide all general sales managers and the members of their boards with the change of ownership of theatres. It is necessary to make these reports once each month by reason of numerous changes, not only in ownership, but in the changing of theatres from silent to sound, and the type of equipment employed. The secretaries also keep their members advised as to who is authorized to sign contracts in each and every theatre.

The secretaries supervise the distribution of gratis films to institutions and maintain regulations for the safe showing of films in these institutions and other non-theatrical accounts.

At least ten of the Film Board of Trade Secretaries —8 women and 2 men, have appeared on several occasions before legislative committees and have made arguments against proposed tax and censorship legislation. These secretaries know the motion picture business and its mechanics. They make a fine appearance and their arguments are intelligent. I know of several occasions where the appearance of several of these women secretaries, who knew what they are talking about, and presented their facts and information in a lady-like manner, has turned the tide in favor of the industry. On each of these occasions, that particular secretary has saved the industry as a whole, in some instances more, than it costs to operate the Film Boards of Trade in the United States.

In the supervision and observation of fire regulations these secretaries are in touch with their local fire chiefs and fire departments in the cities in which they are located.

Various state tax boards are constantly engaged in attempts to change the assessment on personal property located in the exchanges in the film centers. These secretaries appear before these assessment boards and to date they have been able to keep these assessments within reason in the 32 exchange centers without exception.

Film Board of Trade secretaries have been able to collect on many bad checks given for rentals of films which the branch managers could not collect.

Film Board offices locate lost and stolen film and check for all their members on miss-outs. Their system has been perfected until losses are now almost nothing.

The United States Chamber of Commerce, the United States Department of Commerce, and others have made constructive reports based on information furnished by Film Board of Trade secretaries.

Film Board secretaries prepare and send to their members daily, weekly and monthly bulletins.

In emergencies, such as those that grew out of the floods in the South, St. Louis, Memphis and New Orleans, and other Film Board of Trade secretaries, in cooperation with their members, met the sudden distribution problems and distribution in the flooded districts was reorganized over night. Working day and night, both the secretaries and the members of their Boards carried on distribution in the flood area during that crisis. A similar situation was met in the Boston Film Board of Trade during the floods in Vermont and New Hampshire.

The secretary of the Washington Film Board of Trade effects a saving in cost on film deliveries to Maryland and Virginia Censor Boards in the sum of approximately $16,000 per year, or approximately four times the expense of operating the Washington Film Board of Trade per year.

Each Film Board keeps a careful check on film mutilation thus tracing the theatres that are responsible for the destruction of film. Checks are also kept on the late returns of prints, resulting in an increase in the circulation of prints and the saving of print costs.

I recommend that we boil down the budget, and the expense of the operation of Film Boards of Trade as low as it is humanly possible to do so for the time being and that Film Boards of Trade be continued as is until April 1, 1931, at which time the legislative situation will be out of the way and Film Boards of Trade can be weighed by their other achievements.

Patron "Sings" Makes Big Hit At Louisville

Louisville—Strangers in town, visiting the Loew State, are frequently surprised when the patrons of the theatre sing at least the chorus, and frequently an entire piece of music, along with the organ, played by Haden Read, the lyrics being flashed on the screen. Both young and old indulge, especially the youngsters.

Read, while at the Kentucky in Lexington, developed singing audiences. He worked away on his programs, using clever screen animations, and got the young folks packing the house. When Loew's opened in Louisville, Read was nabbed for organist to play the big disappearing Wurlitzer. For a time the public in Louisville didn't respond, and it began to look as though he would never be able to do here what he had done in Lexington. Then they started singing, lost their stage fright, and later began putting power into their warbling.

Recently a middle aged man dropped into the house. At first he was amazed. The woman who was with him began singing. The man followed, and soon was pouring forth a rich baritone that could be heard over the theatre. When the music ceased, he looked a trifle foolish or guilty, but smiled with pleasure, as he winked at the correspondent for Motion Picture News.

It merely goes to show that perseverance wins out. Its been said often that theatregoers in Louisville were cold-blooded. However, Read has thawed them.

Such things are not uncommon in a small town, or a college town. However, local exhibitors believe they are unusual in a city of 307,000 people. A lot of exhibitors might find that such policies pay. It helps to bring the young folks to the theatre.

Toledo Women To Get An Earful Of Cinema Dope

Toledo—Toledo's Motion Picture Council, composed principally of local club women, should know plenty about films when the organization's winter educational program is carried out. The group has mapped out a course of study and lectures covering every important aspect of the motion picture and its effect upon the human family. Just what the women will do about it after they get their hefty load of low-down has not been announced.

However, Dr. A. W. Trettien, professor of psychology at the University of Toledo, has fired the first gun with a lecture on "The Psychology of the Motion Picture" and will be followed in due course by these eminent authorities:

Mrs. W. A. Rundell, chairman of the Council's advertising committee, who will address the body on "Motion Picture Advertising."

Katharine Johnson, associated in New York with Walter B. Pitkin, professor of journalism at Columbia University, who will tell the anxious club women "Why We Go to the Movies." (Local exhibitors will meet in the Maumee River the same night to be entertained with a discourse on why we don't.)

Providence Ops Tabooing Discs

Providence — Operators and exhibitors here agree that the more or less cumbersome discs must give way to the sound-on-film device for a variety of reasons. It is felt that second-run houses, too, would benefit mightily by the elimination of records.

Operators show a streak of vanity in their stand, as they feel that the public does not understand the necessity of step-ins and when a merry voice, sans picture, is sputtering in the house Mr. and Mrs. Fan thinks the guy in the booth is cock-eyed.

This is sound reasoning, exhibitors concur, for the layman cannot be expected to know all of the grief the operator is heir to, and breaks in a film, particularly in the first-run houses, are given the Bronx boo.

Although no ultimatum has been sounded it is not unlikely that an agreement will be reached soon relegating the disc to limbo.

"Lincoln" Run Switched

"Ma" Sends Fine Food to Hungry Exhibs in "Chi"

Chicago—The numerous charity performances being given by local theatres at which foodstuff is accepted in lieu of legal tender, has led to at least one complication.

A stock trailer, announcing that the food contributions will be acceptable as admission, and requesting patrons to leave the names and addresses of needy persons to whom the gifts may be donated with the management, is the most common announcement of the charity performances in use here.

The Fox Commercial theatre recently decided on such a performance and ordered the announcement trailer. The latter half of the trailer, requesting the names and addresses of needy persons or families, in some way was left out. As a result, the manager found a young grocery store on his hands at the end of the evening with no immediate disposition for the perishable foodstuffs at hand. The Salvation Army helped him solve this predicament.

Later, in discussing the incident with various of his patrons, the manager learned that each and every one had supposed that the theatre owners were to be the recipients, "because we heard so much about business being bad."

A few even approached him happily to inquire how he liked the stewed tomatoes, or "ma's preserves."

Newspaper Reel In Detroit Covers All Local Events

Detroit—Sound newsreel sponsored by the Detroit Times, and known as "The Detroit Times Topics," has met with the approval and acceptance on the part of local theatre managers. A fully-equipped sound truck serves as the base of operation for all field events, such as the football games at Ann Arbor, aerial events at Selfridge Field, parades and the like. It is manned by a crew of three experienced operators provided by the Metropolitan Motion Picture Co., which turns out the film for distribution to the theatres.

Recently the Times has made arrangements with a local flying station to equip one of the large planes so that air shots in sound may be made. Views of the Mitchell air race at Selfridge were obtained in this ship, with Nathan Reiss behind the camera.

A history of newsreels in Detroit, from a purely local standpoint, reveals that the Detroit Free Press was the first sponsor of such visual entertainment. The Detroit News undertook the editing of the reel when it was dropped by the Free Press several years ago. When the News tossed the idea overboard, the Times stepped in and carried on.

Full advertising co-operation is given by the Times, several ads being run each week, announcing the various highlights of the current release, and naming the first-run theatres in which the reel is being shown. About 100 theatres in the metropolitan area of Detroit make use of the reel each week.

Lightner Bright Light in Capital; Helps Film Take

Washington — Winnie Lightner wowed them at the Earle, and it was her appearance on the stage that is credited with being responsible for the $21,865 week since the feature, "Divorce Among Friends," was generally panned. Gross constitutes a new box-office record at the scale, since the former high, $22,600 by Marilyn Miller in "Sally," was rung up with a slightly greater admission scale.

Loew's Palace was the other surprise. M-G-M's "Passion Flower" with Buck and Bubbles heading the stage show clicked for $19,000, fine before-Christmas money. Other reports were dismal.

Estimated takings:

Cleveland—The Ohio, one of the city's two legitimate theatres, closed for the week. The Hanna, the other legitimate house, offered Leslie Howard in "Berkeley Square." # $59,500 Gross by "Paid" Knocks Old Chi for a Loop

Chicago—Despite the "adults only" tag, or, perhaps because of it, M-G-M's "Paid," paid and paid and paid, copping the knock-out gross of $59,500 at the Chicago theatre. The film has been held in the Loop for a second week, going to the Oriental for another round.

"Hell's Angels" finished its fourth week at the United Artists with a fair $20,500, and will run six days of the fifth week, to be replaced Christmas Day by "Abraham Lincoln." "Min and Bill," excellent in its first week at McVickers, went to a fair $27,500 for the second week. Third week of the picture was poor for three days, and the balance of the week looks hopeless.

"Free Love" opened well at the State-Lake, getting $16,000 in three days on an "adults only" run. Palace, doing top business for several weeks past, fell to a fair $20,800 with "Madonna of the Streets," getting only average notices and without a stage name to bolster it. Other houses were average.

Estimated takings:

"SHAME OF MARY BOYLE" (B. I.)
CASTLE—(299), first week, 60c. Other attractions: News. Picture playing to "adults only." Held over. Gross: $6,200.

"PAID" (M-G-M)

"Abe" Holds Up at Okla. City During Tough Xmas Week

Oklahoma City—Strong traces of red could be seen spread over most of this town's theatre books, with but one or possibly two talkers holding up for a black finish. The usual holiday rush took its toll from theatres this week, when an exceptional group of films failed to show little better than average business. "Abraham Lincoln" was good for $9,200 at the Publix Criterion. "Sin Takes a Holiday" grossed $8,500 at the Warners Mid-West. Publix Capitol showed up well with $7,500 on "Passion Flower." "The Cat Creeps" and a good program of vaudeville took $7,200 at the Warners Liberty.

A feature of the week's business was the Criterion's free admission of children when accompanied by adults.

'Min and Bill' in Omaha Produce $10,000 Gross

Omaha—Although Omahans seemed to be intent on playing Santa Claus, hurting theatre trade, "Min and Bill" was playing Kris Kringle by giving the Paramount $10,000, rated as a good profit. Competition was not so keen, "Madam Satan" getting only $9,975 at the World. Francis X. Bushman on the stage wasn't such a help.

"Madonna of the Streets" found the going pretty tough at the Orpheum, its $12,000 being a low mark for recent weeks. The State was par the first half of the week with "Only Saps Work," but severe weather the second half indicated a drop was in prospect.

Estimated takings:

"MIN AND BILL" (M-G-M)

Demand Organist

Public Puts the Skids on Sex at Roxy, New York

The $66,000 gross taken in by "Free Love" at the New York Roxy is indicative of a public thumbs down policy where sex is stressed, wise ones watching the Broadway theatre belt believe.

They just wouldn't go for wide film in the debut of the Spoor-Berggren process, which came in without any fanfare via "Danger Lights" at the Mayfair. The preliminary campaign was innocuous, RKO probably sensing public apathy to wide pictures, as emphasized by runs of "Billy, the Kid" and "The Big Trail."

Universal sprang a surprise with "All Quiet on the Western Front" shoved back into the Central. The gag was a test and $2,700 was the mark set for the war epic for the weekend. However, it soared over that amount, garnering $3,885 in 2 days.

Christmas shopping took its toll last week. Here's the sad news:

Seattle Row Is Kicked About by Tough 'Min, Bill'

Seattle—Taking $15,000 for its share, the Fox theatre stole a march on other first runs here with "Min and Bill." A holdover followed the sensational take.

Other houses didn't fare as well. "The Princess and the Plumber" at the Fifth Avenue was just a mediocre attraction, getting about $13,000 for the seven days. George Bancroft's "Derelict" at the Paramount also took about that amount for an average week.

"Hell's Angels" in its second week at John Hamrick's Music Box was a fairly good attraction, doing about $7,000. But Hamrick's Blue Mouse had an exceptionally tough week, opening with "Man to Man," which lasted only three days of the week, spotting in "High Treason" for two bad days, and then putting on "Extravagance" with absolutely no advance of any kind. The Liberty, under its new first run policy, has been doing an average business only, taking about $10,000 with "Numbered Men."

Only One Balto Run Hits Par; Wynn is High

Baltimore—Only one first run house here did a 100 per cent business during the week. This was due principally to the pre-holiday slump.

"Follow the Leader" was the attraction that pulled finely at Loew's Stanley, Ed Wynn's followers coming out in force. The gross is recorded at $17,500, making it come up to the 100 per cent mark.

Next in line for a big gross was Loew's Century, which had a program including "The Gorilla" and the Loew-Capitol stage unit, "Dream Garden." Gross for this was $17,000, which is somewhat off for this house.

The matinee business at the New was strong with Charles Farrell in "The Princess and the Plumber," but the nights were off. The gross was figured at $8,000.

Rogers Nears B. O. Record at K. C. on Take of $21,000

Kansas City—Theatregoers in this town are keen on Will Rogers' brand of humor and hoke, as evidenced by the $21,000 gross poured into the coffers of the Newman, where the Fox opus climbed pretty close to the house record established recently by "Morocco."

Despite poor press notices, "Sea Legs" gave the Royal a big week, getting $5,000. It is a small house and $5,000 is considered good. The Uptown had an average week with "A Devil with Women," which brought in $6,000.

"Abraham Lincoln" was not a big drawing card for the Midland, which grossed $13,050. This means about a 10 per cent drop below normal intake.

Stage Show and "Princess" Take $15,500 at B'way

Portland, Ore.—Christmas buying took considerable money, and consequently caused somewhat of a drop in the intakes at first-runs. "Princess and the Plumber" with an exceptionally snappy stage offering, brought the heaviest attendance of the week at the Fox Broadway with a gross of $15,500. Ruth Chatterton in "Right to Love," billed at the last moment at the Portland Paramount, brought out many of her admirers and grossed $14,800; while "See America Thirst" at RKO Orpheum, proved popular on a gross of $14,500.

Slam Films

Washington—Basil Rathbone and Montagu Love were in town with "A Kiss of Importance" and film houses tried to annex these Hollywood names for personal appearances.

Director Robert Milton made a personal plea to the Selwyn management to permit Love's appearance at the opening of "Outward Bound" as a $2 film on F Street. Actor Love had an important role in the picture.

The RKO Keith management wanted Basil Rathbone to drop in on "Sin Takes a Holiday," exhibiting while he was playing on the stage at the National Theatre.

Both requests were turned down cold. The official attitude was expressed in "What have the movies ever done to help out the stage?"

"Kismet" Held at Boston on $17,000 Take

Boston—The $17,000 rolled up by "Kismet" was the tip-off for a second week at the Keith house. Pre-Christmas week always shows a drop from regular grosses and the week just closed is no exception. However, this year's grosses are well ahead of those for the same week a year ago. Exhibitors expect another two weeks of slack but with the New Year's midnight shows the recovery to peak is looked for.

Despite depression in most lines, Boston's motion picture business has held up remarkably well, quite in contrast with the legitimate houses.

"Lightnin'" at the Metropolitan did a gross of $39,000, which, while below the average, is considered good for this season. "Brothers" at Keith-Boston with $17,300 was considered fair. "Morocco," playing day and date at the Publix Olympia and Uptown, grossed $23,500 for the two houses, which is fair for any season and considered good for this season. Both Loew houses were well ahead of the same week last year, with "The Lottery Bride" going over for $19,000 and "Abraham Lincoln" for $21,000 after its long Boston run as a road show, now at popular prices.

'Free Love' Hits $19,000 in Philly; Rector, Judge Aid

Philadelphia—With heavy exploitation on the sex angle and advertisement capitalization of the recent Judge Lindsey-Bishop Manning fuss, the Boyd clicked off a good $19,000 for "Free Love." "Morocco" held up well during its second week at the Keith's with $16,000. The close to $23,000 for the first week is the best figure this new entry into film theatre ranks has scored since its opening in the early fall.

"Min and Bill" held up to $10,000, a good figure for its second week at the Stanton. With Victor McLaglen, popular here, appearing at the Fox in "A Devil with Women," the house held up to consistent business with $26,500. Playing its first popular price run at the Stanley, "Abraham Lincoln" took $16,000 on the week.

Because of heavy censoring, "Today" was yanked out of the Earle after one day. "Rain or Shine" was plugged in and scored over $16,000 on five days—a good figure. "Hell's Angels" slumped to $7,500 at the Aldine.

"Alf" Knocked Down to 50% of Tivoli Schedule

Toronto—When the final counting came for local theatres last week, the Tivoli presented figures of a bright scarlet hue. The new British comedy, "Alf's Button," sent the Tivoli so close to oblivion that it was the talk of the picture colony. Gross was $9,000, which is about 50 per cent of the house record. Colored sequences in the production were terrible and the one "find" in the picture was a pretty dancer. The Imperial, which has all the stage show trimmings, also took a rap, the Christmas shoppers giving the "go by" to "The Cat Creeps," which is just one too many of this sort of films. "The Cat" drew $14,500, which is about $6,000 short of top notch. At Loew's, "Billy the Kid" was rated well by the fair crowds and the result was $14,000. Thomas Daley was fairly satisfied with $10,500 on "The Dancers" at the Uptown. Most of the managers were glad when the week was over.

"Hell's Angels" Beats 1st Week 'Frisco Record

San Francisco—"Hell's Angels," in its second week at the Warfield, exceeded its first week's business by $500, grossing the record figure of $37,500, and its momentum promises a record-breaking run for the 4,600-seat house. Incidentally, the three Fox West Coast theatres here simply ran away from the field so far as receipts are concerned.

The Fox, with "Passion Flower," clicked with the same figure. The third Fox house, the El Capitan, had "Scotland Yard" and grabbed off $15,000, which is good dough for that house.

New Price Scale Aids 'East, West' To Hit Heavily

Ottawa—Local managers expected a slump at box-offices, because of the holidays, and they were not disappointed. Business generally was quite spotty. Manager Ray Tubman put a new price scale into effect for the Imperial, down 10 cents all around, and, whether this was responsible or not, "East Is West" enjoyed fair patronage, grossing $2,050 at 50 cents top. "Scotland Yard," at the Regent, was the best bet in town with $3,200, but still away off from perfect. Keith's bumped bottom on "Sea Legs" and "Loose Ends," the latter a British film that was a fair bit of celluloid in itself, but did not click. Gross for "Loose Ends" for the three days was $2,500, which was the minimum for six months. "Eyes of the World" held up to $2,600 at the Centre for six days, which wasn't too bad. For no particular reason, Wednesday night was the poorest that any Ottawa theatre had had since the dog days of summer. It was so strange that the managers compared notes on the subject. First half of the week was cold, then turning mild.

Estimated figures:

"SCOTLAND YARD" (Fox)

Montreal B. O. Business Down; Blame Holidays

Montreal—Weak stage show helped send the Capitol gross to a meagre $15,000, although this figure, which was piled up by "The Cat Creeps," topped all other grosses for the week. "Smile Awhile," the Publix unit, helped a bit in keeping the Capitol ahead of the Palace, which formerly basked in first position. In view of the Christmas rush, the Palace did fairly well to cash in with $13,500 on "Life of the Party." "The Lottery Bride" missed being a good picture, according to patrons of the Princess, and the gross there faded to $9,000. Loew's went off half-cocked with "Half Shot at Sunrise" for $11,000, which was down from previous weeks. After flopping with a German film, "Spaventa," the Roxy did not do much better with a Paramount French version of "The Doctor's Secret." All in all, it was a good week to get rid of and most managers spent their time in working up programs for Christmas and New Year's weeks. Typical wintry weather prevailed, but this did not count either one way or the other.

'Free Love's' 1st Providence Week A B. O. Bonanza

Providence—Opening to S. R. O., "Free Love" continues this week to turn-away business at RKO's Albee, where the film is scheduled for a holdover. Business at the downtown houses held up well and exhibitors expressed pleasure that fans were remembering them during the busy holiday season. Loew's State, playing "Hell's Angels" for the second week, caught $13,000, which is O. K. when one considers the tremendous trade the film did its first week when it garnered $28,000.

The RKO Albee ran "The Boudoir Diplomat" for five days and netted $8,000, supplanting with "Free Love."

"Madonna of the Streets," at the RKO Victory, came in strong with $10,000, which is above normal for this 1,600-seater. "Fast and Loose" and "The Fourth Alarm" (Majestic) were up to scratch with $11,800, and the Paramount, playing Ed Wynn in "Follow the Leader," grossed around $10,000.

Babel

Weyburn, Sask.—A conflict of views has resulted in the closing of the theatre here. It was one of the first in the Prairie Province to be wired, but English-speaking residents quit going to the theatre because they did not like the foreign accent of some screen stars. Local foreigners thought George Arliss, Ruth Chatterton and H. B. Warner were awful. The theatre will reopen with silent films after the New Year.

"Min and Bill" Hold Strong on 2nd Cincy Week

Cincinnati—With two exceptions, grosses at local houses held up remarkably well for the week before Christmas, yet business generally was not as brisk as that experienced last week. This cannot be attributed to lack of first class film fare, but rather to the general falling off in patronage which usually prevails at this particular season. At that, business, when reckoned from a standpoint of total gross turned in from all houses, is much better here for this time of year than it has been during similar periods in the past. In fact, the total can be called excellent, everything considered.

"The Silver Horde," at RKO Albee, vaudefilm house, and "Follow the Leader" at RKO Capitol, both went somewhat under respective averages.

The RKO Lyric with second week of "Min and Bill," although not duplicating the record established for the initial week, came through with a higher gross than turned in for many of the other big pictures shown at this house for a single week.

"Sin Takes a Holiday" helped the RKO Palace to keep well above its normal business, as was also the case with "Big Money" at RKO Strand.

RKO Family, playing split week of "Under Texas Skies" and "The Naughty Flirt," did particularly good business with both pictures. Keith's showed a nice increase with "On Your Back."

"Morocco" K. O.'s Des Moines 1st Runs with $8,500

Des Moines—"Morocco," with the popular Gary Cooper, held up with business remarkably good for the last week of Christmas shopping with a gross of $8,500 at the Des Moines though that is not at all what the picture could have done under different circumstances. "Sin Takes a Holiday" with Constance Bennett at the Orpheum would have packed them in at another time but was considered to have offered Santa Claus good competition with $6,500 for the week. Jack Oakie in "Sea Legs" was not so badly off with $5,000 for three days, and "War Nurse" for four days at $4,000 at the Paramount. "War Nurse" received satisfactory comment. The pictures at the Strand were about 75 per cent off average but entirely satisfactory for this week. Weather was mild with snow.

Woods in Black Since Switch to "Indie" Owners

Chicago—The surprising prosperity of the Woods theatre under Jones, Linick & Schaefer management has brought a little glow not only to its operators but to local exchanges, as well. Earnings since the theatre passed from circuit to independent management have been consistently higher, and inasmuch as the house plays largely on percentage, the resultant increase in revenue for the exchanges has been appreciable.

Though exact figures are not available, it is estimated that the grosses at the Woods in the past two months have averaged $5,000 a week better than when the house was circuit operated. The Woods also provides a major outlet in the Loop for independent product, and in consequence it has proved a boon to the independent distributors in recent months. An example is found in the recent prosperous run of "Today," a Majestic picture. Security exchange, the local distributor, found its revenue boosted almost $5,000 above normal expectancy by the Woods engagement, during which it grossed nearly $28,000. Had the Woods been under circuit management, the best booking the picture could have obtained would have been the diminutive Castle where, though its run undoubtedly would have been longer, the best possible gross would have been 50 per cent less.

Exchanges other than independents are also getting better breaks from the Woods than heretofore.

Chi Film Board Stages Benefit

Chicago—Film Board of Trade here sponsored charitable contributions which resulted in donations of 50 baskets of food, ample to care for the Christmas requirements of families of six persons each. Distributions were made by city salesmen from the various exchanges, who cooperated with recognized charitable organizations in the work.

The Film Board also contacted numerous hospitals and similar organizations during the holiday season; obtaining feature pictures for them from exchanges as required.

Voice of People Much too Feeble For 'Blues' Ears

Chicago—Despite the fact that the residents of Evanston, "silk-stocking" suburb, voted in favor of Sunday pictures in a referendum, they will have to do without their Sabbath film entertainment. "The majority rules" seems to be just a gag in that city, which is the national headquarters of the W. C. T. U.

The theatre interests went to court when the city council didn't seem to have its ears tuned in on the wave length of the voice of the people, but Judge Sullivan ruled that the exhibitors' redress lay in legislative, instead of judicial, action.

Judge Sullivan found that the referendum in question "has no effect on the action of the city council other than to indicate the desire of the people. To enforce the decision of the referendum it is necessary to elect persons so inclined to the council," he said. The Evanston city council had refused to act and repeal the prohibitory ordinance following the election. Thereupon, the theatres sought the injunction against the police preparatory to opening on Sundays.

Original hearings of the petition had been reported on favorably by Master in Chancery George E. Gorman. Judge Sullivan, too, had indicated sympathy with the theatre interests earlier in the hearings when he volunteered the opinion that all blue laws involved religious discrimination and were unconstitutional. In his final ruling, however, he modified this opinion.

The Union Bank of Chicago, receivers for the Varsity Theatre, Evanston, originators of the injunction proceeding in this instance, plan an appeal.

They say Quaint

IT is an old complaint that Hollywood kills talent, kills it because huge, soulless organizations can neither tolerate talent nor understand it. The fact has been made familiar to us by the fate of several foreign and American actors and directors who went to Hollywood with the reputation of distinguished artists. It would be an exaggeration to say that all of them have been crushed by the machine, but happy exceptions undeniably have been very few. Perhaps Serge Eisenstein, the cancellation of whose contract with the Paramount Company has recently been announced, should thank the gods for escaping with his skin; the intelligent public, however, cannot but feel disappointed at the blasting of its hopes for higher standards of art from Hollywood as the result of Eisenstein's vitalizing influence.

If in the case of Eisenstein one suspects considerations other than artistic to have been the cause of his retirement, two recent films must be ascribed wholly to artistic ignorance and crass commercialism. "Kismet" (Hollywood), with Otis Skinner in the principal role, illustrates the blight of ignorance. One recalls a highly symbolic little episode that occurred in the same Hollywood Theatre a few months earlier. A short film was shown as one of the opening items on the program. It commemorated the silver anniversary of the cinematic activities of Messrs. Warner Brothers, and a galaxy of the company's stars was gathered for the occasion around a horseshoe table and introduced to the audience. What with the stellar smiles and occasional songs and the general splendor of the surroundings, the scene undoubtedly was very impressive, if rather dull.

The fly in the ointment was the intolerably bright little girl, appropriatelw called "Miss Vitaphone," who did the introducing. But the unintended symbolism of the scene was revealed elsewhere. The unannounced old gentleman who opened the proceedings by introducing the impossible child was none other than Mr. Otis Skinner himself. Somehow one cannot help feeling that in his present film, "Kismet," Mr. Skinner has been served by his producers with as little respect for his talent as he was in that affair of the celebration. One would have thought that the presence of an actor of Mr. Skinner's attainments would have inspired the producers and directors with the desire to second his imaginative effort.

They might have remembered, for instance, that the stage play, second-rate pastiche that it was, had swing and vigor that sprang from its color, from its exaggerated action, from its grotesque characterization. Because of that it showed speed even on the slow-moving stage. But the only trace of color to be found in the film is that preserved in the contrasts and resourceful virtuosity of Mr. Skinner's acting. With its slow and even tempo, with its lack of color and contrast, the film represents no more than a humdrum display of Hollywood's Oriental lore, and fails miserably to bring into relief Mr. Skinner's beautiful diction and masterful technique.

"The Playboy of Paris" (Paramount), featuring Maurice Chevalier, is another instance of indifference to talent. That the picture is amusing in its crude way and is a great box-office success should not blind us to the fact that we are actually witnessing the burial of a very gifted artist with an effervescent and impish personality under the weight of the obvious banalities of juvenile comedy. M. Chevalier is being Americanized, Hollywood style, and if this goes on a little longer there will be no Maurice Chevalier left.—Alexander Bakshy in The Nation.

Dusting the Stars

"The 'Tol-able David' film stars a newcomer stage-named Richard Cromwell, who never before appeared on the stage or the screen," writes Winchell in the New York Mirror.

"He is 19 years of age. Some critics turned in sugary reports about his adroit playing. Others were less enthusiastic. The Columbia Pictures firm had exhausted the supply of all available youths in Hollywood, taking 121 tests of applicants, none of which made a favorable impression.

"Cromwell ankled in one day and, cornering an executive, said: 'I think I ought to be considered for the role—on the ground that I read the book!' This made such an impression on the executive, Cromwell was signed, the executive never having read a book, and so he was immensely impressed.

"Cromwell's name is now in Broadway hulbs. He was engaged at $50 per week, but the legal department of the company insisted that his wage be tilted to $125 per week after it discovered that the California statutes permitted any one to break a contract and quit who earned less than $6,000 a year."

FOR mental processes that are weird the motion picture producer is peculiar. Take the the case of Ina Claire and Donald Ogden Stewart's stage play, "Rebound."

After Ina's first movie her producers bought off her contract. They were willing to pay her a large sum of money not to appear in their pictures.

The play was a success on the New York stage but the movie gods would have none of it. Not screen material, they said.

Mrs. John Gilbert got mad, and when that lady's dander is up she can get plenty mad. She decided she was going to make the producers see she was an actress, and couldn't be thrown out without a showdown. So she produced "Rebound" in a Hollywood theatre and made it such a social affair that none of the producers could avoid being at her opening.

Next day Ina was offered a contral by one company, and another bought the play.—Photoplay.

Buddy Rogers says "Yes, ma'am!" and "No, ma'am!" when addressing a lady. Except on the very rare occasions when he goes dancing or to the theater, he goes to bed at nine o'clock. Between scenes at the studio, he plays the piano on the set, or goes to his dressing room and practices exuberantly on the dozen or so instruments he keeps there—trombone, violin, banjo, traps, all the paraphernalia of the jazz that is so dear to his heart.

—Picture Play.

THERE'S a lot of talk along the Movie Rialto today to the effect that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is grooming Robert Montgomery, a great screen bet, to fill the shoes of John Gilbert. Poor John, as you know, has fallen victim to the talkies after having held sway for years as one of the greatest bets the silent pictures could present.

Jack Gilbert was probably the greatest lover upon the screen before the films found their voice. But his voice was revealed in dialogue stage play, "Rebound."

This, of course, cut his popularity terrifically. This was a shame, naturally, but it was one of those things which could not be helped.

Meanwhile, Robert Montgomery came from the stage, and immediately clicked with the audiences. And, after several superb portrayals, he now has been cast opposite Greta Garbo, where Gilbert used to be. Montgomery's fan mail has been growing by leaps and bounds and, after all, this is the greatest barometer which producers have to go by.—Gerhard in N. Y. Eve. World.

Time was when you could scare a theatre-owner into convulsions by telling him that this or that was not interesting the children. But lately he doesn't scare so easily, because he has discovered that about 5% of his patronage comes from persons under 16 years of age. Columbia University in New York analyzed a theatre audience for a week. In that time 150,000 people passed through its doors. Of the total number there were 8,250 under 21 years of age, only a small number being children.

And another odd circumstance was discovered. Children under 12 years remembered very little of the details of any picture, but they disliked the wrongdoers very positively. But how they liked heroes! Lindbergh, Tom Mix and Doug Fairbanks outclassed all the villains and bedimmed all the crime.—M. P. Classic.

Fire water: A scenario writer and his friends were enjoying a peaceful Hollywood party the other evening, when the door suddenly opened and several firemen rushed in. Without a word to the assembled company, they tore into the bedroom, returned with armfuls of clothes which they piled on the floor, overturned the furniture on top and proceeded to ply the hose on the heap. Rising jauntily to the occasion, the scenario writer poured out a cocktail apiece. And though the fire raged for several hours afterwards, most of the firemen concentrated their efforts in rescue to this particular apartment, with the result that onlookers in the street were amazed by the playfulness and curious antics of the fire department. One poor chap in particular, who had spent some time in saving the apartment and effects of the hospitable scenario writer, clung to a ladder with dismal shouts for help, unable to go either up or down, while a hilarious group of his comrades leaned out of upper windows cheering him on.—Motion Picture.

that — Quips Lifted and Sifted

MOVIE screens are being worn larger this fall. Four different companies are issuing pictures for exhibition on magnificent expanses, and are trying desperately to convince the public (and themselves) that this is the most sensational innovation since the introduction of sound.

This sudden rush toward bigger, if not better, films provides convincing proof, although proof isn't really needed, of the lamentable condition of the movie business at the present sad time. Whenever the moguls of Hollywood start dealing in novelties, you can safely bet that they're desperate.

There is certainly no harm in these attempts to increase the moving pictures' scope. Let them have all the room that the dimensions of the theatres will allow. It would be absolutely fatal, however, to diminish the camera's power of concentration which is just what the big screen is most likely to do.

There is no reason why the movies shouldn't fill a screen a hundred feet square—when they have something to fill it with, as, for example, the Grand Canyon, or the Himalaya Mountains, or the great war, or Wallace Beery.

There are, however, equally dramatic subjects that are best when seen on a small scale, and without added distractions; for instance, Charlie Chaplin's upper lip, Greta Garbo's left eyebrow, or the butterfly that played in the final scene of "All Quiet on the Western Front."

What is needed most is an easily convertible screen, which can be expanded to prodigious size whenever necessary to accommodate the Leviathans, and then irised down to the one pin-prick of light which reveals the trivial but incalculably important detail.—Robert E. Sherwood in N. Y. Post.

HE'S a grand actor who never got the big lover roles which make men stars out in Hollywood. But he was always in featured parts, got good notices and sometimes stole the picture from those billed above him. He went to parties, drank, and otherwise wasted the time he wasn't on the set and then one day he got sick of it all. If he stayed on in the movie colony, he argued, he would some day get to a point where he wouldn't ever get tired of that kind of life, so he refused all offers and booked passage for a far-away port. He wanted a year to think things out, to decide on his future and to make plans for his career.

He did stay away a whole year, didn't drink much, went interesting places, saw interesting people and felt he was living at last. Then his money gave out and he went back to California to sell some property there. The first night back, all his old friends heard about his return and they staged a big party. In fact there was a series of big parties, one after another, in honor of the traveling seeker of light, parties that kept him in a daze and somewhat dimmed the thought of all those wonderful experiences of the sabbatical year. Then one of the big studios had a big part for him and he forgot all about selling the property. He took the job and he's back in the swim, right where he was when he left last year. But at least he had one year away from it.—N. Y. Graphic.

The talkies have also made life more complicated for casting directors. They used to be persecuted by ambitious people who would dash up to their cars and begin registering fear, anger, or despair in the middle of traffic.

Now the method of attack has changed. Casting directors are called up in the dead of night by amorous frogs, discontented donkeys and cats made gaga by the light of the moon.

At least, samples of these seem to be at the other end of the wire, although an almost human voice generally inquires afterward if the imitation wasn't an excellent one and if such talent doesn't merit being cast as off-stage noise.

This, incidentally, is the chance that comes once in a lifetime to the really good imitator of animal or bird conversation. A number of busy actors in Hollywood have never appeared on the screen; they serve off-stage as crying babies, twittering canaries and bullfrogs croaking in a dismal swamp.—N. Y. World

Double Trouble

Chicago.—More and better complaining over theatre business in the neighborhoods than the town has heard in many years is now in vogue. Making allowances for the seasonal slump expected during December, exhibitors maintain that grosses are still far below what they should be. A peculiarity is that the most emphatic statements of this kind come from the owners of houses which have been and are double featuring. The slump is being felt particularly where top-heavy programs have been cutting into the profits for months. Little seasonal effect is evidenced at the Loop first runs, where business remains normal and a good picture still does good business.

IF Hollywood is taking itself too seriously all it has to do is stop and consider "Once in a Lifetime." It's a new Broadway play, a terrific satire on motion pictures. It lambasts producers, directors, writers and actors. It makes merciless fun of everything movie. And it is so hilariously funny that all New York is pushing and shoving to see it.

It knocks the high hat right off Hollywood's head. I recommend it to every producer, director, and star—everybody, in fact, connected with this grand little industry o' ours. "Once in a Lifetime" may hurt in places; it's cruel, caustic, not always strictly truthful; and if you have ever had anything to do with making, marring, or reviewing a motion picture you'll crawl out on your hands and knees. But it will make you laugh so hard you won't be able to carry a grudge away with you. And any producer or star whose self-esteem it punctures should have seen Jesse Lasky and Adolph Zukor, two of the Big Men of the movies, laughing at the lecture, at the first night. Our French movie friends are hard to please. They lambasted us until we quivered with terror because they said we did not appreciate their French artists. Now they have a mad at Maurice Chevalier because we appreciated him too much. On his recent trip back to Paris, he found himself soundly snubbed because he had made a million dollars in America—and showed no aversion to picking up a few more fortunes in the way of francs for personal appearances at 4,000 francs per in the French theatres. French cafes wanted him to be seen drinking tea in their midst and charity bazaars wanted him to appear as a guest. The estimable Maurice agreed to do it all—at a price.

The French complain now that he learned too much In America. ## New Year's Day, January 1

Among all people and in all ages, the first day of the new year seems generally to have been observed as a festival. The date has varied widely according to the country and its manner of reckoning time following its seasons. March 25th was the usual date for beginning the New Year in most Christian countries in the Middle Ages, and England retained this date until September 14, 1752, although the Gregorian calendar adopted by many countries on October 15, 1582 fixed the time as January 1.

In the Christian year, the new year celebrates the Feast of the Circumcision. The Jewish civil new year, which opens with the month, Tishri, answering roughly to our September, is called Feast of Trumpets. Among the Chinese, the day is the greatest festival of the year, falling according to their lunar calendar, between January 10 and February 19.

The object of this campaign is to show the purchasing power of $1. Watch the Union every morning and see what each dollar has accomplished. Each purchaser is asked to sign the card and fill out self-explanatory lines."

A Soldier's Plaything

(Warners)

Funny, but Hectic

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

THIS talker, which rates as average program fare, has one redeeming feature—the splendid performance by Harry Langdon. The sad-faced comedian steals practically every scene he is in and gets plenty of laughs while doing it. Should stack up okay for the regular week runs and find good patronage in the split week spots. Plug the Langdon name and Ben Lyon moniker for best results.

Roy Del Ruth, who directed, evidently found the story not strong enough to carry the piece, so he resorted to old fashioned comedy gags—and it wasn't a bad idea. Langdon is given plenty of footage in which to put over his brand of comedy and he does so in great style. Ben Lyon and Lotti Loder carry the flimsy love story and are adequate for their parts.

The tale is about two lads, Langdon and Lyon, who join the army; Langdon because he wants to, and Lyon because he wants to escape gangsters who are after him for a crime which he did not commit. The time spent during the war is passed up with explanatory subtitles and the real action takes place when the lads are sent to Germany with the army of occupation. Here Lyon falls for the winning ways of a bright eyed fraulein and he proposes. He is afraid to marry her on account of the reception he feels he will get when he returns to the States. All is made happy, however, when he runs across Fred Kohler—the man he thought he had killed—driving an army truck. This sets Lyon at rest and he marries the girl.

The story is decidedly episodic and kept alive by numerous comedy sequences supplied by Langdon. A great deal of the footage shows the boys playing nurse maid to a bunch of horses, but the comedy supplied here helps to dominate over the rather uncouth surroundings. The piece moves fast throughout and this aids materially.

The performance by Langdon overshadows the other characters decidedly and makes the talker worthwhile as screen amusement. Lyon does well with a role that has little to offer.

Use anything but slapstick comedy with this.

The Dawn Trail

(Columbia)

Weak Western

(Reviewed by Jack Grant)

THIS is the one about the sheep herder-cow puncher range feud. You know, Buck Jones is the sheriff trying to keep peace between rival camps. Strictly three-times-a week or daily change grind stuff.

The story becomes a trifle complicated at times—so many escapes, recaptures and changing of guns. The thing gets to be a guessing game with the audience either three jumps ahead or behind the sheriff.

Charles Morton, son of a wealthy cow owner, goes on a spree which ends by his cowardly shooting of a sheep man. Jones though in love with Miriam Seegar, Morton's sister, must do his duty as sheriff. Gets his man and takes him to jail. Morton obtains gun, creases Jones' scalp, and escapes. Cow hands go gunning for sheriff who in turn escapes. Sweetheart finds him in faint, takes him to her room and shelters him for the night.

Morton suspects Jones' presence, trys to capture him but sheriff turns the tables. This time he doesn't trust jail so takes Morton to cave and leaves him hog tied.

Meanwhile girl falls in hands of sheep herders. She is held for hostage. Jones returns for Morton who has just wriggled out of the rope. Socks sheriff. Ah, he is about to escape. But no, he is recaptured.

Jones explains situation. Only hope for girl is for Morton to give himself up to the little shepherds. Morton agrees only to double cross Jones and go riding toward the cowmen's camp. Morton's father sees him coming, mistakes his son for an enemy and kills him.

Morton dying confesses all and the war's over. Jones returns for the girl but she has escaped, too. Riding valiantly, he saves her from death under the hoofs of the stampeding cattle. Happy fade out with a kiss in the dust.

Picture has no intentional comedy but several unintentional howls. Audience got to kidding it after one particularly funny bit.

Buck Jones delivers acceptable work as the sheriff. His riding and the well handled "weakling" assignment by Charles Morton are the only highlights of the picture. Morton wins performance honors hands down. Miss Seegar is irritating as the heroine.

Kids may like "The Dawn Trail" if there isn't too much love interest for their tastes.

Inspiration

(M-G-M)

Box-Office Garbo

(Reviewed by Dick Crenshaw)

HARDLY the thing for the kiddies, but a picture that will have a large appeal to the Greta Garbo fans and that spells box-office. The Swedish star put everything she had into this picture, which is built around a plot ideal for her type of performance. The story is nothing out of the ordinary, the settings are fair and the photography is good, but the acting of Garbo and the supporting cast is excellent.

With Robert Montgomery in the male lead and a group of others equally good in minor parts, the cast of this picture is its main selling point. The talker was exceptionally well received at its preview showing and rates as excellent screen fare for the better class first run houses and subsequent bookings.

The main attraction is Garbo and her acting. Without her the picture would fall flat as the story is but a simple one of intense love—apparently written solely for Garbo. As the lover Montgomery carries away a number of the acting laurels.

Although Lewis Stone is given a minor role as a rather fickle man of affairs, he adds considerable to the picture, which is modern in the extreme sense of the word. Free love is a situation taken for granted throughout the story.

Garbo plays the role of a sophisticated woman of many affairs who falls in love with a poor student, turning down her chance for social success with a rich bachelor who "keeps" her. Her love scenes with Montgomery, which take up a great part of the footage, are very emotional and well handled. With anyone else in the part, these episodes would perhaps be boring or something ridiculous.

Garbo's main idea seems to be that she must grow tired of her lovers before they grow tired of her. However, with Montgomery things are different. She is the one who is in love, while his affections for her are not so strong. He does not approve of her mode of living nor her former lovers. It is only her physical attraction that brings him back to her after many disagreements.

Through an arrangement made by his family, Montgomery becomes engaged to a former childhood playmate and tells Garbo he is going to marry this girl. Garbo gets him to admit to her that he really loves her and not the woman he is going to marry, and immediately turns him down for a former lover who has been in prison. Montgomery is then left free to do as his family wishes.

Director Clarence Brown has handled the story and players in a capable manner and the result is a box-office picture. Marjorie Rambeau, Judith Vosselli, Joan Marsh, Beryl Mercer and John Miljan do splendid work.

Comedy is sadly neglected and will be needed to round out the program.

The German press reports a proposition submitted by the editor of an Oslo daily, whereby the three Scandinavian national theatres in Oslo, Kopenhagen and Stockholm would join forces in the combined production of Scandinavian talkers. The suggestion follows the recent banning of Norwegian legitimate actors from appearing in talking films. The same editor expresses the opinion that American made talking pictures should be barred from Scandinavia when they feature native artists.

Osso Films of France will make future productions in French and German versions. The latter have already been sold, it is understood.

Following the personal recommendation of Premier Mussolini, Commendatore Pittaluga, Italian film leader, has been named Grande Ufficiale of the Order of the Crown of Italy by Royal Decree.

German dialogue films are to be restricted in Alsace-Lorraine. The French authorities recently issued new regulations governing the exhibition of German pictures. As a result all films must bear super-imposed French subtitles every 10 meters. Failure to comply will result in barring of the picture from exhibition.

The trade press insists, however, that the cost of placing these titles will amount to automatic prohibition of the showing of the pictures. The regulations are expected to meet with great opposition, since it is understood that the German talkers have captured this section of the French market. The suggestion that features should be shown in both versions alternately has been tried, apparently with considerable success.

RESOLUTIONS!

WELL, here we are right in the midst of the resolution period . . . when most showmen make a bargain with themselves to do . . . and not to do . . . many different things . . . so we may be pardoned if we poke a little fun at the boys . . . in general . . . and remind them that it's a great time to make resolutions . . . and then carry those resolutions out to a proper conclusion. . . .

. . . The map of showbusiness has been greatly altered since old man time passed out at midnight in 1929 . . . to make room for kid Cupid the first of 1930 . . . and . . . if we can believe in signs . . . the alteration process is going to remain in force a while longer. . . .

. . . What better time is there to take stock of yourself and see if you are found lacking in any of the essentials necessary before one can call oneself a showman . . . if you are honest you will soon find it easy to list quite a few points where you might have been . . . and could be . . . a lot more efficient than you have . . . but don't let those shortcomings keep you in a rut . . . just recall them long enough to resolve that they will be conspicuous by their absence a year from today when stock-taking again is in vogue. . .

. . . Have you been true to your trust? . . . Did you play "hookey" on the boss very often last year? . . . Were you careless in the spending of the theatre's money? . . . Did you do your damndest to make your theatre a profitable one? . . .

. . . They tell us that chain theatre operation is still in the process of remodeling . . . and that should be good news because it ought to afford many a manager the opportunity of climbing up the ladder a rung or two . . . stands to reason that if the chains are finally convinced that seasoned showmen are necessary to handle the better jobs they are going to pick the men from the ranks . . . and we know they won't go wrong if they do. . . .

. . . Then again . . . providing you make a couple of non-skid resolutions . . . you ought to be able to rate a salary increase break by reason of better business and better run theatres . . . as my friend Eddie Hitchcock would say . . . "it's in the bag" . . . but it won't just happen all by its lonesome . . . those are just accidents . . . to get somewhere in this racket . . . well . . . you've just got to deliver the goods . . . so remember that when you're making those resolutions and taking stock . . . but if I'm all wrong . . . just pardon the interruption and let me say . . . I thank you . . . and a Happy New Year . . .

"Chick."

Thompson Used Tooth Paste When Spelling Amos 'N' Andy Names

With Amos 'n' Andy being featured by Pepsodent it was a certainty that showmen play-the comedians' first flicker, "Check And Double Check," would endeavor to tie up every store in town selling the dentifrice. So it is small wonder that T. W. Thompson, manager of the Avalon Theatre in Grand Junction, Colo., took advantage of this medium to good results.

The tie-up resulted in a guessing contest for guest tickets. A large piece of mat board was placed in the window with Amos 'n' Andy spelled out in pepsodent toothpaste. The idea of the contest was to estimate how many inches of Pepsodent was used in spelling the words. It was done in script to make it more difficult as evidenced by no one correctly listing the right number of inches. However, ten pairs of guest tickets were given to the ten nearest correct. The contest provided a lot of amusement as well as being a popular stunt. It also helped to focus attention on the popular radio pair in their first all-talking picture palying at the local theatre.

Prompted by the publicity that the picture would create during its engagement at the Avalon, an ice cream company voluntarily asked for title cuts and heads of Amos 'n' Andy to use in their newspaper ads. The ice cream company ran three-column ads and gave the picture some dandy plugs as well as advertising their special Amos 'n' Andy sundae.

The Fresh Air Taxicab was also used on the streets at the noon hour. This dilapidated looking vehicle was lettered with copy relative to the picture, stars, theatre and playdates.

Driven about the various sections of Grand Junction it enticed many comments from the city residents, so much so that the selling power of the campaign was aided considerably. We'd like to hear what else Mr. Thompson is doing along the showline in his city, and we hope he will favor us soon with some more accounts.

Porte Featured a Group of Co-op Heralds That Clicked

In an effort to publicize his house at small cost to himself, Jack Porte, assistant manager of the Avalon Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., turned out some co-operative heralds recently that accomplished his objective and at the same time secured a lot of good-will which no doubt will come in handy in the near future when similar stunts are pulled.

A tie-up with a cafeteria in the vicinity of the Midwood Theatre, one of the houses on the same chain of the Avalon, netted him some good publicity for that house. The herald, which was paid for by the merchant, plugged "Grumpy" and the sandwiches which the cafeteria featured in addition to their regular menu. Another tie-up netted Porte a herald from a beauty parlor. This herald plugged "Let Us Be Gay" and the copy, which was well written, tied up the picture and the shop in one, two, three fashion. It is always necessary, when effecting tie-ups of this sort, to keep your copy toned so that it will help the dealer as well as yourself. Porte accomplished this satisfying the dealers and gaining their good-will.

The last herald that we have on hand is one that was created to plug the recent "Happiness Week" that the circuit featured. This herald, made possible through a tie-up with a shoe store, contained a cut of a picture which had been purposely drawn up so that it contained many mistakes. Readers of the heralds were invited to list the mistakes, send them to the shoe dealers, and the ones submitting the greatest number listed were given free tickets to the theatre. The heralds carried the film program for "Happiness Week," and also included a number of coming attractions. As each one of these heralds clicked, it leads us to believe that Porte has studied local conditions pretty thoroughly. In view of this, Porte, how about sending us in some more of your work so that we can look at it and pass along any items of value it may contain.

The Century Bonus Feast!

A peppy bunch of go-getters best describes the group of showmen pictured in the photo. The occasion was the managers' dinner and bonus party held in New York City recently, by the Century Circuit, Inc., of which organization A. H. Schwartz, founder of the chain and one of the foremost independent exhibitors in the country, is the executive manager. Arthur Abeles is General Manager of the chain, with Edward L. Hyman, well-known showman, looking after theatrical operation. See if you can pick out the many Round Table members in the photo. And don't miss Larry Cowan, the live-wire publicity director

Masquerade Party Clicked For Sproul At West Coast House

With a comic picture like "Animal Crackers" to sell, and the playdates including his Saturday matinee show at which many kids are ordinarily in attendance, was one of the reasons why Norman Sproul, manager of the Fox West Coast Theatre in Santa Ana, Cal., decided to stage a comic stunt in the form of a masquerade party.

We have given complete details of these masquerade parties on our pages before, so we won't attempt to set them forth again. But for those members who might be interested in learning a little about them we'd like to state that the gag consists of offering prizes to kids wearing the most grotesque costumes to the theatre. The kids pay the regular juvenile admission price to enter the house. Those wearing the comic suits are permitted to take part in the contest, held on the stage. The juvenile audience acts as judge, the greatest applause for a certain party giving him the prize. This stunt went over very well for Sproul and his house was jammed with kids eager to enter.

Should you decide that you'd like to try a stunt of this sort we are sure, that if properly handled, it will go over very well. Give it plenty of advance publicity, and if possible, feature it with a comedy show. The kids can also display any talent along the acting line that they happen to possess. Thanks, Norman. Let's have some more.

Water Tower Called Into Play To Plug Dollison's Serial

When a showman will send a group of his activities with his membership application, it generally means to us that the said showman is going to take an active part in the Club's affairs. So we want to introduce you to Lester Dollison, manager of the Big Theatre in Wink, Texas, and some of his work.

During a recent football contest held in the town, Dollison grabbed off a flock of publicity for his house and the film "Animal Crackers" by having four boys, mounted on horseback, parade about the field during the halfs. In single file, the first horseman threw handfuls of animal crackers, encased in oiled envelopes, to the crowds. The second and third horsemen pranced about doing crazy antics, one boy playing an accordion, the other doing stunts. The fourth horseman carried a banner plugging the film. The gag went over very well with the spectators and they more than gobbled up the animal crackers.

But that's only one of Dollison's activities. You can get a look at another by viewing the cut we are showing of the novel idea he used in plugging a serial by means of a water tower. Atop the tower he placed the plug, "The Indians Are Coming," also the theatre name and playdates. This plug is to remain all during the series. Another gag that he pulled on the opening of the picture was to invite all ladies and children to the theatre, where they were to be his guests at the opening chapter. As the first chapter was shown on Friday, he made arrangements with the schools to permit the kids to get off early and witness the film. His selling on this serial to date bids fair to hold up right through the entire run.

A stunt that has appeared on our pages a number of times—and used recently by Dollison—is the ambulance gag. On this occasion—the night of the preview of "Animal Crackers"—it was arranged that a man should do a fake faint during the trailer. The stunt went over very well, the ambulance tearing down the street when the town was most active, coming to a halt at the theatre, where huge crowds gathered—as the photo shows—and taking away the man. Dollison may be partly seen carrying the banner explaining the gag. The copy reads: THIS MAN LAUGHED HIMSELF SICK, AFTER SEEING A FEW SCENES FROM "ANIMAL CRACKERS" (preview time). The crowd certainly enjoyed itself when it got wise to the gag. It is said that the stunt helped a lot toward putting the picture across to good receipts.

We want to thank Mr. Dollison for passing these along to us, and we hope that we will hear from him again in the very near future. And when you send in your next contribution, Lester, give us a photo and a little dope on yourself. Will you? You might also convey our regards to your fellow managers of the Griffith Amusement Company and tell them that we'd like to hear from them regarding their work.

Schmadeka Gives Us A Few Slants That Are of Fine Value

Exploitation manager of the Liberty Theatre in Lewiston, Idaho, for the past six years is the record held by Ed. C. Schmadeka, who applies for admission to the Round Table Club.

"This little city of Lewiston, Idaho," says Ed., "has about 9,000 population, while across the Snake River, just about a quarter of a mile, is Clarkston, Wash., a city of about 7,000 population, which has no theatre. Five miles up the river is Asetin, Wash., just a small place. On this side is the Lewiston Orchards, with a population of three or four thousand, all of which we draw from."

The above sums up the situation in this new member's territory.

And now, how about his activity? Well, that's easily answered. First of all, we'd like you to look at the little cut we are showing of one of the ads on "Hell's Angels." By the utilization of this ad, Ed. has found a way to make the press book do some work. (Not that press books don't do work—oh, no!). All of those so wonderful newspaper stories that are made up for insertion in newspapers throughout the country have at last been put to a decent use and a use which insures their being read, despite the fact that they came out of a press book. Ed. had to pay for this idea, but we believe it to be of immeasurable value. The slug plugging the title was carried on all the ads of this type. The ads were run daily and their size ranged from four to six inches on two columns. The material for the stories, as you will notice, was taken from the press books. If he wished, Ed. could also localize his copy—a very valuable angle. A careful study of this stunt may show you how it can be used in your town. Give us your reaction on it.

Along with this story we are showing a lay-out of the ad campaign for the picture. We could not get in the whole group that we have on hand, as the campaign ran for something like 16 days, but we are trying to show what we believe will be best suited to your needs. Look this over and see what you can use.

Ed. was also kind enough to send us in a couple of pencil sketches (yes, he's a real artist as well as exploitation man) of the knockout airplane front that was constructed during the run of the picture. We hope to reproduce this sketch in a future issue, as it will take a little time before we can prepare it for reproduction. Watch for it. It has the goods. Well, Ed., when you show activity such as you are displaying, we have a hunch that you are going to be a pretty active member. Let's have a photo of yourself when you send in your next contribution, so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Parker's Ace Tie-Up Was First Stunt Of Managerial Position

His promotion from Assistant Manager of the Warner Theatre in Lynn, Mass., to the managership of the Commodore Hull Theatre in Derby, Conn., meant that Jerry A. Parker, former assistant to Johnny Scanlon, would have an opportunity to display a load of the showmanship that Scanlon taught him in Lynn.

And so we find him filling the berth vacated by Charles A. Oakley, who was transferred to Danbury. One of the first stunts that Parker used was in conjunction with his selling of "Her Wedding Night," the most recent Clara Bow film. An advantageous tie-up was secured with a local dealer. The dealer agreed to furnish the theatre with ten, solid gold wedding rings. The rings were given away as part of an advance stunt.

A quantity of pay envelopes were printed up with copy stating that inside the envelopes would be found an imitation of the ring worn by Clara Bow while filming the picture. A ring was inserted in each envelope. The herald envelopes were all numbered, a note stating that if the number on the envelope corresponded with numbers on a board in the window of the jewelry store, the bearer would be entitled to one of the wedding rings. The herald carried a plug for the theatre and the jeweler.

When the stunt made its first appearance it was met with great enthusiasm, and judging from the expressions of satisfaction that the jeweler and Parker registered after playdates, the stunt was undoubtedly a success. Incidentally, a study of the photo we are showing will give you a line of the way the jeweler co-operated. He devoted all of the space in his window to the tie-up. And when you can grab windows like this right after coming into a town, it means something. Keep up the good work Jerry, and let's have some more of it in the very near future. We also want to wish you lots of luck and extend our congratulations on your new assignment.

P. Kunze Engineered A Couple Of Special Stunts In Stoughton

Another community tie-up that netted him plenty of publicity, good-will and additional business was engineered recently by Paul W. Kunze, manager of the State Theatre in Stoughton, Mass., on his "Stoughton Merchants' Week"—a variation of the "Buy in Town" gag—and "Merchants' Night," run at the theatre.

Forty or so merchants co-operated in the stunt, the local newspaper also getting behind it. The entire town was decorated for the celebration of the special week, the flags, bunting, etc., being paid for by the merchants. Each merchant co-operating in the affair contributed $10 in merchandise, passed out free tickets entitling bearers to participate in the merchandise donations, and also contributed a small sum for the decorations, as stated above.

For the special "Merchants' Week" all stores put on bargains, uniform price tags, contributed by the local newspaper being used. The paper got solidly behind the idea and printed up an eight-page section, carrying ads and specials, that was distributed throughout Stoughton and the surrounding towns. The out-of-town circulation resulted in a great deal of additional business for the stores from out-of-town buyers. The newspaper paid for distribution of the special sections. The "Merchants' Week" went over to great results, every possible angle being covered, the angles including trailer plugs, house organ's notes, and cards in dealers' windows and lobby of the theatre.

The "Merchants' Night" at the theatre went off equally as well. A local celebrity, one "Jimmie" Hayden, presided at the drawing, acting in the dual capacity of judge and master of ceremonies. It is interesting to note that his job was well carried out, the newspaper carrying a notice next day to the effect that the job was handled well nigh perfect. Tickets, which were given to persons by local dealers and the theatre, irrespective whether purchases were made, were drawn from a box, corresponding numbers rating prizes. Space was left on the coupons for names and addresses, these to be used on future mailing list campaigns. Persons had to be in theatre to obtain prizes.

Kunze passes this stunt along to us in the event that any of the Club members can find a spot for it.

PERSONAL PUBLICITY

By MARCUS GRIFFIN
Of the "N. Y. Sunday Enquirer"

During the eight years the writer has acted as either dramatic editor, critic or columnist it has been impressed upon us through the medium of publicity, trade papers, house organs, or other media coming to our desk, that in the theatrical business an individual matters little. It's the attraction that counts, according to the best accepted authorities, credited with knowing about such things.

We've often wondered whether theatre chains' attitude toward personal publicity for executives and house managers is justified, and at times we've given considerable thought to the matter, and made no few observations on the subject.

We've come to the conclusion that in many cases personal publicity is to be encouraged. In some communities, such as Jersey City, New Jersey, Staten Island, New York, and small western towns, where at times there are only two theatres, in competition, personal acquaintanceship of a theatre manager is a big factor in attracting patronage to his house. Certainly if personal contacts and wide acquaintanceship are so essential in the ordinary trade marts the same requisites should be desired in the theatrical business.

We have often wondered whether a theatre chain's attitude toward personal publicity for executives and house managers is justifiable, and at times we've given considerable thought to the matter, and made no few observations on the subject. We've come to the conclusion, since the fields are so different, that in many cases personal publicity, if not of the stage, is to be encouraged. Let us consider the angle.

The scene was the Byliners' Club roams in the Dixie Hotel, New York, and the time was just before lunch. The discussion concerned the value of personal publicity as applied to good-will and business building. Somehow or other some one brought the hotel racket inta this theatre argument. It was argued, pro and con (mostly con), until Marcus Griffin of the New York Sunday Enquirer offered concrete evidence that there is a similarity in the business of catering to hotel guests and catering to theatre patrons. So we elected him to put it in writing, binding ourselves to no less a penalty than that of printing what he wrote. Here it is. If you like what he writes and the way he writes, tell us and we'll make him came across with some more. If you don't like it, just say so and he'll have one hell of a time crashing into these columns again.

"CHICK"

Community Asset

In communities throughout the country, communities such as are dotted throughout New Jersey, Long Island, New York, Staten Island, N. Y., and parts of Brooklyn, N. Y., where may be found only one or two theatres in the majority of cases, two—the competition offered encourages the theatre manager to make the personal acquaintanceship of many of the residents in the community, thus cementing himself firmly with them, and insuring their future patronage. As may be noted, this angle is in every respect similar to the personal contacts effected by merchants dealing in provisions, poultry, clothing, etc. The showman, in short, is and must be, a shrewd merchant, building not only for today, but for tomorrow as well. His war cry must be: "A satisfied customer always comes back." And now for a real life example.

Operating in various theatres throughout the country are men like Monty Salmon, Dave Whyte, Hal Sheridan, Jack Keale and others too numerous to mention. Through their happy faculty of securing and retaining the many friendships that they make wherever they go, they have become invaluable assets to the companies employing them. Let us suppose that a town, in which one of these men operates, supports two houses. We'll pretend that the house at which our friend is located does not present as late releases as the competitive theatre. Mr. and Mrs. Townsfolk decided to go to the theatre. The question arises: "Where shall we go?" It is their intention to be entertained, therefore, if both houses are playing pictures that appeal to them, they are puzzled. But a solution is reached when Mrs. Townsfolk says, "Let's go down to Mr. Jones' theatre. He's the pleasant man we met at the community dance last week." Get the idea? It's the personality that sold them. And if it will sell them once, it's a cinch to repeat, not only with Mr. and Mrs. Townsfolk, but with the whole community.

Having shown now the value of personal publicity as applied to the theatre man and his community or neighborhood house, and having seen its effectiveness we come to the sad part of the whole affair. Theatre chains, as a rule, try to discourage this practice of personal publicity. Why? The biggest companies in the world exploit their men. Madison Square Garden, Standard Oil,, Hearst Newspapers, Gulf Refining Corp., Curtis Publishing Company, National Broadcasting Company, Atwater Kent Radio Corp., Transcontinental Air Transportation Corp., Edison Experimental Laboratories, New York Life Insurance Co., New York's Empire State Building—all are but a small part of the billions of dollars represented by various personalities. These organizations have always, in some shape or form, identified themselves with personalities, and, in most cases, not a little prestige and publicity has been gained through public interest in their activities. The names of William Carey and Col. Hammond, Andrew Mellon, the Rockefellers, William Randolph Hearst, Cyrus Curtis, Milton Aylesworth, A. Atwater Kent, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Thos. A. Edison, Darwin P. Kingsley, Calvin Coolidge and Alfred E. Smith have all borne the smudge of printers' ink that tied them close to the public, creating an intimate relationship with the people, a relationship that has "humanized" them to the public, taken them from pedestals—or better still, kept them from pedestals—and placed and stamped them as the public's own—something to be talked about.

It Aided Those Folks

If the national figures cited above have aided, through their individualities, their respective companies, through their constant appearance in the limelight of public favor, is it possible for Joe McGuire and his dinky little theatre to also bask in public welcome? Yes! But in Joe's particular little world! The king reigns supreme in his own kingdom! In other words, Joe can, and should be, king in his own neighborhood. And now let's show how the principle holds true in any business or profession. For something different, we'll take the hotel racket.

As our first example, we'll take the Cadillac Hotel of New York City. One of the city's oldest establishments, it still does a comfortable business due to the personal contact, connections, and publicity its Managing Director, J. H. Kenny enjoys. Yet the Cadillac isn't the best hotel in New York by any means.

A second and more recent example is the Hotel Dixie, Times Square's newest hotel. Opening a hotel from scratch, without tenants or guests is always a problem. The hotel must be filled and kept that way. Of course, the desirable guests are those who pay. When a new hotel is opened it is usually papered with advertising due bills, and while this practice isn't so profitable, yet it serves as a publicity medium until the hostelry is established. Most hotel owners consider themselves fortunate if their investment shows a profit inside a year's time.

They Follow the Man

Instead of the usual fanfare of publicity, and advertising due bills, the Hotel Dixie, under the direction of J. M. Tait, veteran hotel man, despite the fact he is still in his early forties, quietly threw open its doors to the public, ready for business. That was in June, and when this was being written, the latter part of November, the hotel was making a neat profit, thank you. Or rather you can thank Mister Tait.

Some time before the Hotel Dixie was completed, Tait informed all his contacts—which form the incredible number of some ten thousand, garnered through his years in the hotel business—that he had become identified with the Gregory Taylor Chain of Hotels and would be Managing Director of the new Hotel Dixie, when it opened in June. These contacts, ranging from the ordinary traveling salesmen, making yearly New York trips to sales managers of organizations like the Philco Co., a concern that holds conventions and has salesmen visiting New York constantly, knew Tait, and his hotel methods through past associations and many automatically switched their patronage to the Dixie. Tait, himself, is first of all a showman, and must understand the particular tastes of his public, and tastes are different in every community. He's king of his kingdom!

Personal Contact

Only by personal contact, and personal publicity can house managers, and hotel managers expect to perform feats out of the ordinary. After all, the theatre owner's sole idea is profit and if a theatre manager in Gilroy, Calif., St. George, Staten Island, or Jersey City, New Jersey, can run a theatre profitably due to his contacts, personal publicity and somewhat limited fame he might secure in a community, what's the odds? Why should circuits protest?

If it doesn't harm Coolidge's worth to a concern, it certainly can't be a detriment to the house manager in Wheaton, Illinois.

Editor's note: The question of personal publicity has long been a controversy in show-business. There are many who claim it is the most important asset a theatre can possess. But others, especially in the chain home offices, insist that it should be avoided.

What we would like to know is: What do YOU think of it? Can you sit down and write us a few lines setting forth the value or dangers of "personal publicity" in your own community? Can you analyze the subject so as to prove your own contention that it should, or should not, be used?

The Club pages will gladly carry your views. Send them along and leave the rest to us.

A 'Border' Angle!

So many of Frank Hill's ads have appeared on our pages that we think it would be useless to describe these new ones of his. If by now you don't know that Frank is one of the best ad men in his section of the country, you'll have to study this new layout that we are presenting. As a matter of fact, it won't hurt you to study them anyway. Frank is always on the look-out for new angles to use in conjunction with his newspaper ads and we are sure that he will appreciate any criticisms or suggestions forwarded to him at the Inland Theatre, Inc., in Walla Walla, Washington. He especially wants to know how the Club likes the new borders he uses on the ads. The border mats are secured from a newspaper service. Don't hide away! If you've comments of any kind to make on Frank's work, let him have them. Or if you have any questions on advertising that are puzzling you, he may help you solve them. Drop him a line. And, oh yes, we would like to announce that the reason for Frank's non-appearance on the Club pages for some time lies in the fact that there has been much activity on the Mercy Circuit, which means plenty of work for friend Hill, Sr. In case you don't know it, Hill's many duties keep him pretty much on the jump.

W. H. WHYTE says:

". . . let me congratulate you for your publication of the Six Months' Club Index. I think it is a marvelous thing for any manager to pick out any form of stunt or gag at an instant, such as you have them listed in your index. There can be no reason for any of us sitting around wondering what to do next with all this information before us.

Manager, Capitol Theatre,
Riverhead, Long Island, N. Y.

Recipe For A Happy New Year

Take twelve fine, full-grown months; make certain they are free from all memories of envy, bitterness, hate and jealousy; cleanse from them every clinging spite; pick off all bits of pettiness and littleness; in short, see that these months are freed from the past—have them as fresh and clean as when they first came from the storehouse of Time.

Cut these months into thirty or thirty-one equal parts. This batch will keep for just one year. Do not attempt to make up the whole batch at one time (so many persons spoil the entire lot in this way), but prepare one day at a time, as follows:

Into each day put twelve parts of faith, eleven parts of patience, ten of courage, nine of work (some people omit this ingredient and so spoil the flavor of the rest), eight of hope, seven of fidelity, six of liberality, five of kindness, four of rest (leaving this out is like leaving the oil out of salad—don't do it), three of prayer, two of meditation, and one well selected resolution. If you have no conscientious scruples, put in a teaspoonful of good spirits, a dash of fun, a pinch of folly, a sprinkling of play, and a heaping cupful of good humor.

Pour into the whole love, add libitum and mix with a vim. Cook thoroughly in a fervent heat; garnish with a few smiles and a sprig of joy; then serve with quietness, unselfishness, and a Happy New Year is a certainty.

Animated Display Worden Constructed Set Town Talking

An animated display that had them talking for days up in Cortland, New York, was the one that A. E. Worden, resident manager of the Cortland and Temple theatres turned out to plug "Africa Speaks." Since he felt that a display on the marquee would attract more than ordinary notice, Worden arranged to construct his unique display there. We are showing a couple of photos of it, but since they did not come out very plain, we feel that an explanation will be necessary.

One of the scenes in "Africa Speaks"—and one that also appears in the trailer—shows a native being knocked down by a lion. This was the scene that Worden decided to feature in his display. A huge scene, made of cut-out was affixed to the top of the marquee. The scene showed the African veldt. Cat-o-Nine tails were used for grass. An opening was left behind the grass for a lion, made of compoboard to leap out. A cut-out of an African native was placed a few feet away from the grass. When the machine was in motion, the lion would spring out—apparently from behind the grass—and leap onto the startled native, knocking him down. The lion then traveled along on a ground belt and returned to the starting point, again repeating the action. The native, after being knocked down, would automatically arise as the lion disappeared.

It proved to be one of the best displays that the theatre had ever featured. We are sure that a note dropped to Mr. Worden, requesting any information would be productive of the desired information. Right, "A. E."?

Making Use Of The Space Over Exits In Lobby Is Important

A great many showmen pay especial attention to the space over their exit doors, in the inner lobby, and use it to plug coming attractions, but we have found, in many instances, that this space as a rule will always carry the same kind of copy and art design plan week after week. It is often well to try and arrange a flash in this space on any big picture that you are trying to sell. To show you what we are driving at, look at the ace way that G. Gilliam, manager of the Loew's Stillman Theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, plugs his coming attractions.

The display that we are showing here was used as a coming attraction plug for "The Big House." Against a background of black velour, two cut-out heads of Wallace Beery were placed. You will note the small amount of copy used on this stunt. Its simplicity helped it pack an excellent punch. You will also note in the photograph that Gilliam is well enough versed on showmanship to put his frames directly under the flash, so that the persons reading the above title would immediately allow their glance to rest on any other copy plugging the picture. The displays all carried a prison tone.

It might be profitable for you to use a gag of this sort once in a while. It is a change from the ordinary.

Jonasson Made Use Of Campaign Stunt As Part of Selling

Another showman quick to take advantage of the idea of circulating a bill—this time a "fiver" instead of a one—as a campaign stunt for Paramount-Publix Prosperity Week was R. L. (Bob) Jonasson, manager of the Mayfair Theatre in Asbury Park, N. J.

Prior to the coming of Prosperity Week, Jonasson started a "Prosperity Fiver" on its way—the Chamber of Commerce and the Asbury Park Press co-operating. The Press sold a full page co-operative ad to the merchants. The large amount of space in the center of the page was given the theatre for the purpose of advertising its current attraction—and additional space was devoted to an explanation of the "Prosperity Fiver."

At the end of the Paramount Prosperity Week, the newspaper prevailed upon the merchants to go in for a second co-operative page, selling the following attraction at the Mayfair Theatre. Additional space in the center of the page was devoted to the progress of the five dollar bill during the past week.

In this way Jonasson succeeded in getting two full pages out of this stunt, rather than the usual one, thereby selling an institutional feature as well as his attraction for two consecutive weeks.

Which, you will no doubt agree, is showmanship. And we'd like to see some more of your work, Bob.

H. Marchand Used Many Angles To Sell His Prosperity Week

As is his usual custom, Harry Marchand uncorked a bunch of stunts to sell the recent Paramount-Publix Prosperity Week at the Saenger Theatre in Mobile, Ala., when his house was observing the circuit dictum. He was aided, as usual, by numerous and valuable tie-ups.

A contest was planted in the want-ad section of one of the local papers five days in advance and on opening day of Prosperity Week, a co-operative page appeared with the merchants defraying the expense.

Front-page readers appeared daily throughout the week re the 'Week' in both local papers. The articles always mentioned the name of theatre and attraction that was playing there.

Six hundred bulletins were sent out by the Retail Credit Men's Association to their membership. These bulletins contained a special paragraph about Paramount-Publix Prosperity Week and urged all merchants to think in terms of better business and prosperous times. Speakers also appeared at civic clubs, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Lion's Club and Rotary Club. All speeches made some reference to the theatre and the attractions playing there during the week.

With this ace line-up of stunts there was no question but that the film would go over very well, so it was not at all surprising to Marchand when he checked up to find that he had again clicked. Continue the good work, Harry, and let's hear from you again.

THESE MEN WILL HAVE A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

GEORGE SMITH is located at the Capitol Theatre in Somerville, Mass., and, according to Eddie Fain, who proposed him for membership, he is holding up the managerial end very well. With so many New England showmen on our rolls, George, you will have to do some fast stepping to keep up with them. But you should be able to do it. Let's hear from you on the subject.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DONALD SMART is the manager of the Crescent Garden Theatre in Revere, Mass. He is located in the same town as Erwin Newman, who, too, has just hooked up with our showman organization. Let's have a little friendly competition, Donald, to see who among the showmen in the town is most active. And say, send us in a photo of yourself and the rest of your brother showmen too, will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

C. HAMILTON FRANKLIN manages the Cameo Theatre in Baltimore, Md. The town of Baltimore has been featured on our pages quite a bit recently, but we don't recall seeing Mr. Franklin. That can be remedied, though, Mr. Franklin, by becoming a real active member and stepping along with the rest of the alert showmen. What do you say?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

CLYDE J. ROWE manages the Gem Theatre in New York City. The Gem is a pretty little house located in a rather busy section of the metropolis. We have an idea that Mr. Rowe does some pretty good work along the show-selling line and we'd like to hear about some of it. Let's have a little dope, Clyde.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ERNEST McLEOD manages the Arlington Theatre in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. Mr. McLeod is also proposed for membership by Howard Waugh, so that we feel he must have the goods along the show angle. We would appreciate your keeping us posted on the show developments around your district, Ernest, and we'd also like a photo of you.

THEY'RE HEADED THE RIGHT WAY!

ALVIN HOSTLER is another showman who needs no introduction on these pages. Mr. Hostler's work has been on display for quite some time, so we are sure that regular followers of the Round Table know what he can do. However, it is a "time honored" custom for all showmen to hit this page at some time, sooner or later. Now that you are all set, Alvin, continue the good work you have been turning out.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ED. C. SCHMADEKA, exploitation manager of the Liberty Theatre, Lewiston, Idaho, is a live-wire. We make this statement in the full assurance that Ed can back it up, because the work he has passed along to us and that we will shortly present on the Club pages proves it. The only thing that Ed didn't send along was a photo of himself, so we hope that when his next contribution comes our way, we will find that it contains a photo.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

LLOYD V. LIGHTHOUSE manages the Kenmore Theatre in Kenmore, New York. His work at the house, thus far, has shown Mr. Lighthouse to be a very capable showman, and it is said that his knowledge of the tastes of the local public is such that he can sell them his shows week after week. We think that Mr. Lighthouse will give us a little dope on his show-selling activities in his next letter, and we'd also like to find a photo of himself along with it. What do you say, Lloyd?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WILLIAM H. MOORE is the manager of the Belnord Theatre in Baltimore, Md. He is handling a nice little house in a section of the city that permits him to do some good show-selling. It has been some time since we have visited Baltimore but we hope that when next we hit the town to stop in and make the acquaintance of Mr. Moore. In the meantime, Will, keep us posted on what you are doing.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

SYLVESTER GUNN is the Assistant Manager of the Capitol Theatre in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. Mr. Gunn is recommended for membership in the Round Table Club by Howard Waugh. We'd like to say, Sylvester, that if you keep your eye on this Waugh man for a while you'll pick up a lot of points on showmanship. But anyway, let's have some of your recent work so that we can see what you are doing to help sell shows at the Capitol.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

CHARLES J. PASSAFUME is publicity manager of the Isis Theatre in Kokomo, Indiana. We have seen some of the showmanship turned out in Kokomo and we can say that the showmen in that town are right up among the leaders of Indiana, and, if you recall, we featured a few stories not so long ago on the various types of campaigns engineered. Listen, Charles, send us a photo of yourself with your next contribution, and also send us some dope on the show situation in your district.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GILBERT M. DANIELS is the Assistant Manager of the Ritz Theatre in San Bernardino, Calif. He is proposed for membership in the Club by Wally Butler, manager of the house, and according to the send-off given him, Gilbert is right there with a flock of up and coming showmanship. Well, Gilbert, seeing is believing, you know. So let's have a line on some of your work.

WILLIAM KASTAR is the manager of the Fox Maspeth Theatre in Maspeth, Long Island, N. Y. Mr. Kastar is proposed for membership in the Club by our active showman-friend Irving Feinman. We recall being out around the Maspeth not so long ago, but time wouldn't permit us to stop in and see who was handling the house. However, Bill, we hope to have the pleasure one of these days. In the meantime, how about sending us a photo of yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

J. CLAYTON TUNSTILL is no stranger to the Club pages. His work has appeared on our pages before, but this is the first opportunity we have had to present him here. He is the manager of the Lyric Theatre in Brownwood, Texas, and, from what we understand, he is a pretty popular manager. Listen, Clayton, we've never run a photo of you. How about giving us the opportunity?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

I. J. COHEN manages the Grand Victory Theatre in Detroit, Mich., out where showmanship is frequently displayed. We have been in Detroit any number of times but have never stopped at the Grand Victory so we can't say a word or two on the local situation. However, Mr. Cohen, you can wise us up on it in your next contribution. Give us the dope on how you bring them up to the box-office and we'll pass it along to the rest of the Club.

Educational Pictures

THE press—trade papers, fan magazines, newspapers—acknowledge the new position of the short feature.

"Have you noticed how strong a foothold shorts are assuming in the theatres?" queries one editor.

And have you noticed how the battalion of super short subjects under the Educational Pictures banner has led the procession?

Never has competition in short subjects been more widespread. Yet never have Educational Pictures marched to the close of a year more triumphantly acknowledged as the leaders of their special field.
